If the facts are substantially changed by an appropriate judicial procedure, the doctrine of the law of the case is not to be enforced.—U. S. v. Davis, D.C.N.Y., 3 F.Supp. 97.

Distribution of estate

A ruling of law by an orphans court in dealing with the distributor of a portion of an estate is not binding upon a subsequent adjudication relating to another portion of the estate; and, although error committed with regard to one fund

the same parties and subject matter,⁴¹ and not as against parties who had no notice or opportunity to be heard at the time the decision was rendered.⁴²

Final or interlocutory order. The doctrine of the law of the case applies to an order or ruling which finally determines a substantial right.⁴³ It has been held that the law of the case as made by an interlocutory decision or order remains the same except in so far as the facts are changed by evidence on the final hearing;⁴⁴ but ordinarily an interlocutory order which merely decides some point or matter essential to the progress of the cause, collateral to the issues in the case, is not binding as the law of the case, and may be reconsidered and corrected by the court before entering a final order on the merits.⁴⁵

State and federal courts. The doctrine of the law of the case in its customary sense does not run from state to federal jurisdiction or vice versa;⁴⁶ but it has been held that a federal decree, which has become final by affirmance by the supreme court of the United States, becomes the fixed

Manner of invoking rule. A former decision, as the law of the case, may be invoked by an oral motion based on an inspection of the record, without further pleading.⁴⁸

c. Particular Applications of Rule

The doctrine of the law of the case has been applied to many particular questions, and to many and various situations.

The doctrine of the law of the case has been applied to decisions with respect to: The jurisdiction of the court⁴⁹ and venue;⁵⁰ the construction and validity of a written instrument;⁵¹ the statute of limitations;⁵² and the admissibility⁵³ and weight and sufficiency⁵⁴ of the evidence. It has been held not to apply to a decision of a state supreme court involving the construction of the federal constitution or a federal statute.⁵⁵

Rulings on pleadings in general. In accordance with the foregoing general rule, stated in subdivision b of this section, a decision or ruling on a question of pleading generally becomes binding as the law of the case on such question,⁵⁶ except where

Change as to sufficiency

The trial court has a right to change its mind as to the sufficiency of the evidence for the jury in ruling on motion for a new trial, even though it had previously ruled the other way.—Snyder v. Guthrie, 187

N.W. 953, 193 Iowa 624, 24 A.L.R. 950.

Probative force of letter

Where letter, allegedly written on day that written trust agreement was made, was admitted over objection, and motion to strike out was denied, and court's attention was directed to claim that trust agreement was integrated in writing as matter of law, admission of letter does not preclude the court from subsequently finding that letter could not be given probative force.—Robertson v. it involves different facts or conditions.⁵⁷ An amendment to a pleading does not open it to new rulings on identical questions previously adjudicated in the same case.⁵⁸ An adjudication of matters in issue on a plea in abatement has been held not to be the law of the case as to such matters on the trial of the principal cause on the merits,⁵⁹ but there is authority to the contrary.⁶⁰

Ruling on demurrer. A ruling on demurrer or exception is not, as a rule, regarded as binding on the court in the subsequent course of the litigation,⁶¹ and, as explained in the C.J.S. title Pleading § 268, also 49 C.J. p 453 note 41-p 454 note 69, the court may at any time before final judgment reconsider its ruling and make other appropriate orders or decisions. Bill of particulars

On motion for further bill of particulars, court cannot base refusal on sufficiency of pleading, which would virtually set aside previous order, unappealed from, requiring a bill of certain particulars.—Grolnick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 178 N.Y.S. 176.

Quantum meruit not precluded by demurrer for breach of contract

That sustaining of demurrer to cause of action for breach of employment contract established as law of case that contract was too indefinite and uncertain to be enforced did not preclude recovery on second cause of action for services rendered thereunder on quantum meruit, and court erred in excluding evidence of value of such services.—Siebert v. Smith, 239 P. 396, 49 Nev. 120, rehearing denied 244 P. 1012, 49 Nev. 310.

Remedy

(1) Where, on motion for judgment on pleadings, it was decided that complaint stated equitable cause of action, such determination is law of case, and objections thereafter that plaintiff had adequate remedy at law were unavailing.—Rawll v. Baker-Vawter Co., 167 N.Y.S. 931, reversed on other grounds 176 N.Y.S. 189, 187 App.Div. 330.

(2) Where ruling of supreme court transferring case to the court of appeals fixed law of case as action on contract, demurrer to petition for misjoinder of actions on contract and tort was properly overruled.—McKenzie Trust Co. v. Receipt of evidence Overruling exception to petition on ground of "no cause of action," does not render court without right to entertain and sustain objection to receipt of evidence based on same ground as was the exception.—Labourdette v. Doullut & Williams Shipbuilding Co., 100 So. 547, 156 La. 412.

Overruling demurrer and denying nonsuit

Where plaintiff specially demurred to defense pleaded in answer, final judgment overruling special demurrer and denying nonsuit and entering judgment for plaintiff did not adjudicate as law of case that defense was good, since judgment was to be considered as merely overruling special demurrer because it was not filed until trial term, when it was too late.—Stembridge v. Family Finance Co., 175 S.E. 663, 49 Ga.App. 353.

Vacation of order

Where order overruling general demurrer was vacated at same term, subsequent judgment sustaining demurrer when case was regularly heard was not erroneous on ground that judge was without authority to render it.—Kerr v. Kerr, 189 S.E. 20, 183 Ga. 578.

where the ruling is erroneous⁶² or grants leave to amend,⁶³ or where the parties, after such ruling, plead over and go to final hearing on the law and the facts.⁶⁴ An appellate court's decision on a proposition ruled on by the lower court on a demurrer may present a cogent reason for disturbing the lower court's order;⁶⁵ but a mere difference in the interpretation of the import and weight to be given a subsequent decision by an appellate court should not require an annulment of the previous order.⁶⁶

A ruling on demurrer, however, may be regarded as the law of the case, as against another objection based on the same grounds as was the demurrer.⁶⁷ If, after the ruling on demurrer, the complaint is amended, and the only question presented thereby was decided adversely on demurrer to the original complaint, the previous decision should be followed;⁶⁸ but if the amended complaint materially differs from the original pleading the previous ruling is not the law of the case, and the amended pleading is again open to demurrer,⁶⁹ especially where the court in overruling a general demurrer expressly gives defendant the right to renew demurrers on the filing of an amendment.⁷⁰

A decision on demurrer which has the effect of finally settling the rights of the parties is binding as the law of the case;⁷¹ and in some states it is held that a ruling sustaining or overruling a demurrer, unless appealed from or excepted to, constitutes

As dependent on belief in correctness

If the court is of the opinion that the former demurrer was correctly decided, it is proper to treat it as the law of the case. If it is of a contrary opinion, it is not required so to treat it, but should determine it in accordance with its view of the law.—Fitzgerald v. Merard Holding Co., 138 A. 483, 106 Conn. 475, 54 A. the law of the case as to the matters thereby decided,⁷² and, in case of the overruling of a demurrer to the complaint, is conclusive of plaintiff's right to a verdict, if he proves his case substantially as laid.⁷³

Ruling on motion to dismiss, or nonsuit. A ruling on a motion to dismiss has been held to be the law of the case as to matters thereby adjudicated.⁷⁴ Where, however, the question of dismissal arises on an amended complaint which presents a different situation the court is not bound to follow the previous ruling, although the same question is involved.⁷⁵ An earlier ruling on a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction does not become the law of the case.⁷⁶ It has been held that questions de-

76. U.S.—Blossfeld v. Pacific Tank & Pipe Co., D.C.Cal., 15 F.2d 889, 890.

Reason for rule

"It would be not only an extraordinary but a useless thing to permit the trial of a case which, on the allegations of the complaint, must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction at

cided on a motion to dismiss an appeal become the law of the case,⁷⁷ but that an improper ruling on such a motion does not preclude a disposition of the case on proper grounds on a hearing on the merits.⁷⁸

A ruling on a nonsuit generally does not become the law of the case until the cause passes beyond the court's control;⁷⁹ but it has been held that the denial of a codefendant's motions for a nonsuit and for a directed verdict becomes the law of the case that the evidence warrants a finding against him.⁸⁰

Decision in companion case. A decision in one case is controlling as the law of the case, or at least as authority, in a companion case involving the same subject matter, and in which the points of decision and facts are the same,⁸¹ including a subsequent suit on the same cause of action, for the same relief whether it is independent of or ancillary to the original action.⁸² Where two cases are jointly tried as companion cases, and are appealed on separate records but involving the same questions on appeal, the decision in one case is conclusive as to the other case,⁸³ unless the ruling is wrong and no property rights have been acquired on the faith of the ruling.⁸⁴

Different judges. The ruling of one judge ordinarily becomes the law of the case in that court;⁸⁵ and one judge of a court should not ordinarily review or disturb the rulings of another judge of the same or a coordinate court in the same case,⁸⁶ un-the close of the plaintiff's case; which, if not then dismissed, must be dismissed on the court's own motion . . . at any time before entry of a final decree at which the lack of jurisdiction was suggested; and which, on appeal, would be dismissed, rather than reviewed, because of lack of jurisdiction in the trial court."—Blossfeld v. Pacific Tank & Pipe Co., supra.

Limitations of action

The denial of a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction on the ground that limitations had run was not such an adjudication against the defense of limitations as prevented defendant from pleading the statute as an affirmative defense.—Gardner v. Beck, 183 N.W. 962, 195 Iowa 62.

2. COURTS BY WHICH PRIOR ADJUDICATION MADE

§ 196. Same Court

A court is bound by its previous determinations, including those of its different divisions or departments.

Although a state court of last resort has power, in a proper case, to overrule its prior opinions,⁹¹ the rule of stare decisis is frequently invoked where a question is presented which has been previously determined in the same court, in which case it applies with full force,⁹² even though the question is

An order reinstating a cause is not reviewable by another judge after more than five years, however erroneous at the time, in the absence of a writ of error, appeal, or certiorari; and if such order is subsequently dismissed again for want of prosecution, and again properly reinstated, by an order not questioned by appeal or otherwise, it cannot be collaterally attacked by defendant by objection to further consideration of case when called for trial before another judge.—Harris v. Chicago House-Wrecking Co., 145 N.E. 666, 314 Ill. 500, reversing 226 Ill.App. 220.

A judgment should not be vacated or nullified by a different justice sitting in same branch of court, even if such judgment was one vacating or nullifying action of still another justice sitting in same branch of court.—Public Service Commission, First Dist., v. Brooklyn Borough Gas Co., 175 N.Y.S. 28, 106 Misc. 549, affirmed 176 N.Y.S. 918, 188 App.Div. 935.

An order appointing receivers, made in a suit within the jurisdiction of the court, and in the exercise of judicial discretion, may not be vacated by another judge sitting in the same court, as having been impropiously made.—Hardy v. North Butte Mining Co., C.C.A.Mont., 22 F.2d 62, reversing, D.C., 20 F.2d 967.

Motion for injunction pendente lite, made without leave following service of amended complaint, should be denied, where another justice had denied similar application.—Wingfoot Concessionaire v. Sunnyside Outdoor Recreation Center, 253 N.Y.S. 779, 233 App.Div. 540.

An order striking allegations from the complaint does not preclude a subsequent order by another judge in the same court permitting the filing of an amended complaint containing such allegations.—Rice v. Van Why, 111 P. 599, 49 Colo. 7.

A ruling of one judge on demurrer, however, is not conclusive on another judge of same court who afterward tries the case, but errors in such ruling may be corrected at a subsequent term.—Follmer v. State, 142 N.W. 908, 94 Neb. 217, Ann.Cas. 1914D 151.

Discretion

In passing on the question when again presented, the successor does not review the ruling of the original judge, but must exercise his discretion as though the matter were presented for the first time.—State ex rel. Williams Coal Co. v. Duncan, 6 N.E.2d 342, 211 Ind. 203.

No requirement of consistency

State courts are not required to be consistent in their decisions.—Wichita Royalty Co. v. City Nat. Bank of Wichita Falls, Tex., 59 S.Ct. 420, 306 U.S. 103, 83 L.Ed. 515, affirming, C.C.A., 95 F.2d 671, remanding cause, D.C., City Nat. Bank of Wichita Falls, Tex. v. Reconsideration not precluded by rule

In view of grave doubts as to the propriety of the treatment, in prior decisions, of foreign law as an ordinary question of fact, rule of stare decisis does not preclude reconsideration of question.—Saloshin v. Houle, 155 A. 47, 85 N.H. 126.

determined differently in other states;⁹³ and an opinion of one judge is ordinarily held binding on another judge in the same court,⁹⁴ or in the same department of the court,⁹⁵ although it is contrary to a decision in another state.⁹⁶ It has even been held that the decision of a trial court is not subject to review before another judge of the same court when the point ruled on is presented in a subsequent stage of the same case.⁹⁷ Nevertheless it has been held that in a court presided over by a single judge the judge presiding is not bound to follow the decisions of a predecessor in office.⁹⁸

partments, a decision by one of such divisions or departments should be followed by another,⁹⁹ and while there are to be found in the reports numerous instances where such divisions or departments have rendered conflicting decisions, this has probably been due to a feeling that such divisions or departments were in the same situation as coordinate courts, one of which, as shown infra § 200, is not bound by the decision of another.

§ 197. Courts of Last Resort

Decisions of courts of last resort should be followed by inferior courts until reversed or overruled.

Decisions of a court of last resort are to be regarded as law and should be followed by inferior courts, whatever the view of the latter may be as to their correctness, until they have been reversed or overruled,¹ and this rule, as applied to inferior state courts, is not affected by the fact that the decision of the state court of last resort is contrary to the rule established by authority outside of the state.² The decisions of the court of last resort, however, are not binding in a case which may be differentiated,³ as by the presence of an express statutory provision not considered in the prior rulings.⁴

Where there are divisions of the court of last resort, a decision of the court in banc is controlling on appellate courts, inferior courts and divisions of the court,⁵ and such a decision controls and must be followed notwithstanding a contrary decision on the same question by a division,⁶ even though the divisional opinion is the later one;⁷ in the absence of an authoritative ruling by the court in banc, however, inferior courts are bound to follow the latest divisional opinion;⁸ and a specific ruling in a later divisional opinion, rather than the general language of an opinion of the court in banc, will be followed.⁹

Where justices of the lower court are called to sit in the court of last resort, their decision is the decision of the court in which they are sitting, and is entitled to the same consideration as if promulgated by a like number of regularly elected judges of such court.¹⁰

A decision of commissioners of appeal, when adopted by the court of last resort, is to be followed in the same way as a decision of the court.¹¹

Time of decision

(1) Supreme court decisions, which were rendered after trial in other actions arising out of automobile accident, but were declaratory of existing law applicable when accident occurred, were controlling on appeal in such other actions.—Stone v. City and County of San Francisco, 80 P. 2d 175, 27 Cal.App.2d 34.

(2) On appeal from judgment on verdict for plaintiff in action on life insurance policies containing age adjustment clauses, court of appeals must apply rule, stated by supreme court in case decided after instant case was tried and briefed and argued on appeal, that misrepresentation statute did not nullify such clauses, though such decision changed rule prevailing when case at bar was tried, as such rule deals with substantive law.—Aronson v. Hercules Life Ins. Co., Mo.App., 131 S.W. 2d 852.

Answer to certified question

The duty to follow a decision of the supreme court exists where the supreme court answers certified questions as well as in cases on appeal by writs of certiorari.—Perry v. U. S., 37 Ct.Cl. 182, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 85, 305 U.S. 624, 83 L.Ed. 399.

Approved decision of another court

Decision of court of another state expressly approved by Texas supreme court must be accepted as rule governing inferior Texas courts in like cases.—Brinker v. First Nat. Bank, Tex.Com.App., 37 S.W.2d 136, reversing, Civ.App., 16 S.W.2d 965.

The fact that a court has held a doctrine different from that subsequently asserted by the court of last resort does not affect its obligation to follow the latter ruling.¹²

§ 198. Other Appellate Courts

Decisions of intermediate appellate courts will be followed under the stare decisis rule until reversed or overruled; and where there are several coördinate courts decisions of each control the inferior courts in its department or division. Ordinarily granting or refusing of certiorari or a writ of error is not a binding decision by the higher court within the rule.

Although the doctrine of stare decisis does not apply with full force prior thereto,¹³ the decision of an intermediate appellate court is the law of the state or jurisdiction until such decision is reversed or overruled by the court of last resort,¹⁴ and the duty of a lower court to follow such decision is not affected by the fact that it is contrary to the decisions of the court of last resort of a sister state on the same question,¹⁵ but a decision of an appellate court, not of last resort, which is not in accord with the decisions of the court of last resort, is not authoritative.¹⁶

Where there are several appellate courts or divisions with coördinate jurisdiction, an inferior court in one division or district should follow the decisions of the appellate court of another division or district as to a matter which has not been passed upon by its own appellate court;¹⁷ but in case

In Illinois

(1) Since the amendment of L.1877 p 69 § 17, by L.1935 p 696 § 41, Smith-Hurd St.Annot.1935 c 37, an opinion of the appellate court is binding authority, not only upon said court, but upon all inferior courts in the state.—Hughes v. Medendorp, 13 N.E.2d 1015, 294 Ill.App. 424.

(2) Prior to such amendment it was considered doubtful whether the doctrine of stare decisis could be applied to an opinion of the appellate courts, in view of the statute which provided that the opinion of such courts should not be binding authority in any cause or proceeding, other than that in which it was filed.—People ex rel. Nelson v. Sherrard State Bank, 253 Ill.App. 168. See Hart v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 207 Ill.App. 290.

Texas commission of appeals

(1) It has been held that the law as laid down in opinions of commission of appeals not expressly approved by the supreme court should be followed by the court of civil appeals and lower courts.—National Bank of Commerce v. Williams, 84 S.W.2d 691, 125 Tex. 619, reversing Williams v. National Bank of Commerce, Civ.App., 62 S.W.2d 1108—U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Summers, Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 247.

(2) But, citing the statute, it has been held that such an unapproved opinion is not authoritative as precedent.—Galbraith-Foxworth Lumber Co. v. Gerneth, Tex.Civ.App., 66 S.W. 2d 471, error dismissed—Millers' Indemnity Underwriters v. Hughes, Tex.Civ.App., 256 S.W. 334.

(3) And it has been held that an opinion of the commission of appeals is not authoritative, where supreme court adopts only the judgment recommended.—Hager v. Stakes, 294 S.W. 335, 116 Tex. 453—Stephens County v. Mid-Kansas Oil & Gas Co., 254 S.W. 290, 113 Tex. 160, 29 A.L.R. 566—McKenzie v. Withers, 206 S.W. 503, 109 Tex. 255.

(4) In adopting a judgment recommended by the commission, however, the supreme court must necessarily approve all holdings necessary to that judgment, although it adopted the judgment only.—United North & South Oil Co. v. Meredith, Tex.Civ. App., 258 S.W. 550, affirmed, Com. App., 272 S.W. 124.

17. N.Y.—In re Harned's Will, 247 N.Y.S. 212, 138 Misc. 546, affirmed 254 N.Y.S. 939, 234 App.Div. 796—Baerlein v. Winter, 170 N.Y.S. 399, 103 Misc. 506—Hamlin v. Bender, 155 N.Y.S. 963, 92 Misc. 16, affirm-

there is a conflict between the decisions of such courts or divisions an inferior court should follow the decisions of its own appellate court.¹⁸ In case there is a conflict between the decisions of several appellate courts or divisions and the question has not been determined in another division, an inferior court of the latter division is free to follow whichever view of the other divisions seems more correct.¹⁹ In the federal courts a decision of the circuit court of appeals is binding on the district courts in its circuit for the propositions which it decides²⁰ although in other circuit courts of appeal

29. In Louisiana

(1) A refusal to review a judgment of one of the courts of appeal, even on the ground that the judgment is considered correct, is an affirmation of only the judgment itself, and is not to be considered an affirmation of all that is said in the opinion on which the judgment is founded.—Rhodes v. Chrysanthou, 186 So. 333, 191 La. 774.

(2) It has been held, however, that, on denial by the supreme court of a writ of review of a decision of an appellate court, it will be concluded that there was no error in the opinion and ruling, and the points decided must be considered as finally settled.—Union Homestead Assoc. v. Casting, 8 La.App., Orleans, 349.

(3) While the supreme court's refusal of a writ of review does not generally make the case a supreme court "decision," where the only question involved is one of law concerning the interpretation of a legislative act, the refusal of a writ signifies the court's approval of the case.—Kroncke v. Caddo Parish School Board, App., 183 So. 86.

(4) So by refusing writ of review, supreme court approved findings of court of appeal.—Smith v. Shehee, App., 143 So. 339, conforming to answers 143 So. 338, 175 La. 334, and amended, App., 144 So. 750.

(5) And where supreme court refused writ in a case where court of appeal based its decision strictly upon rule expressed in the case, court of appeal would assume that supreme court approved such rule.—Barr v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, App., 188 So. 521.

(6) However, the supreme court did not approve ruling overruling resort to review a decision of a court of intermediate appeal by certiorari or writ of error or review is not ordinarily regarded as an affirmance of such decision which raises it to the dignity of final authority.³⁰ Nevertheless the appellate court's decision in plea where another reason was assigned for refusing writ.—White v. Louisiana Western Ry. Co., 140 So. 486, 174 La. 308, affirming 135 So. 255, 18 La.App. 544.

(7) And the supreme court's refusal to exercise supervisory jurisdiction in case where complainant has yet remedy by appeal does not establish jurisprudence.—Griffon v. Villia, 120 So. 50, 167 La. 632.

In Texas

(1) The rule that refusal of a writ by the supreme court manifests its approval of the decision of the intermediate appellate court has been applied in several cases.—Casualty Reciprocal Exchange v. Dawson, 107 S.W.2d 994, 130 Tex. 362, dismissing error, Civ.App., 81 S.W.2d 284—Hamilton v. Empire Gas & Fuel Co., Com. App., 110 S.W.2d 561, affirming, Civ. App., 85 S.W.2d 280—Payne v. Edgar, Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 222, error dismissed—Culver v. State, Civ.App., 85 S.W.2d 997, error refused—The Maccahees v. Marshall, Civ.App., 11 S.W.2d 523, affirmed Com.App., 27 S.W.2d 535—Orndorff v. El Paso County, Civ.App., 295 S.W. 219, certiorari denied 48 S.Ct. 339, 276 U.S. 633, 72 L.Ed. 742, and followed in Orndorff v. El Paso County, Civ.App., 295 S.W. 222—Urban v. Bagby, Civ.App., 286 S.W. 519, affirmed, Com.App., 291 S.W. 537—Binford v. Harris County, Civ.App., 261 S.W. 535—Ingram v. Fred, Civ.App., 243 S.W. 598—Milner v. Gatlin, Civ.App., 211 S.W. 617, reversed on other grounds, Com. App., 261 S.W. 1003—Gray v. Eleazer, 94 S.W. 911, 43 Tex.Civ.App. 417.

(2) In another case it has been said that the decision as to which application for writ of error was dismissed was well worth following.—Scott v. Gardner, Civ.App., 106 S.W. 2d 1109, error dismissed.

(3) However, a contrary conclusion has been reached under the law in force at the time a particular writ was refused.—Conley v. Abrams, Civ.App., 7 S.W.2d 674, error refused.

(4) And it has been said that the supreme court's dismissal of application for writ of error indicates that the supreme court approves the result reached by the court of civil appeals but not the reasons assigned.—Moore v. Gordon, Civ.App., 122 S.W.2d 239, error dismissed.

(5) It has also been held that the supreme court's refusal of writs of error in cases decided by courts of civil appeals did not make those decisions binding on another court of civil appeals.—Texas Farm Mortgage Co. v. Rowley, Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 854, error granted.

(6) Thus refusal of application for writ of error was held not to constitute approval by supreme court of holding of court of civil appeals on particular question, where such holding was not questioned in application, and where refusal antedated statute contemplating refusal where judgment is correct, and where legal principles declared in opinion of court of civil appeals are correctly determined.—City of San Angelo v. Deutsch, 91 S.W.2d 308, 126 Tex. 532, reversing Deutsch v. City of San Angelo, Civ.App., 73 S.W.2d 125.

(7) It seems that where a judgment of the court of civil appeals was correct under the proper construction of a statute, a writ of error by the supreme court was properly denied, and such denial did not necessarily approve other holdings by the lower court.—American Indemnity Co. v. City of Austin, 246 S.W. 1019, 112 Tex. 239, reversing, Civ. App., 211 S.W. 812.

Reason for rule

Many petitions for certiorari are denied because statutory prerequisites to their consideration are overlooked by counsel, and, moreover, the higher court does not feel itself required in every instance to file a memorandum upon denial of the writ, although it only concurs in the result reached by the inferior court.—Lingner v. Lingner, 56 S.W. 2d 749, 185 Tenn. 525.

In Illinois

(1) The denial of certiorari by the supreme court is not equivalent to a holding that the question of law necessarily involved has been decided properly by the appellate court.—People ex rel. Wilmette State Bank v. Village of Wilmette, 13 N.E.2d 990, 294 Ill.App. 362.

(2) It is merely approval of conclusion reached by appellate court or an affirmance of judgment, and is not necessarily approval of reasons given in opinion of appellate court for its judgment, as respects whether such denial is binding authoritatively upon appellate courts.—Marks v. Pope, 7 N.E.2d 481, 289 Ill.App. 558, reversed on other grounds 19 N.E. 2d 616, 370 Ill. 597.

(3) Hence opinion of appellate court and denial of certiorari by supreme court in case presenting involved situation calling for many statements of law in appellate court's opinion are not binding authorities in another case involving similar facts presented to another appellate court.—Marks v. Pope, supra—People v. Grant, 208 Ill.App. 235, affirmed 119 N.E. 344, 283 Ill. 391.

(4) It has been held, however, that denial of the writ must be regarded as sustaining the views expressed by the appellate court.—Overland Motor Co. v. Tennant, 195 Ill.App. 6.

such case, even though not controlling, must be considered as highly persuasive.³¹

§ 199. Higher Courts of Original Jurisdiction

Although there is some contrary authority courts of limited original jurisdiction ordinarily follow decisions of courts of general original jurisdiction.

Where, as is usually the case, there are, in the same state, courts of general original jurisdiction and also inferior courts of limited jurisdiction, it is clear that the latter courts, in accordance with the principles which have been stated supra §§ 187, 197, 198, should follow the decisions of the higher courts, although it has been held in New York that a county court is not obliged to follow a decision of the supreme court in another department.³²

§ 200. Coördinate Courts

Decisions of coördinate courts, while not binding, will ordinarily be followed unless clearly erroneous.

While a court is not always bound, under the principle of stare decisis, to follow the decisions of another court whose authority is coördinate,³³ such decisions are very persuasive,³⁴ and it is well established as a general rule that a court will adhere to a principle, not clearly erroneous, which is laid down by another court of coördinate jurisdiction, until the rule is settled otherwise by the decision

(5) And every question involved having been adjudicated, in prior suits between same parties, or predecessors, by judgments of appellate court, to review one of which certiorari was sought and denied, judgments were decisive of present controversy under doctrine of stare decisis.—Gridley v. Wood, 175 N.E. 396, 343 Ill. 223.

(6) By denying a writ of certiorari, the supreme court does not review the judgment of the appellate court, but declines to do so, which does not make the judgment of the latter court final, but leaves its finality undisturbed.—People v. Grant, supra.

Creation of inference

Ordinarily, the refusal of United States supreme court to grant certiorari to review decision of lower court creates no inference regarding correctness of lower court's decision, but where supreme court granted certiorari in case wherein lower court determined that orders extending time for settlement of bill of exceptions were required to be made part of bill of exceptions but refused certiorari in case in which lower court recognized validity of bill of exceptions, notwithstanding orders extending time for its settlement were not made part of the bill, an inference was created which strengthened the conclusion of the circuit court of appeals that orders extending time for settlement of bill of exceptions were not necessary to be made a part thereof.—Gluck v. U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 93 F.2d 953.

Refusal by state and federal courts

A decision of district court of appeal is not controlling in another proceeding before the state supreme court although the state supreme court denied petition for hearing and United States supreme court denied state attorney general's petition for writ of certiorari in former case.—*Western Lithograph Co. v. of a higher court.³⁵ The federal courts consider this rule to be especially applicable in cases involving patents³⁶ and trade-marks.³⁷ The rule is, however, merely one of comity, not requiring a court to abdicate its own individual judgment and applicable only where the court is in doubt as to the soundness of its views, for the purpose of establishing uniformity of rulings and avoiding confusion;³⁸ and the rule has been held not to be applicable to motions for injunctions, where error may be followed by irremediable mischief.³⁹

§ 201. Inferior Courts

The decisions of inferior courts are not generally binding on the higher courts, but they are given some consideration and, particularly in cases involving construction of statutes, may be followed if long acquiesced in.

Failure to follow previous ruling
Decision of court of appeals is not binding on supreme court in deter-

ing the law of the case,⁴¹ although it has been considered that an appellate court will give great weight to the opinions of a lower court upon questions affecting its own practice and jurisdiction,⁴² and may consider the decision of such a court on other matters in the absence of any authoritative precedent.⁴³ Accordingly, a principle announced in an inferior court, unchallenged for a long period of time should not be overthrown by a decision of a higher court except for cogent and important reasons.⁴⁴ Due consideration will be given to the construction of statutes by inferior courts,⁴⁵ and such construction will generally be upheld if long acquiesced in,⁴⁶ especially where the adoption of a different rule would cause great mischief;⁴⁷ but the rule does not go to the extent of binding the court to a construction put upon the language by inferior courts where the language involved is clear and unequivocal.⁴⁸ A decision by the federal district court of another state as to the construction of a statute of such state would be followed by the federal circuit court;⁴⁹ and the United States supreme court in construing a statute of the District of Columbia has said that the fact that it had been construed in a great number of cases in the District in accordance with the views of the federal supreme court was important not only as a confirmation of its view but as a reason for taking such view if the court had felt more doubt than it did.⁵⁰ It has been held however, that a circuit court of appeals may examine and dispose of a question in a patent case according to its own convictions, regardless of the decisions of district courts of another circuit.⁵¹

§ 202. Civil and Criminal Courts

Where civil and criminal courts are separate, decisions of one on matters exclusively within its jurisdiction are binding on the other.

Where there are in the same state distinct courts of last resort in civil and in criminal cases, the decisions of the civil courts as to matters exclusively within their jurisdiction are binding on the criminal courts,⁵² and the civil courts are in turn bound by the decisions of the criminal courts with respect to matters of criminal law;⁵³ but the criminal courts satisfied of the soundness of the reasoning by which they are supported,⁵⁹ and as shown in the C.J.S. title Statutes §§ 371-373, also 15 C.J. p 926 notes 50, 51, 59 C.J. p 1068 note 68-p 1072 note 23, where one state has adopted a statute of another state, which has been construed by the courts of the latter state, such decisions should be accorded very considerable weight when the question of the construction of the statute arises in the state where it has been so adopted, although it would seem that the courts are not bound to accept such construction. On questions of the constitutionality of the statute, moreover, decisions of the courts of the state from which the statute was adopted are not binding on those of the adopting state,⁶⁰ whether holding the statute constitutional⁶¹ or unconstitutional.⁶² Modern adjudications of foreign courts proceeding in rem, unlike adjudications in personam, are an unusual authority everywhere in courts of like character.⁶³

Federal questions. A court of one state is not bound by adjudications in other states on questions arising under the federal constitution and laws.⁶⁴ It has been held, however, that, since the adoption of the fourteenth amendment to the United States constitution, the federal supreme court has become the final arbiter of whether a state in the exercise of its police power has violated the constitutional guaranty, thus making the various state courts courts of concurrent jurisdiction, and so the decisions of the courts of one state on such questions are not to be regarded in another as those of a foreign tribunal, but as those of a court of equal authority.⁶⁵

Matters of practice. The value of precedents from other states in matters of practice depends so much upon the identity of statutes, the similarity of the courts, and the methods of procedure, that without proof thereof little weight can be accorded to them.⁶⁶ A court is not controlled by principles of practice established in other jurisdictions, unless they are consonant with other rules of its own procedure.⁶⁷

Questions of public policy. In determining what is and what is not against public policy, the common law and the decisions of other states may be resorted to as in determining any other rule of substantive law.⁶⁸

Workmen's compensation acts. On account of the large number and variety of state statutes dealing with workmen's compensation,⁶⁹ it has been held that, in construing a compensation statute, the decisions of courts of other states are persuasive and of value only to the extent to which the reasoning therein appears sound,⁷⁰ and applicable to the specific provisions of the law being construed,⁷¹ and decisions made in other jurisdictions have been held to have very little weight where the wording of the acts to which they relate, on the question under consideration, is very different from that of the act of the forum.⁷² Further, the construction placed on the legislation by the courts has been said to be so diverse that little applicable authority is found in other jurisdictions.⁷³ Accordingly, while many cases from other jurisdictions are helpful in arriving at a proper construction of the act of the forum,⁷⁴ the wide differences in the phraseology of the acts on which the decisions are based require great care in considering many of the opinions.⁷⁵

Territorial courts. Decisions of the courts of a territory, although perhaps not binding on the courts of a state subsequently formed out of the territory, are at least persuasive.⁷⁶

Contracts generally. In determining the validity of a contract made and to be performed in another state, the decisions of that state should, it has been held, be followed,⁷⁷ although there is also authority for the view that the state in which the action is brought will adhere to its own decision relating to similar contracts, regardless of the decisions of the other state, no law of that state being pleaded or proved.⁷⁸ Decisions of inferior courts of that state as to the measure of damages for breach of the contract are not binding.⁷⁹

Transitory common-law actions. In actions for injuries occurring in other states, there is a conflict of authority. So, although there is authority to the contrary,⁸⁰ it has been held that the interpretation of the common law by the court of the state where the injury occurred will govern,⁸¹ but the court in which the action is brought is at liberty to differ from the judgment of the foreign court as to the application of the law to the facts.⁸²

Decisions of the highest court of a state formed out of a territory are not declaratory of the common law as it existed in the territory where federal courts possessed revisory control over the judgments of the supreme court of the territory.⁸³

Law merchant. There is conflict as to whether decisions of sister states as to the law merchant must be followed, where the law of that state is the controlling law. In some jurisdictions the courts have held that, where the law to be applied is the general commercial law or law merchant, it must be sought for, not in the decisions of local tribunals, but in the general doctrines of commercial jurisprudence; that, while following the decisions of the courts of final resort of the other state in the construction of its statutes, the courts of the state where the case is tried will be governed by their own precedents in expounding the general common law applicable to commercial transactions.⁸⁴ On the other hand, it is held in other jurisdictions that one state cannot determine what the law merchant of another state or country is, but is bound by the decisions of that state.⁸⁵

In an action on a judgment rendered without service of process, in a sister state, the courts of the state in which the action is tried are bound by the interpretation placed on the common law by the courts of the state in which the judgment was rendered with regard to the validity of the procedure to sustain the judgment.⁸⁶

b. Construction of Constitution and Statutes of Other States

In construing or applying provisions of the constitution or statutes of another state, a court should usually follow the decisions of the courts of that state; and while it has power to declare such provisions unconstitutional, this power should be exercised only when necessary and in case the invalidity clearly appears.

It is the right and the duty of the courts to construe the law on which a litigant relies, even though it be the law of another state;⁸⁷ and in a proper case the courts of one state may be called on to construe the constitution of another state.⁸⁸ Where a question as to the construction or effect of the constitution or statutes of a state arises in the courts of another state, such courts should follow the decisions of the court of last resort of the state whose constitutional or statutory provisions are involved.⁸⁹

even though they would be inclined to place a different, or even an opposite, construction upon a similar provision if it appeared in the constitution or statutes of their own state.⁹⁰ This rule rests upon comity alone,⁹¹ and the duty of recognizing such decisions is not imposed by the full faith and credit clause of the federal constitution,⁹² nor will the rule be applied where the decisions of the state of enactment are in conflict with those of the United States supreme court.⁹³ So a court is not bound to follow such a construction of a statute by another court as would make it violative of the federal constitution.⁹⁴ Furthermore, a court need not apply the doctrine of comity where the highest court of the other state has given different constructions to the statute at different times, and rights may have been acquired under the former construction.⁹⁵ The same degree of recognition will not ordinarily be accorded to decisions of the inferior courts of another state as to the construction and effect of the constitutional and statutory provisions of such state,⁹⁶ although such decisions have been followed;⁹⁷ and it has been said that a state court will look upon as new, and decide for itself, questions which concern the citizens of the state, although such questions grow out of the constitutional or statutory provisions of a sister state, where there is a conflict between the federal and the state tribunals as to the proper construction of such provisions.⁹⁸

Where a statute has not been construed by the courts of the state in which it was enacted, a court of another state in which a question with respect to the effect of such statute arises may place its own construction thereon,⁹⁹ and does not, by so doing, deny to the statute full faith and credit, in violation of the federal constitution.¹ Such a construction is no authority as a precedent, however, in the courts of the state in which the statute was enacted.²

The mode of procedure to be followed to obtain relief under a statute of another state is governed by the laws of the state where such relief is sought, and the courts of such state will not, in this respect, be governed by the adjudications of the courts of the state where the statute is in force.³

In determining whether a statute is penal, so as to deny jurisdiction to the courts of another state, in which an action thereon is brought, such courts are not bound by the construction placed on the statute by the courts of the state which enacted it, but this is to be determined by the court in which the action is brought.⁴

Constitutionality. A state court, in a proper case, may declare provisions in the constitution of a sister state to be in conflict with the federal constitution and consequently void.⁵ So the courts of one state may declare unconstitutional a statute of another state on the ground of its contravening the constitution of the state enacting it,⁶ or the federal constitution,⁷ even where the courts of the state enacting the statute have not passed on it;⁸ but this power will be exercised only where the invalidity of the statute in question clearly appears,⁹ and not if the question involved is in any way capable of being decided without passing on the validity of the law.¹⁰ Neither will the power be exercised where a well-considered decision of the court of the state enacting the statute has held it constitutional.¹¹

§ 205. Decisions of United States Courts as Precedents in State Courts

In cases not involving federal questions, as where state constitutions and statutes are to be construed, state courts are not required to follow federal court decisions although they may be persuasive; but generally territorial courts should follow decisions of the federal courts.

In cases not arising upon the construction of the constitution and laws of the federal government, but in which the state courts have full jurisdiction and their judgments are final, such courts will adhere to and follow their own decisions and are not bound by those of the federal courts,¹² although

(2) But it is held in some cases that where state and federal constitutional provisions are in effect the same the practice established by the United States supreme court should be adopted and followed by the courts of the state.—State v. Laundry, 204 P. 953, 103 Or. 443, rehearing denied 206 P. 290, 103 Or. 443.

(3) The state supreme court having adopted the practice as declared by the supreme court of the United States, "for the same reasons which recommended it to that court," adopted those reasons as disclosed by the cited decisions of that court.—State v. McDaniel, 231 P. 965, 115 Or. 187, affirmed on rehearing 237 P. 373, 115 Or. 187.

Delegation of legislative functions

Whether a state statute unlawfully delegates legislative functions to a person or to a commission is primarily for the state courts.—State v. McMasters, 283 N.W. 767, 204 Minn. 438.

Duty of critical examination

A state supreme court which is faced with the final construction of a provision of its own constitution must examine critically the reasoning of any case which by analogy might aid in such construction, regardless of the high standing of the court in which such other decision is rendered.—Du Pont v. Green, 195 A. 273, 114 A.L.R. 1184.

Law partly contravening federal constitution

After portions of a state law have been declared by federal courts to violate the federal constitution, the inquiry as to whether the remaining portions which do not violate the federal constitution are sufficient in themselves, so that it cannot be said that the entire act falls, ordinarily presents no federal question.—Stark v. McLaughlin, 261 P. 244, 45 Idaho 112.

Duty of court of last resort

(1) Where decision of federal court, construing the federal constitution, apparently necessitates changes in what has been treated as settled law concerning the constitu-

ing.¹⁹ The view has also been taken that in order to insure consistency of decisions upon questions of law which have general application to the several states, such as questions of commercial law, the decisions of the supreme court of the United States should be followed as a common standard, even with regard to cases of which the state court has final jurisdiction, as the decisions of the federal court will be more readily followed by common consent than would the decisions of a court of any particular state;²⁰ although this principle will not be carried to the extent of requiring a departure from previous decisions of the state court,²¹ or applied where the court is of the opinion that the weight of better reasoning is decidedly in favor of the opposite holding.²² A state court will adopt the construction that a federal court made of its own order.²³

Territorial courts should follow the decisions of the federal supreme court,²⁴ unless some statute applicable to the territory evinces a legislative intent to establish a different rule;²⁵ and it has been held that, where causes are pending in territorial courts at the time when the territory is admitted to statehood, the decisions of the federal supreme court should govern in subsequent determinations of such causes by the courts.²⁶ However, the territorial courts may follow a rule of damages contrary to a rule sustained by decisions of the United States supreme court where the territorial rule was adopted prior to the allowance of appeals to a federal court upon other than federal questions.²⁷ The decisions of a circuit court of appeals, which is the tionality of a given application of a state statute, the state supreme court and not any subordinate state court should announce such changes, unless no reasonable distinction between the particular case presented, and the federal court's decision can be made.—Birkhofer v. Krumm, 81 P.2d 609, 27 Cal.App.2d 513, certiorari denied Krumm v. Birkhofer, 59 S.Ct. 249.

(2) So an intermediate appellate court is without jurisdiction to grant writ of habeas corpus to prisoner even though language of decision of supreme court of United States required it, where to grant writ would overrule decisions of state supreme court, since any departure from established legal doctrine declared by state supreme court must have its origin in such court.—Ex parte Mooney, 45 P.2d 388, 6 Cal.App.2d 730.

Actions between same parties for same cause of action. A decision of the United States circuit court of appeals, on reversing a judgment for plaintiff and remanding the case for a new trial, does not govern the disposition of a new action brought by plaintiff in the state courts after suffering a non-suit in the federal court.²⁹

§ 206. — Decisions on Federal Questions;

Decisions of the United States supreme court on federal questions are absolutely binding on state courts; but decisions of lower federal courts are generally held not binding.

Where a question is federal in its nature, the decisions of the supreme court of the United States are absolutely binding on the various state courts and must be followed,³⁰ regardless of the views of

Dissolution of injunction

The assessment of damages on dissolution of injunction involves a federal question, and decisions of federal courts are controlling in state court, where injunction dissolved was issued out of a federal court.—National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis v. Maryland Casualty Co., 270 S.W. 691, 307 Mo. 417.

Injunction bond

(1) Where injunction bond was taken by a federal court in a proceeding pending therein, its interpretation and construction, including the scope of the obligations imposed, the latter courts, and even though such decisions are inconsistent with prior decisions of the state courts.³¹ So the decisions of the federal court are binding as to the construction of the federal constitution,³² and are also binding as to the validity must be governed by the federal law applicable to the subject.—U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Travelers' Ins. Mach. Co., 224 S.W. 496, 188 Ky. 841, certiorari denied 41 S.Ct. 216, 254 U.S. 653, 65 L.Ed. 459, and error dismissed 41 S.Ct. 375, 255 U.S. 563, 65 L.Ed. 787.

(2) In an action on such a bond, the rule established by decisions of the United States supreme court as to measure of liability must, when applicable, be followed by the state court.

Admiralty rules

Common-law courts, when trying case cognizable in admiralty court, should ordinarily follow rules obtaining in admiralty.—Myrtle Point Transp. Co. v. Port of Coquille River, 168 P. 625, 86 Or. 311.

Contributory negligence

The rule of the United States supreme court that the common-law rule that contributory negligence bars recovery, and not the admiralty rule of comparative negligence, applies in cases prosecuted in state courts for maritime torts, should be followed until modified or limited by such court.—Maleeny v. Standard Shipbuilding Corporation, 142 N.E. 602, 237 N.Y. 250, reversing 200 N.Y. S. 933, 206 App.Div. 780.

Denial of certiorari

While the action of the federal supreme court in denying a petition for certiorari is not necessarily to be considered a controlling precedent, yet where that tribunal denied a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of a state court holding the federal Employer's Liability Act inapplicable, it must be inferred that the denial of the writ was a ruling to the effect that the act was not applicable.—Capps v. courts should not construe federal statutes in advance of decisions by the federal supreme court unless the facts of the particular case require it,⁶⁹ a construction of an act of congress by a state court of last resort is binding on the lower courts of the state.⁷⁰ The doctrine of stare decisis, so far as applicable to decisions of the state courts on federal questions, must yield, however, to the determination of such questions by the United States supreme court;⁷¹ but a decision of the United States supreme court affirming the decree of a state appellate court on a ground different from that taken by the state court in its opinion does not affect the binding authority of the decision of the state court as a judicial precedent on the questions covered.⁷²

With respect to what constitutes a federal question, the supreme court of the United States is the final authority.⁷³

On appeal to the supreme court of a state, a decision of the supreme court of the United States rendered since the decision of the trial court may be availed of as a conclusive authority that the decision of the trial court was erroneous.⁷⁴

Where there is a reconsideration of a question by the supreme court of the United States with a result adverse to its first judgment, such reconsideration does not affect existing judgments of state courts, or call for a modification or change of their records to meet the changed views and judgment of the supreme court.⁷⁵

Decisions of the lower federal courts on federal questions which have not been passed on by the supreme court of the United States should, according to some authorities, be followed by the state courts,⁷⁶ although it has also been considered that such decisions, while persuasive,⁷⁷ are not binding on the state courts,⁷⁸ and a conflict between deci-

§ 207. Courts of Foreign Countries

Ordinarily decisions of courts of foreign countries, although entitled to consideration, are not binding as precedents, but they should be followed so far as they apply to their own laws and conditions; and English decisions antedating the American Revolution may be binding on questions of the common law.

In general, decisions of courts of a foreign country have no authority as precedents,⁸⁰ although they may be considered as guides to a correct determination;⁸¹ but, under the rules of international courtesy and comity, the courts of the United States must follow the interpretations of the tribunals of a foreign country so far as they apply to their own laws and conditions.⁸² A single decision of an appellate court of a foreign country which runs contrary to the settled law elsewhere and which is not controlling as a precedent in the courts of that country will not be deemed authoritative here as to the law of that country.⁸³ However, in the absence of any foreign decision construing a foreign statute, it is the duty of the courts in the jurisdiction where the trial occurs to construe the statute according to the rules applicable to the construction of a domestic statute.⁸⁴

English courts. English decisions made subsequent to the period of our separation from the British empire, while they are not received as absolute authority in our courts,⁸⁵ may nevertheless be referred to, and are entitled to great respect;⁸⁶ but,

In workmen's compensation cases English authorities are of value on questions of construction in cases of similarity between the English act and the statute under consideration.

where the common law has been adopted as a rule of decision in a state, the common-law rule of a case for the first time in such state will not be disregarded merely because the English judges have frequently regretted its adoption.⁸⁷ Although there is authority to the contrary,⁸⁸ an English decision rendered prior to 1776 has been considered binding as a precedent,⁸⁹ but it will not be followed so as to perpetuate error where it has been so modified by judicial decisions as not to be a part of the common law of the state.⁹⁰ English authorities cannot be considered on constitutional questions.⁹¹

In construing the duties of American executors of an English subject in distributing the estate in this country, the surrogate should recognize the decision of the English courts that property sent to Great Britain by the American executors may be there appropriated for any unpaid legacy due.⁹²

Hawaiian courts prior to annexation. As the organic act of Hawaii continued in force all laws of Hawaii not inconsistent with the constitution or laws of the United States, it has been considered proper for the supreme court of the United States to adopt the construction of a Hawaiian statute given by the courts of that country prior to annexation;⁹³ and it has also been held proper for a state court to recognize a decree of divorce rendered by a court of the republic of Hawaii.⁹⁴

§ 208. Rulings of Legislative and Executive Departments and Special Tribunals

Rulings of governmental departments and special tribunals are ordinarily not binding on the courts, although such rulings may be followed when proper.

Decisions or rulings of any of the executive departments of government are not generally considered as binding on the courts,⁹⁵ although the courts may follow such rulings when proper.⁹⁶ So the decisions of the board of tax appeals⁹⁷ or an industrial accident commission⁹⁸ are not controlling, but a long line of decisions by governmental agencies is entitled to consideration.⁹⁹ Especial weight is to be given to the opinions of the interstate commerce commission in interpreting tariffs,¹ even though such opinions are not binding on the court;² and it has been held that state courts are bound by the commission's interpretation of bills of lading.³ In accordance with the rule stated supra § 203, decisions of military tribunals are of no binding authority except as to the particular cases decided by them.⁴ A similar conclusion has been reached as to the opinion of a commission of arbitration and award, where such tribunal can act only with the consent of the parties, and cannot render or enforce a judgment.⁵ Where, however, a trust is created for the benefit of those adhering to a particular denomination, it has been decided that the determination of the proper ecclesiastical tribunals as to who are in subordination to that denomination will be accepted and followed by the courts.⁶ Awards made to others by agreement of creditors on receivership of a corporation have no weight as precedents and cannot serve as guides to real judicial allowances.⁷ That the construction put by the legislature on a constitutional provision, is entitled to great weight is shown in Constitutional Law § 33.

"The authority of a judicial opinion is limited to the judicial decision. It is what the court decides and not what the court says in so deciding which gives authority to the opinion."—Ferguson v. Johnson, Tex.Civ. App., 57 S.W.2d 372, 376, error dismissed.

Construction of opinions see infra § 222.

Dicta as authority see supra § 190.

Denial of writ of prohibition

(1) That the supreme court denied a writ of prohibition to restrain the circuit court from taking jurisdiction of a suit did not constitute a determination that the circuit court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, the inference being that the writ was denied on the theory that since the question of jurisdiction should be determined on a writ of error to final judgment, extraordinary relief was unnecessary.—Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Ferguson, N.Y., 183 F. 756, 106 C.C.A. 330.

(2) However, it has also been held in a similar case that the denial of the writ, even though the majority of the court concurred in the result, only, constituted a decision that the circuit court had jurisdiction.—Laumeier v. Laumeier, 271 S.W. 481, 308 Mo. 201.

General approval of instructions is not a specific approval of instruction not criticized.—Graff v. United Railroads of San Francisco, 172 P. 603, 178 Cal. 171.

Record in previous trial as controlling

In determining whether an issue has been adjudicated, the court will be governed by the record in such previous trial, and not by the assumption by counsel on argument thereof that the issues therein embraced were the issues which are raised in the subsequent action.—Hart v. Chicago Chemical Nat. Bank, Miss., 27 So. 926.

Particular matters held not precedents

(1) Denial of petition for rehearing first calling attention to doctrine or point.—Great Northern Ry. Co. v. State, Wash., 93 P.2d 694.

(2) Dissenting opinion.—State v. Batson, 93 S.E. 135, 107 S.C. 460.

(3) A decision on appeal from a referee's decision has little force as an obligatory precedent on a point in the referee's decision, affirmance of which decision was necessarily involved in the appellate court's action, where all the parties failed to argue the point.—Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 279 N.Y.S. 327, 155 Misc. 61, affirmed 284 N.Y.S. 472, 246 App.Div. 201, affirmed 3 N.E.2d 205, 271 N.Y. 602, reargument denied 3 N.E.2d 472, 271 N.Y. 659.

(4) Judgment of nonsuit is not stare decisis in a later action on the same cause of action.—Carey v. Hejke, 197 A. 652, 119 N.J.Law 594.

(5) Memorandum order by appellate court to the effect that it would not interfere with lower court's refusal to grant injunction pending appeal, and adding that it appeared that there was an adequate remedy at law, would not prevent the lower court, in a subsequent similar case, from granting temporary injunction on ground of inadequacy of remedy at law.—G. B. R. Smith Milling Co. v. Thomas, D.C.Tex., 11 F.Supp. 833.

(6) Mere recommendation settles no law.—Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Jimenez, Tex.Civ.App., 267 S.W. 752.

(7) Notations made on granting writs of error express only the tentative opinion of the court and have no authoritative value, although they may be persuasive.—Ball v. Beaty, Tex.Civ.App., 223 S.W. 552.

was involved in the case and should have been decided.¹¹

It is commonly held that a decision is authoritative only on questions which it was necessary to decide,¹² and were involved,¹³ or in issue,¹⁴ in the case. However, inferior courts have been held bound by a decision on a question actually determined by an appellate court even though the decision thereof was not necessary for the determination of the case.¹⁵ While all propositions assumed by the court to be within the case, and all questions presented and considered and deliberately decided by the court leading up to the final conclusion, are as effectually passed upon as the ultimate questions solved, and a judgment is authority upon all points assumed to be within the issues which the record shows the court deliberately considered and decided in reaching it,¹⁶ and unless there are precedents of the court necessarily leading to a different result, the court should follow previous repeated statements of a general principle applicable to the particular case, although it may not have been decided under circumstances involving the precise question,¹⁷ ordinarily a decision is not a precedent on matters assumed therein, but not decided.¹⁸ Thus it has been held that the exercise of jurisdiction by a court in similar cases, in which the question of jurisdiction was not raised, is not decisive in a case in which the question is directly presented,¹⁹ particularly where the court has determined in a subsequent case, in which the question was raised, that jurisdiction did not exist;²⁰ but it has also been held, on the ground that it is the duty of the court to determine whether it has jurisdiction even though that question is not raised, as appears in § 114 supra, that an exercise of jurisdiction constitutes a binding decision that it has jurisdiction.²¹

Decision deliberately made

The weight of a former decision is not lessened by the fact that the losing party had confessed error or that a different decision would have raised a grave constitutional question, where it is apparent that the decision was not affected by the confession or the constitutional question.—U. S. v. Flannery, 45 S.Ct. 420, 268 U.S. 93, 69 L.Ed. 835, reversing Flannery v. U. S., 59 Ct.Cl. 719.

Validity of stipulation

Significant

Even though the decision is not a conclusive precedent, the fact that neither counsel nor court raised the question of jurisdiction is significant.—Norris v. Moody, 113 A. 24, 120 Me. 151.

Matters improperly before court. A question actually determined becomes a binding precedent even though not properly raised.²² While there is authority to the contrary,²³ it has similarly been held that a decision on the merits constitutes an authoritative precedent even though the court lacked jurisdiction of the cause decided.²⁴

Time of rendering decision. A decision is not binding in other cases until it has been published or promulgated;²⁵ but a decision rendered after the trial of another action may be binding on the appeal of the latter action as declaratory of the law applicable to the case.²⁶

Where a decision considers and criticizes the former decisions in the state, it becomes stare decisis upon the point involved, and when the point arises again it is not necessary to examine de novo the authorities upon which such decision was based.²⁷

Concession of counsel. A consent decree cannot be considered a precedent in a later case;²⁸ nor can a mere concession of counsel be regarded as a judicial establishment of the point conceded.²⁹

Decision by court in particular capacity. While the rulings of a court of last resort in the exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction have no necessary application to a case involving the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction,³⁰ a decision in an action at law is binding in an equity action involving the same question.³¹

Necessity of written opinion. A prior decree may be binding in later cases even though it was rendered without written opinion.³²

§ 210. Necessity for Similarity of Facts

While the doctrine of stare decisis relates only to legal principles, the positive authority of a decision is coextensive only with the facts on which it is founded.

The doctrine of stare decisis relates only to legal principles;³³ accordingly judicial precedents are valuable only in so far as they state definite rules for guidance in future similar cases.³⁴

However, the rule of stare decisis has a limited application in determining whether settled legal principles are applicable to a particular fact situa-

35. Miss.—City of Greenville v. Laury, 159 So. 121, 172 Miss. 118.

"It is usually unsafe and hazardous to seek to classify adjudicated cases upon any complex question of law, and to extract from them rules of general application. So much of the reasoning in such cases is due to their diversities, that error is likely to creep into any generalization of them, and vitiate the results of an analysis that would ambitiously seek to reduce them to a system, and tempt the incautious inquirer to overlook the differences of fact that modify and control their application. It is, therefore, wiser in the main to investigate and decide each case upon its own peculiar state of facts, than by too general statements or deductions to incur the risk of being betrayed into too abstract reasoning."—Ashbury v. (2) Decisions as to rescission for fraud in procuring contracts are not controlling in an action to rescind a contract for default in performance.—Jones v. Peterson, 72 S.W.2d 76, 335 Mo. 242.

(3) On the question of sufficiency of instructions as to corroboration of testimony of a seduced female, former opinions, although valuable in their bearing on corroboration, were not controlling authority, where the question decided in such cases was not one relating to instructions.—Slaughter v. State, 218 S.W. 767, 36 Tex.Cr. 527.

(4) A declaration by equity, on disputed testimony or conflicting inferences, that a penal violation was proved by fair preponderance of evidence, could not be binding in a subsequent prosecution where guilt must be established beyond a reasonable doubt.—Reed v. Littleton, 9 N.E.2d 814, 275 N.Y. 150, affirming 292 N.Y.S. 363, 249 App.Div. 310, reversing 289 N.Y.S. 793, 159 Misc. 853.

decision;⁴⁰ and it has been held that former decisions are ordinarily not controlling, but merely advisory, in a case which must be determined upon its own particular facts.⁴¹ The application of the doctrine of stare decisis to decisions on questions of fact is considered in § 212 infra.

§ 211. Advisory Opinions

Answers by justices to questions propounded by other departments of the government do not constitute an adjudication, and are not stare decisis, but merely advisory.

Where the justices of a court, pursuant to constitutional provisions, answer questions propounded to them by other departments of government such as the legislative or executive, such answers are not an adjudication, but merely advisory, and not within the doctrine of stare decisis,⁴² even though the opinion was given after hearing argument on both sides.⁴³ However, in answering questions submitted to it, the court is bound by decisions rendered by it in the course of regular litigation, on matters respecting which it is the final authority.⁴⁴

§ 212. Decisions on Questions of Fact

Decisions on questions of fact are not ordinarily stare decisis, but may be advisory.

The doctrine of stare decisis does not ordinarily apply to decisions on questions of fact so as to render them binding in later cases,⁴⁵ although they may

"The rule of stare decisis is especially applicable to decisions on matters of procedure and practice."—Horton v. Wright, Barrett & Stilwell Co., 174 N.W. 67, 43 N.D. 114.

In a criminal case the best way for trial court to accomplish just results for both defendant and people is to follow practice set forth in well-considered cases which have stood test of time.—People v. Egan, 275 N.Y.S. 697, 242 App.Div. 507.

Discretion as to new trial

On motions for new trial, the doctrine of stare decisis is applicable, and previous decisions must be followed, notwithstanding statute au-

such decisions have become well established,⁵⁵ even though were it not for such prior decisions a contrary conclusion might be reached.⁵⁶

However, courts will more freely change judicially established procedural rules than substantive rules,⁵⁷ and prior decisions as to matters of form and practice will not be followed where they are erroneous or where the rule announced hampers justice,⁵⁸ at least if the error in the former opinion can be corrected without substantial injury to litigants

by reason of reliance on the precedent so established.⁵⁹

§ 214. Construction of Statutes

The doctrine of stare decisis applies with full force to decisions construing statutes or ordinances, especially where the construction has been long acquiesced in, and decisions construing other statutes are authoritative if such statutes are nearly identical with the one under review.

The doctrine of stare decisis applies with full force to decisions construing statutes⁶⁰ or ordinancethorizing new trial gives the presiding justice discretionary power.—Derosby v. Mathieu, 2 A.2d 170, 136 Me. 91.

Absence of precedent

Court is not bound by precedent in determining sufficiency of indictment where there are no precedents.—People v. Farson, 155 N.E. 724, 244 N.Y. 413, affirming 218 N.Y.S. 41, 218 App. Div. 488.

Decisions limited to particular facts

(1) The doctrine of stare decisis does not apply to a decision which does not establish a general rule of practice, but is limited to particular facts.—Southwestern Presbyterian University v. City of Clarksville, 259 S.W. 550, 149 Tenn. 256.

(2) Thus the court's language in its opinion, as to whether a stipulation might be set aside on motion, used in view of a party's right to relief from a particular situation, is not binding as a precedent.—Yonkers Fur Dressing Co. v. Royal Ins. Co., 160 N.E. 778, 247 N.Y. 435, reversing 224 N.Y.S. 941, 222 App. Div. 688.

55. Ind.—Faulkner v. State, 141 N.E. 514, 193 Ind. 663.

Iowa.—McKee v. National Travelers Casualty Ass'n, 282 N.W. 291, 225 Iowa 1200.

Neb.—Patterson v. Kerr, 254 N.W. 704, 127 Neb. 78—Westbrook v. State, 244 N.W. 403, 123 Neb. 817. N.Y.—Meyers v. Credit Lyonnais, 182 N.E. 61, 259 N.Y. 399, 83 A.L.R. 268, reversing 254 N.Y.S. 1052, 235 App. Div. 608, following Garrison v. Newman, 227 N.Y.S. 78, 222 App. Div. 498.

Change by legislative action

(1) If a change is desirable, such change should be made by legislative rather than by judicial action.—T. W. Lind Co. v. Nu-Fastener Co., 108 A. 286, 43 R.I. 31.

(2) A firmly established and long-followed rule of procedure should not be departed from unless it is clear that statute invoked so requires.—Willis & Turner v. Moore & Davis, 271 S.W. 736, 151 Tenn. 582.

Apparently conflicting decisions in later cases involving somewhat similar questions were held not sufficient justification to overthrow decision regarding criminal practice standing unchallenged for over 100 years.—State v. Platt, 151 S.E. 206, 154 S.C. 1.

Appeals

Long-settled uniform rule against single appeal from two independent separate appealable orders will not be changed, whether originally sound in theory or not.—Grievous v. Dana-her, 243 N.W. 916, 60 S.D. 120.

56. Neb.—Patterson v. Kerr, 254 N.W. 704, 127 Neb. 73.

N.Y.—Bernard v. Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York, 253 N.Y.S. 336, 233 App. Div. 384.

N.D.—Horton v. Wright, Barrett & Stilwell Co., 174 N.W. 67, 43 N.D. 114.

15 C.J. p 944 note 10.

In Arkansas

(1) The rule stated in the text has been followed.—Missouri Pacific Transp. Co. v. Sharp, 108 S.W.2d 579, 194 Ark. 405—Washington Fire Ins. Co. v. Hogan, 213 S.W. 7, 139 Ark. 130, 5 A.L.R. 1585.

(2) And it has been held that the court has no right to alter or amend the general rules applicable to testing sufficiency of evidence to support a verdict, notwithstanding such rule may at times work a flagrant injustice, since the precedent is founded on fundamental law governing jury trials, the remedy lies within the lawmaking body, not within the court, and ample protection is given litigant by power inherent in trial court to set aside verdict of jury, where preponderance of evidence is contrary to it.—Missouri Pacific Transp. Co. v. Sharp, supra.

(3) However, it has also been held that decisions as to procedural matters are not as binding, under the stare decisis doctrine, as decisions on substantive matters, and that erroneous rules may be readily altered or abolished.—Chapman & Dewey Lumber Co. v. Means, 88 S.W.2d 829, 191 Ark. 1066.

(4) And this is especially true if such decisions are anomalous to modern law.—Anheuser-Busch v. Manion, 100 S.W.2d 672, 193 Ark. 405.

57. Pa.—McCaffrey v. Schwartz, 132 A. 810, 285 Pa. 561.

Wis.—Scharine v. Huebsch, 234 N.W. 358, 203 Wis. 261.

Absence of opinion

That supreme court denied certiorari to review determination of court of appeals without filing written opinion or memorandum was held not to preclude investigation, in subsequent action, of question decided, involving mere matter of practice.—Lingner v. Lingner, 56 S.W.2d 749, 165 Tenn. 525.

An irregular proceeding, contrary to authority at the time, and never followed, does not create a precedent.—Clark v. Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 102 A. 289, 116 Me. 450, L.R.A.1918B 384.

Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law

(1) Since the prime purpose of the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law was uniformity in decision, the courts in construing that act should readily yield to precedent.—Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York v. Planenscheck, 227 N.W. 387, 200 Wis. 304, 71 A.L.R. 331.

(2) However, only decisions interpreting the uniform act are entitled to much weight as precedents.—Harris v. Esterbrook, 226 N.W. 751, 55 S.D. 538, 70 A.L.R. 241.

(3) And cases under the act are to be decided without reference to the authority of decisions prior to the act, since such a practice would tend to destroy the uniformity of the act and to cause confusion in the law of commercial paper instead of making it clear.—Austin, Nichols & Co. v. Gross, 120 A. 596, 98 Conn. 782.

Insolvency statutes

The doctrine of stare decisis has been applied to decisions construing insolvency statutes.—McAllister v. Samuel, 17 Pa. 114—32 C.J. p 818 note 8.

Mortgage in statutory form

Since legislature has by statute construed meaning of statutory form of mortgage and court of appeals has definitely settled any uncertainty relative thereto, court cannot construe instrument according to apparent intent of parties if in statutory form.—Leakey v. Schwing, 270 N. Y.S. 69, 150 Misc. 150.

Decision as to repeal

A decision as to whether a particular statutory provision had been repealed is conclusive.—Osborne's Guardian v. Chatham, 226 S.W. 101, 189 Ky. 754.

Hypothetical judgments

The contemporaneous compliance of some surrogates with the state comptroller's request to make hypothetical judgments based on contingencies, is not a contemporary construction of the law which will control another surrogate.—In re Sprigarn's Estate, 159 N.Y.S. 605, 96 Misc. 141, reversed on other grounds 162 N.Y.S. 695, 175 App.Div. 806—59 C.J. p 1036 note 39.

unless such construction will affect contract or property rights.⁶⁴ However, while such decisions should not be disturbed unless there are cogent reasons for holding that the former construction was erroneous,⁶⁵ the rule is not so absolutely fixed as to preclude the overruling of decisions which are plainly erroneous.⁶⁶

Effect of acquiescence. This rule is especially applicable where the construction placed on a statute by previous decisions has been long acquiesced in⁶⁷

by the legislature, by its continued use or failure to change the language of the statute so construed,⁶⁸ the power to change the law as interpreted being regarded, in such circumstances, as one to be exercised solely by the legislature.⁶⁹

Nature of previous consideration; similarity of questions. In order that a decision be a precedent on the construction of a statute, within the rule of stare decisis, not only must the statute have been considered therein,⁷⁰ but the construction of the

As indication of approval by the people

Where the legislature has twice met and is in session a third time since a decision construing a statute, and no amendment of the statute has been made, it must be concluded that the law as so construed has the approval of the people, and, unless unconstitutional, must be followed.—Board of Medical Examiners of Utah v. Blair, 196 P. 221, 57 Utah 516.

Attempts to procure modification

Decision, adopting construction rendering statute valid, which was accepted for more than five years as conclusive adjudication on question, persons objecting to such construction having attempted without success to procure modification by legislature of effect of that decision, will not be overruled merely because construction of legislative meaning may be doubtful.—Swiss Oil Corporation v. Statute not expressly mentioned

A statute will be deemed to have been construed by a decision, although not expressly referred to in the opinion, where the statute was cited in the briefs and in the motion for rehearing, and the construction of the statute was the controlling question in the case.—Second Nat. Bank v. McGehee, Tex.Civ. App., 241 S.W. 287.

Cases decided before enactment of statute are not authority on construction of the statute.

U.S.—North Philadelphia Trust Co. v. Smith, C.C.A.N.J., 13 F.2d 585 statute must have been directly involved in the case,⁷¹ and necessary to a decision of the issues.⁷² However, decisions construing statutory provisions are controlling in later cases even though the relief sought or the remedy pursued is different, where the question involved under the statute is the same;⁷³ and while they are generally not authoritative where the particular question,⁷⁴ or the particular portion of the statute,⁷⁵ involved in the later case was not considered in the prior decisions, or where the facts in the earlier cases and the instant case are different,⁷⁶ they are binding where, while not deciding the precise point in question, they are in their logical implications of controlling significance.⁷⁷

A doctrine of law or equity may be decisive of a question under a statute, although not announced in a case in the supreme court wherein the statute was up for consideration.⁷⁸

Construction of similar statutes or provisions. While decisions construing earlier or other statutes are authoritative where such statutes are identical or nearly identical in language or in principle with the one under review,⁷⁹ particularly where it appears that the legislative body knew of the prior decisions,⁸⁰ the doctrine of stare decisis cannot be invoked in favor of decisions on statutes which, while similar in some respects, are essentially different.⁸¹ Likewise a judicial interpretation of one

Presumption

Where supreme court's attention was not directed to a statute until a rehearing petition on a motion to re-tax costs was filed, it will be assumed, in determining whether case is a precedent, that court did not consider statute in question.—Jose v. Hunter, 124 N.E. 65, 63 Ind.App. 298.

Validity of ordinance or resolution

The validity of an ordinance or resolution, under a statute, is not conclusively determined by a former decision in which its validity was merely assumed.

Different application of statute

In determining the procedure to be followed in the county civil court, which was created by a statute which provides among other things that its proceedings are to be governed by the statutes relating to justice of the peace courts, highly technical decisions construing the latter statutes are not binding, where they are contrary to the legislative intent, manifested in other parts of the civil court act, to simplify procedure.—*State v. Change in statute

In determining whether rule of procedure was changed by statute, supreme court was not bound by its decisions in previous cases, continuing to apply the former rule after the change had allegedly become effective, where the question had not been presented and considered in such previous cases.—Walker v. Money, Tex., 120 S.W.2d 428, affirming, Civ.App., 93 S.W.2d 602.

Burden of proving similarity of facts

Where the interpretation of a statute in a prior case is relied on by a party to an action, it is not necessary for him to show that the same facts exist which existed in and governed the determination of that case, but the opposite party should prove, before he can ask for a reversal of that decision, that such facts do not exist in the case at bar.—*Wood v. References to other provisions

The fact that a decision, construing a statutory provision very similar to the one under review, refers to other provisions of the former statute, which are not contained in the latter statute, would not deprive such decision of weight in construing the latter statute, where such references were purely incidental.—*People v. part of a section of a statute will be followed in interpreting another part to the extent that the substantive effect of the language of both parts is the same.⁸²

Decisions as to meanings of particular words. In determining the meaning and scope of particular words used in a statute, courts are bound not only by decisions under the statute,⁸³ but also by decisions defining the words with respect to the general subject,⁸⁴ unless a different meaning is unmistakably indicated.⁸⁵ However, a judicial definition of a term in one statute is not controlling as to the meaning of the same term in another statute which is materially different.⁸⁶

Effect of matters subsequent to decision. In construing statutes, the law most recently established prevails over conflicting law previously established,⁸⁷ and a prior construction of a statute is not binding after such statute, by being made part of another statute having a different application, becomes a restatement of a constitutional provision, to be guided by decisions, if any, as to such provision;⁸⁸ but it has been held that decisions construing a statute may be looked to even after the statute has been changed, in order to aid in determining related matters.⁸⁹ Where a decision construing a statute was influenced by another statute, the repeal of the latter statute will not affect the conclusiveness of the decision where there was no intention, by such repeal, to change the law.⁹⁰

§ 215. Construction of Constitutional Provisions; Constitutionality of Statutes

Ordinarily courts will not inquire into constitutional questions previously decided.

Changing circumstances

(1) That times and conditions have changed affords no reason for holding unconstitutional an act which was once approved on judicial review and has stood unchallenged for nearly a third of a century since such decision was announced.—State v. Cranston, Idaho, 85 P.2d 682.

(2) However, since a police regulation, valid when made, may become, by reason of later events, arbitrary and confiscatory in operation, a former decision sustaining such a regulation does not preclude subsequent suit to test validity of assessments thereunder in light of later actual experience.

U.S.—Able State Bank v. Weaver, 51 S.Ct. 252, 282 U.S. 765, 75 L.Ed. 690, affirming 227 N.W. 922, 119 Neb. 153.

(3) It has been held that a decision on a constitutional question need not be followed where the facts in the instant case are different from those in the former decision, particularly where the former decision was dictum and erroneous.—Prall v. Burckhardt, 132 N.E. 280, 299 Ill. 19, 13 A.L.R. 992.

overruling them;⁹⁵ and this is especially true where such decisions have been long relied on as authoritative,⁹⁶ or where such decisions have become rules of property, as shown infra § 216.

However, it has been stated in some early cases that the doctrine of stare decisis cannot control questions involving the construction and interpretation of the organic law at least where no rule of property is involved,⁹⁷ or at least that the doctrine does not apply with the same force to decisions on constitutional questions as to other decisions,⁹⁸ and while previous decisions will not be entirely disregarded and may, in case of doubt, control the views of the court, they will be considered merely as authorities tending to aid in arriving at a proper conclusion, and not as a rule to be followed without inquiry.⁹⁹

Questions not expressly considered. While prior decisions in which the construction of a constitutional provision or the constitutionality of a statute was assumed, but not expressly raised or considered, are not ordinarily controlling,¹ at least if that question was not necessarily involved in the case,² it has been held that prior decisions vesting property rights under a statute are stare decisis as to the constitutionality of the statute, even though that question was not expressly considered.³ Also, it has been held that a statute will be assumed to have been held invalid, even though it was not mentioned in the opinion, where evidence of its invalidity was submitted to the court, and the result reached obviously gave no effect to the statute.⁴

Moreover, while it has been held that a previous decision upholding the constitutionality of a statute concludes all objections to its constitutionality, whether such objections were considered in the previous case or not,⁵ it is more commonly held that a Similar enactments; amendments. While it has been held that a decision on the validity of a statute may be reconsidered where the constitutional inter-

Judicial notice of state of law

It will be presumed that the United States supreme court took judicial notice of the state of law existing at the time it rendered its decision upholding the validity of a statute, thereby foreclosing an objection based on the effect of another statute, where such objection was raised in a later case involving a similar statute under similar circumstances.—Schenley Products Co. v. Particular provisions is authoritative as to a particular provision of which the court, in its statement of the contents of the act, took note.—Haas v. Greenwald, 237 P. 38, 196 Cal. 236, 59 A.L.R. 1493, affirmed 48 S.Ct. 33, 275 U.S. 490, 72 L.Ed. 389.

(1) A decision sustaining the constitutionality of a statute as a whole

(2) A decision as to constitutionality of statutory provision does not prevent consideration of constitutionality of another independent provision of same statute.—Tyler v. U. S., D.C.Md., 28 F.2d 887, reversed on other grounds, C.C.A., U. S. v. Tyler, 33 F.2d 724, certiorari granted Tyler v. U. S., 50 S.Ct. 81, 280 U.S. 548, 74 L.Ed. 607, and affirmed 50 S.Ct. 356, 281 U.S. 497, 74 L.Ed. 991, 69 A.L.R. 758, reversing, C.C.A., U. S. v. Girard Trust Co., 35 F.2d 343.

(3) Decision of the United States supreme court, if a holding that the Minimum Wage Law is violative of the federal constitution in so far as the act relates to adult women, does not constitute a holding that the act is unconstitutional as to minors, where court took pains to exclude from consideration the right of the legislature to fix a minimum wage for minors.—Stevenson v. Determination of distinctions

Court of appeals will not attempt to determine whether there are distinctions between present and former laws that would cause supreme court to change opinion as to validity.—Chastleton Corporation v. Sinclair, 290 F. 348, 53 App.D.C. 373, reversed on other grounds 44 S.Ct. 405, 264 U.S. 543, 68 L.Ed. 841.

Acceptance of finding of emergency by legislature

Federal supreme court having acquiesced in state legislature's finding of emergency producing wide-spread unemployment in opinion sustaining validity of state law, district court must accept a similar finding by congress in determining validity of federal law.—U. S. v. Suburban Motor Service Corporation, D.C.Ill., 5 F. Supp. 798.

Statute upheld by inference

Previous decisions upholding by inference the constitutionality of a statute are entitled to great weight in determining the validity of another statute which is almost identical with the first.—Cornell v. Harris, 59 P.2d 570, 15 Cal.App.2d 144, followed in 59 P.2d 575, 15 Cal. App.2d 763.

Effect of particular phrase

A decision as to the effect of a particular phrase on the constitutionality of a statute is controlling in a case involving an identical phrase in a similar statute.—Commonwealth v. Gardner, 147 A. 527, 297 Pa. 498, denying appeal 96 Pa.Super. 450.

Statutes of other jurisdictions

(1) In considering the validity, under the federal constitution, of a state statute substantially similar to a statute of another state, contrary decision as to statute of the other state by the United States supreme court is not necessarily controlling on state court if it can be fairly demonstrated that the statutes are not identical, or, for other reasons, should receive different interpretations.—Abbye Employment Agency v.

tack are the same.¹⁰ Although a decision that an act was constitutional is not conclusive of the validity of an amending act which made substantial changes in the original act,¹¹ a decision that a statute is valid on one ground of attack is conclusive on that question as to all purposes embodied in an amendatory act which merely broadened the purposes of the original act.¹² A decision construing a term in a constitution is controlling in construing the same term, used in a similar clause, in a later constitution.¹³

§ 216. Decisions Constituting Rules of Property

Subject to some exceptions, final decisions of courts of last resort which have become established rules of property will ordinarily be adhered to even when erroneous.

Where judicial decisions may be fairly presumed to have entered into the business transactions of a country, and have become established as rules of property, it is the duty of the court, on the principle of stare decisis, to adhere to such decisions without regard to how it might be inclined to decide if the question were new,¹⁴ and they should not be dis-

Robinson, 2 N.Y.S.2d 947, 166 Misc. 820.

(2) In determining the validity of condemnation proceedings under a federal statute, decisions dealing with such proceedings under state statutes are not controlling, since, the powers of the two sovereignties being different, what is a public use under one sovereign may not be a public use under the other.—U. S. v. Certain Lands in City of Louisville, Jefferson County, Ky., C.C.A.Ky., 78 F.2d 684, affirming, D.C., 9 F.Supp. 137, and certiorari granted U. S. v. Certain Lands in City of Louisville, 56 S.Ct. 154, 296 U.S. 567, 80 L.Ed. 400, affirmed 56 S.Ct. 594, 297 U.S. 726, 80 L.Ed. 1009.

New statute incorporating old

The constitutionality of a statute is not conclusively determined by a decision as to a prior statute which constitutes part of the statute under review, since the affinity of the parts is not the affinity of the whole.—R. C. Tway Coal Co. v. Glenn, D. C.Ky., 12 F.Supp. 570.

Matters assumed in previous decisions

Decisions which have assumed the validity of certain deeds, and have been relied on by the people and bar of the state, should not be held erroneous, unless there is no alternative, when to do so would result in disturbing many titles.—Blackman v. Blackman, 43 P.2d 1011, 45 Ariz. 374.

This rule applies only to final decisions¹⁸ of courts of last resort.¹⁹ Under this rule, if any change in the law is necessary it should be made by the legislature;²⁰ and the doctrine of rule of property has no operation as against subsequent legislation.²¹

While courts will not ordinarily adhere to previous decisions which are plainly erroneous, as appears in § 193 supra, they will be much more reluctant to depart from the law as declared in a prior decision where the principles declared affect property rights and commercial transactions,²² and the doctrine of stare decisis obtains, even though the court may be of the belief that such decisions are founded on an erroneous principle and are not sound;²³ but the rule is not so absolutely fixed as to preclude the overruling of plainly erroneous decisions, where it is apparent that the beneficial results to be obtained by a departure from the rule will greatly exceed any disastrous effects likely to flow therefrom.²⁴

Stability is especially requisite in the law in regard to titles to real property. Titles may be dependent largely or wholly on previous decisions, and landed interests would be jeopardized by sudden or frequent changes in the interpretation or construction of legal principles.—Stuart v. Gough, 237 P. 847, 352, 111 Okl. 42, quoting Corpus Juris—15 C.J. p 949 notes 47, 49.

Absence of opinion

That a decree declaring a tax deed ineffectual to pass title was rendered without written opinion made it no less binding in subsequent cases as declarative of the law of the title to such realty, being necessarily relied on by every one examining the title thereto and purchasing any part thereof.—Burr v. White Oak Lumber Co., 258 S.W. 798, 149 Tenn. 191.

Inferior or intermediate courts

No such finality attaches to the decisions of the inferior or intermediate courts that they can be considered as establishing a rule of property, however uniform their course of decisions or however long continued.—Jackson v. Carroll, 207 P. 735, 86 Okl. 230.

State court's decision on federal question is not final, and cannot constitute a rule of property, since state court is not the court of last resort on a federal question.—Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co., 59 P. 607, 27 Colo. 1, 83 Am.S.R. 17, 50 L.R.A. 209, affirmed 21 S.Ct. 835, 182 U.S. 499, 45 L.Ed. 1200—15 C.J. p 949 note 50 [b]. ation of statutes. The doctrine of stare decisis, with respect to decisions which have become rules of property, includes decisions on questions of constitutional law,²⁵ or the construction and operation of statutes,²⁶ which have become established as rules of property.

Exceptions to rule. The application of the rule stated above is not without exceptions, and depends largely on the circumstances of the case under consideration,²⁷ and a rule of property is an equitable rule to be invoked only to protect honest investments made in reliance on decisions relating thereto.²⁸ Thus, while as a general rule the doctrine has been applied to decisions relating to the law of descent²⁹ and the construction of wills,³⁰ it has been held that it cannot be invoked by persons claiming the right to inherit the property of a decedent, since no one can have a vested right of inheritance;³¹ nor does it apply to decisions rendered subsequent to the acquisition of alleged property rights, since they could not have been relied on as establishing a rule of property;³² nor can it be invoked to protect rights acquired as a result of a marriage, rather than under a contract.³³

The doctrine of rule of property cannot be applied to validate conveyances made in violation of Construction contrary to intent of statute

(1) To make a line of decisions a rule of property they must be uniform and consistent, and not in conflict, within the plain expression of the statute, for the statute law, unless in conflict with some provision of the Constitution, is supreme.—Patterson v. McCormick, 99 S.E. 401, 177 N.C. 448.

(2) Doctrine of rule of property should not weigh with supreme court in abolition of precedent not sustainable in reason and in contravention of terms of statute relied on to support it, and which has wrought injustice in every instance of its subsequent application.—Klocke v. governmental policy;³⁴ nor can the doctrine be applied to prevent the operation of the state's police power, since there can be no property rights which are not subject to that power.³⁵

C. OPINIONS

§ 217. Necessity

- a. Definitions and distinctions
- b. When required or permitted
- c. Advisory opinion

a. Definitions and Distinctions

As a judicial determination, an "opinion" is a statement by a court or judge of the reasons for the decision, and, in such sense, is distinguishable from "decree," "judgment," "mandate," and "order." A "judicial opinion" is one determining the issues before the court. An "extrajudicial opinion" is one given as to matters not in issue. A "per curiam opinion" is one given in a case in which the judges are agreed and fuller statement is not regarded as necessary.

In the sense of a determination by a court or judge, the term "opinion" has been variously defined as the conclusions of a judge on an issue before him;³⁶ an expression of the views of the court³⁷ or of the judge;³⁸ the announcement of the reason or reasons for the conclusion the court has reached;³⁹ the reasons given by a court for its judgment;⁴⁰ the statement of reasons delivered by a judge or court for giving the judgment which is pronounced upon a case;⁴¹ the written statement by the court of its reasons for the conclusion reached from an examination of the law and of the facts in controversy;⁴² the statement by a judge or court of the decision reached with regard to a cause tried or agreed before them, expounding the law as applied to the case, and detailing the reasons upon which the judgment is based;⁴³ and what is said by the court as to its conclusion.⁴⁴ It is often merely an indication of what the decree should be, a kind of direction to the attorney or clerk how to draw a judgment.⁴⁵

The term "opinion" has been distinguished by the authorities from "decree,"⁴⁶ "judgment,"⁴⁷ "man-

Distinctions

(1) "The opinion of the Judge is the expression of the reasons by which he reaches his conclusion; these may be consistent or contradictory, clear, or confused. date,"⁴⁸ and "order."⁴⁹ Likewise, as is pointed out in § 181 supra, while "decision" and "opinion" have been said to be without distinction, usually they are distinguishable.

"Judicial opinion" has been defined as one that is on the question before the court; the direct, solemn, and deliberate decision of the court upon the issues raised by the record and presented in the argument.⁵⁰ The phrase has been used in particular connections as synonymous with what has been adjudged or decreed.⁵¹

"Extrajudicial opinion" denotes an opinion given on a question that it was not necessary to decide in the case in which it was given, or on a point which was not then the point in question, or a proposition generally expressed, and which the case, or the circumstances of the case, did not call for, or an opinion on a point which was not the point argued before the court, or upon which the court had pronounced its judgment, or an opinion not called for by the case, and which it was unnecessary to give.⁵²

"Per curiam opinion" is an opinion of the court in a case in which the judges are all of one mind, and which is so clear that it is not considered necessary to elaborate it by an extended discussion.⁵³

b. When Required or Permitted

Except as required by provisions of state constitutions or statutes, opinions need not be written by the court or judge, although the matter rests in the judicial discretion, as a result of which opinions will be written when necessary. In special instances oral opinions may be given, to be followed by written opinions.

It is frequently provided by constitution or statute that opinions of courts, especially those of appellate courts or courts of last resort, shall be in writing, which provisions should be complied with,⁵⁴

Recording of an opinion in the book where judgments are recorded does not make it a judgment.—G. Amsinck & Co. v. Springfield Greer Co., C.C.A.Mo., 7 F.2d 855.

48. Distinction stated

A mandate is a judgment which makes the opinion effective.—Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, 171 S.W. 182, 183, 161 Ky. 660.

49. Distinction

Statutory requirements of opinions by appellate courts as unconstitutional encroachment by legislature on the judiciary see Constitutional Law § 128 e.

In Indiana

(1) While there was no requirement in the state constitution of 1816 that the supreme court give written opinions, such requirement existed by reason of Acts 1816 c 1 § 26.—Hunter v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 174 N.E. 287, 202 Ind. 328.

(2) Following the failure of such court to comply with this statutory requirement, a similar provision was incorporated in Const. 1851 art 7 § 5, which provision continues in subsequent constitutions.—State ex rel. Sluss v. Appellate Court of Indiana, 17 N.E.2d 324, 214 Ind. 686—Kryder v. State, 15 N.E.2d 386, 214 Ind. 419, appeal dismissed Kryder v. State of Indiana, 59 S.Ct. 154, 305 U.S. 570, 83 L.Ed. 359—Hunter v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., supra—Trayser v. Indiana Asbury University, 39 Ind. 556—Willets v. Ridgeway, 9 Ind. 367—Hand v. Taylor, 4 Ind. 409.

(3) This provision was prospective only.—Hand v. Taylor, supra.

(4) Such provision did not control the appellate court.—Craig v. Bennett, 62 N.E. 273, 158 Ind. 9, denying appeal 60 N.E. 1124, 27 Ind.App. 704.

(5) Moreover, under Acts 1901 c 247 § 17, providing that in every case reversed by a division of the appellate court an opinion shall be given on the material questions therein in writing, etc., a substitute for Acts 1891 c 37 § 13, it was formerly held that a written opinion was not required where a judgment was affirmed.—Roetzel v. State, 172 N.E. 551, 96 Ind.App. 661, denying rehearing 171 N.E. 206, 96 Ind.App. 661—15 C.J. p 967 note 82 [b] (2).

(6) The present rule is that, in view of Acts 1901 c 247 § 15, providing that appeals to the appellate court shall be taken in the same manner and with the same effect and subject to the same limitations as are now or hereafter may be provided in case of appeals to the supreme court, etc., coupled with Ind.Const. 1851 art 7 § 5, even in case of affirmation the appellate court must give a statement in writing of each question arising in the record of such case, as to which duty it is not relieved by Acts 1901 c 247 § 17.—State ex rel. Sluss v. Appellate Court of Indiana, 17 N.E.2d 324, 214 Ind. 686—Sluss v. Thermoid Rubber Co., 174 N.E. 291, 202 Ind. 338—Myers v. Newcomer, 174 N.E. 290, 202 Ind. 335, denying transfer, App., 172 N.E. 927—Hunter v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 174 N.E. 287, 202 Ind. 328.

(7) Acts 1901 c 247 § 15, reenacted as Burns St.Annot.1926 § 1351, has been held not unreasonable.—Hunter v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., supra.

(8) However, the holding of Hunter v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., supra, is limited to cases appealed to the appellate court, and such court is not required to give a written opinion or decision in an original action filed in that court.—J. S. Cruise Realty Co. v. Imfeld, 184 N.E. 407, 204 Ind. 419.

(9) In criminal cases particularly, an opinion must be given, in view of Burns St.Annot.1926 § 2397, providing that all opinions of the supreme court or the appellate court in criminal prosecutions must be given in writing, etc.—Burkus v. State, 174 N.E. 292, 202 Ind. 341.

In Oklahoma

(1) Const. art 7 § 5 requires the supreme court to render a written opinion in each case after said case has been finally submitted for decision.—In re Initiative Petition No.

but it has been held that such requirements are directory merely,⁵⁵ and should not be followed to such an extent as to swell the length of opinions unduly or so as to render ineffective provisions of a state constitution looking to a prompt determination of cases under submission.⁵⁶ In some jurisdictions appellate courts are required by the constitution to give the reason or reasons why they decline to exercise their supervisory jurisdiction.⁵⁷

Under some statutes written opinions by appellate courts are not required where the decision merely reaffirms previous decisions, or relates to questions of fact only, or when the case decided would, in their opinion, serve no useful purpose as a precedent.⁵⁸

In the absence of some positive requirement, it is not necessary that a court rendering a decision should in all cases give a written opinion,⁵⁹ or even

(2) Necessity of opinion by court of criminal appeals see infra note 59.

In Texas

(1) Under Rev.Civ.St. arts 1873-1876, the courts of civil appeals are required to give opinions.—Tucker v. Higdon, Civ.App., 115 S.W.2d 973.

(2) However, they need not give opinions when the judgments are final and are affirmances.—Bankers Protective Life Ins. Co. v. Mazingo, Civ.App., 127 S.W.2d 525—Page v. Hart, Civ.App., 124 S.W.2d 399—Tucker v. Higdon, supra—Wrenn v. Reed, Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 851—St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Blair, Civ. App., 44 S.W.2d 399—Godwin v. Hooker, 118 S.W. 765, 55 Tex.Civ.App. 47—Needham v. Hickey, Civ.App., 61 S.W. 433.

(3) This is particularly true where no new questions of law are presented.—Jackson v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., Civ.App., 114 S.W. 2d 598.

(4) So, where court of civil appeals concluded that trial court was correct in holding that plaintiff motorist was not shown to have been guilty of contributory negligence that constituted proximate cause of collision, no written opinion was required of the court.—Roddy v. Herren, Civ.App., 125 S.W.2d 1057.

Suit against United States

Federal courts having jurisdiction of suits against the United States have a statutory duty of causing a written opinion to be filed.—P. H. & F. M. Roots Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Ind., 17 F.2d 337.

55. W.Va.—State v. Smith, 193 S.E. 573, 119 W.Va. 347—Hall v. Bank of Virginia, 15 W.Va. 323—Renick v. Ludington, 15 W.Va. 323—Henry v. Davis, 13 W.Va. 230, 15 C.J. p 967 note 83.

In Indiana

(1) Const.1851 art 7 § 5, providing that the supreme court shall, upon the decision of every case, give a statement in writing of each question arising in the record of such case and the decision of the court thereon, is merely directory, and should be construed so as to obviate its inconvenience and objectionable character, as far as conveniently can be done.—Trayser v. Indiana Asbury University, 39 Ind. 556—Willets v. Ridgeway, 9 Ind. 367.

(2) Such provision must be given reasonable interpretation, as well as practical application, so as not to require such court to exhaust every subject raised on appeal without regard to its importance in determination of cause.—State ex rel. Sluss v. Appellate Court of Indiana, 17 N.E.2d 824, 214 Ind. 686.

56. Mo.—Smarr v. Smarr, 6 S.W.2d 360, 319 Mo. 1153.

A judgment of conviction for violating prohibition law will be affirmed without further written opinion, where record appears regular and decision merely reaffirms previous decisions or relates to fact questions only.—Frederick v. State, 188 So. 272, 28 Ala.App. 494.

Intermediate court must follow policy of the court of last resort respecting statutory provision that justices and judges need not write opinions where their decisions merely reaffirm previous decisions or relate to fact questions only.—Frederick v. State, 188 So. 272, 28 Ala.App. 494.

59. Mich.—Public Welfare Commission v. Civil Service Commission, 286 N.W. 173, 174, 289 Mich. 101, citing Corpus Juris.

Miss.—Robertson v. Mississippi Valley Co., 81 So. 799, 120 Miss. 159. Neb.—Blodgett v. Cox, 203 N.W. 1007, 113 Neb. 463, 15 C.J. p 967 note 84.

Consent judgment

A case may be reversed in the court of last resort without opinion as to extent of error when appellee files confession of errors indorsed by appellant consenting that order of reversal be entered.—Evans v. Green, Fla., 189 So. 232.

Interlocutory order

Where an appeal is taken from an interlocutory order overruling a general demurrer to a bill of complaint in an equity case and it appears to the court that the allegations of the bill sufficiently state an equity for appropriate relief, the interlocutory order appealed from may be affirmed by the court without discussing in an opinion the several contentions made on the appeal.—Weathers v. Tyler, 97 So. 311, 86 Fla. 181—Crosland v. Brickell, 97 So. 286, 86 Fla. 91.

Affirmance of judgment by divided court renders opinion by court impossible, so that it need not be delivered.—Rose v. Squires, 133 A. 488, 102 N.J.Law 449, affirming 128 A. 880, 101 N.J.Law 438—Light v. Light, 124 A. 448, 95 N.J.Eq. 779, equally divided court affirming 124 A. 359, 95 N.J.Eq. 779—15 C.J. p 967 note 84 [e].

Disagreement as to reason for decision

(1) Where majority of court cannot agree upon reasons for action taken, opinions by the several judges can serve no useful purpose.—State v. Beck, 239 N.W. 184, 59 S.D. 207.

(2) Thus, where majority of court agrees that judgment should be affirmed, but disagrees as to reason, judgment will be affirmed without opinion setting forth other reasons.—Thomas v. City of Ft. Pierre, 241 N.W. 327, 59 S.D. 519.

(3) So, where a majority of court believes that defendant did not receive fair and impartial trial guaranteed by constitution, but differs as to grounds, judgment will be reversed without opinions.—State v. Beck, supra.

Federal court

The writing of a considered opinion by district court on the facts in an equity case is supererogatory in view of necessity of formal findings of fact and conclusions of law.—Bassevi v. Edward O'Toole Co., D.C.N.Y., 26 F.Supp. 41.

In Ohio

(1) Court of appeals is not required by constitution or statute to state the reasons for the conclusion reached.⁶⁰

Whether or not a written opinion shall be prepared and filed in a particular case is generally considered to rest in the discretion of the court,⁶¹ which will ordinarily prepare a written opinion where this is deemed necessary,⁶² but not otherwise.⁶³ However, even though an opinion is not required by statute, one should be written where the case involves the application of an old principle, a restatement of which is necessary,⁶⁴ or where write an opinion.—Feeman v. State, 1 N.E.2d 620, 131 Ohio St. 85.

(2) Gen.Code § 12248, providing that in case of reversal and remand the court of appeals shall state the error upon which the judgment of reversal was founded, does not refer to a written opinion.—Feeman v. State, supra.

(3) Affirmance of municipal court conviction by court of appeals without opinion held not error.—Feeman v. State, supra.

In Oklahoma, where a majority of the judges of the criminal court of appeals are unable to agree on legal questions involved on the application for a writ of habeas corpus, but agree that the petitioner is entitled to be released from custody, he will be discharged by memorandum opinion, especially when no good purpose would be served by a discussion of the questions raised.—Ex parte Flowers, 140 P. 914, 11 Okl.Cr. 381.

60. N.C.—Bradsher v. Cheek, 17 S. E. 533, 112 N.C. 338, 15 C.J. p 967 note 85.

Rulings

(1) A judge ordinarily cannot be compelled to state the reasons for any ruling given, or request for ruling refused.—Williams v. Pittsfield Lime & Stone Co., 154 N.E. 572, 258 Mass. 65.

15 C.J. p 967 note 85 [a] (2).

(2) So he may properly refuse to give reasons for a ruling requiring an election between two counts.—Williams v. Pittsfield Lime & Stone Co., supra.

61. N.C.—Parker v. Webb, 161 S.E. 730, 202 N.C. 818—State v. Council, 39 S.E. 814, 129 N.C. 511, 15 C.J. p 968 note 86.

Voluntary dismissal

(1) While a state constitution provision that the supreme court shall render a written opinion in each case after said case shall have been submitted for decision does not apply to a dismissal before final submission, nevertheless the court has discretion, as one of the terms it may impose as a condition precedent to granting leave to dismiss, to state whatever facts it may deem necessary.—In re Initiative Petition No. 112, State Question No. 167, 7 P.2d 868, 154 Okl. 257.

(2) Imposition of terms by court generally as condition precedent to granting leave for voluntary dismissal see the C.J.S. title Dismissal and Nonsuit § 37, also 18 C.J. p 1168 note 86—p 1170 note 13.

62. Tenn.—Beard v. Beard, 14 S.W. 2d 745, 153 Tenn. 437, 15 C.J. p 968 note 87.

Federal court

(1) Necessity for federal court to enjoin enforcement of state law or action of state officials should be shown by an opinion of court.—Arkansas Railroad Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Ark., 47 S.Ct. 724, 274 U.S. 597, 71 L.Ed. 1224—Lawrence v. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co., Okl., 47 S.Ct. 730, 274 U.S. 538, 71 L.Ed. 1219.

(2) The reason is that the respect due to the state demands that the need for nullifying the action of its legislature or of its executive officials be persuasively shown.—Lawrence v. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co., supra.

(3) Federal court dismissing bill to set aside order requiring railroad to make switch connection with side track should render opinion setting forth reasons.—Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. U. S., Ill., 48 S.Ct. 189, 275 U.S. 404, 72 L.Ed. 838.

In sustaining new trial granted for law errors, reviewing court must declare law applicable.—Hoooven Radiator Co. v. Little Motor Kar Co., Tex.Civ.App., 291 S.W. 313.

Certiorari

On petition for certiorari where the reviewing court has a divergence of opinion from that of the lower court, or merely concurs in the result reached without approving of the reasoning or authorities cited, it files a differentiating opinion.—Beard v. Beard, 14 S.W.2d 745, 153 Tenn. 437.

Statutes in some jurisdictions expressly so provide.—Parker v. Webb, 161 S.E. 730, 202 N.C. 818—State v. Council, 39 S.E. 814, 129 N.C. 511—Bradsher v. Cheek, 17 S.E. 533, 112 N.C. 338.

63. Miss.—Union Indemnity Co. v. Shirley, 150 So. 825, 170 Miss. 594, overruling suggestion of error 150 So. 224.

15 C.J. p 968 note 88.

Approval of lower court's opinion

(1) Written opinion by appellate court denying certiorari to review determination of intermediate appellate court is unnecessary, where the court of last resort concurs in reasoning of such intermediate court.—Beard v. Beard, 14 S.W.2d 745, 153 Tenn. 437.

(2) Where an appellate court approves opinion rendered by an intermediate appellate court, proper practice is merely to express approval of such opinion.—McCombs v. Abrams, Tex.Com.App., 48 S.W.2d 612, affirming, Civ.App., 28 S.W.2d 584—Texas & Pacific Ry. Co. v. Baldwin, Tex. Com.App., 44 S.W.2d 909.

Case valueless as precedent

Where case would be valueless as a precedent, no opinion will be written.—Coppersmith v. Cook, 144 S.E. 824, 196 N.C. 799.

Former decisions

Appellate court would not write opinion on question which was ruled against appellant by former decisions.—Union Indemnity Co. v. Shirley, 150 So. 825, 170 Miss. 594, overruling suggestion of error 150 So. 224.

Moot case

Where a case becomes moot pending application for supersedeas on appeal, no opinion is necessary.—Portman v. Housel, 226 P. 1117, 75 Colo. 506.

Points well settled

When points of law are well settled and discussion would be useless, decree will be affirmed without opinion.—City of Miami Beach v. Poin-dexter, 119 So. 136, 96 Fla. 811.

Rehearing

An appellate court adhering to original opinion does not, on rehearing, write opinions as to matters therein discussed.—Austin Bros. v. Patton, Tex.Com.App., 294 S.W. 537, denying motion 288 S.W. 182, which reversed, Civ.App., 245 S.W. 991, and which modified 290 S.W. 153.

To permit filing of suggestions of error

In a case not otherwise required by statute, a written opinion will not be given merely to enable counsel to file suggestions of error.—Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. James, 67 So. 484, 108 Miss. 852, denying motion for written opinion 67 So. 464.

64. Miss.—Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. James, supra.

the question involved is one of great public interest or importance or difficulty.⁶⁵

In some jurisdictions rules of court require commissioners of appeal to prepare such opinions as may be directed by the court.⁶⁶

Whether or not a trial court in admiralty may write an opinion is discussed in Admiralty § 147.

Oral opinion, followed by a written opinion, may be given, when special circumstances require a prompt decision.⁶⁷

A per curiam opinion is proper in a mandamus proceeding as to elections where time is too short to permit the promulgation of an opinion contemporaneously with entry of judgment awarding a peremptory writ, to be followed by a written opinion.⁶⁸

Findings of fact and opinion, when required, may be combined in a single document.⁶⁹

Where the civil law prevails, judgments and opinions are sometimes combined.⁷⁰

Number of opinions. Even though separate appeals have been taken, where a joint abstract and record has been filed, with appeals argued together, and separate briefs filed, only one opinion is required.⁷¹

c. Advisory Opinion

Advisory opinions will not be given by a court to a lower court after the latter has rendered judgment, nor will such opinions be given in order to influence future litigation.

A court will not give an advisory opinion to a lower court after the latter has rendered judgment;⁷² nor may an appellate court file an advisory opinion for the purpose of influencing future litigation.⁷³

Whether appellate courts, in reviewing cases, will include matters of purely advisory nature is considered in Appeal and Error § 1455.

Power of judiciary to render advisory opinions at the request of some other department or officer of the government is considered in Constitutional Law § 150, and the jurisdiction to render advisory opinions supra in § 36.

§ 218. Preparation, Filing, and Withdrawal

An opinion may be written by a judge who did not hear the argument, where the opinion is concurred in by those who did hear the argument, or where a statutory requirement that the opinion be written by a judge hearing the argument is waived. Opinions must be filed within the time specified by constitution or statute, and generally within a reasonable time after rendition of judgment. Both trial and appellate courts may withdraw their opinions.

Prior to the delivery of an opinion of an appellate court, the entire membership of the court considers the record, after a careful and painstaking consultation.⁷⁴ A judge who did not hear the oral argument may write such opinion where it is concurred in by the other judges who heard such argument,⁷⁵ or where a statutory requirement that in case of an oral argument the opinion must be delivered by a justice who heard such argument is waived.⁷⁶

Filing. The time within which a written opinion shall be filed is sometimes specified by the constitution or statute, which requirements are directory rather than mandatory.⁷⁷ As a general rule the opinion may be filed within a reasonable time after rendition of the judgment, especially within the term and before an appeal is perfected.⁷⁸ of the record on appeal is considered in the title Appeal and Error § 734. Likewise, whether the opinion must accompany the mandate is considered in the same title at § 1961.

Withdrawal of opinion. A trial court may withdraw its opinion prior to entry of judgment.⁷⁹ Similarly, an appellate court has inherent⁸⁰ power to withdraw its opinion at any time, so long as it retains jurisdiction of the case,⁸¹ in which case of withdrawal such opinion should be treated as not rendered.⁸²

§ 219. Adoption of Opinion of Lower Court

An appellate court may adopt the opinion of the trial court as its own.

Where the opinion of the trial court is contained in the record, an appellate court may, without impropriety, adopt such opinion as its own.⁸³ However, the mere fact that an appellate court refuses an application for a writ of error does not mean that such court necessarily adopts the opinion of the lower court.⁸⁴

§ 220. Supplemental and Modified Opinions

Supplemental opinions are permissible, and both trial and appellate courts may modify their opinions.

A supplemental opinion may be filed as of the date of the first opinion setting forth the facts on which the court acted.⁸⁵ Where the court at the time of reversing and remanding a cause files a summary of its holdings, it may, in its opinion filed after a trial of the remanded cause, include additional reasons for reversing the cause not stated in the summary.⁸⁶

Modified opinion. A trial judge has been said to have the right to withdraw an opinion for revision at any time while the case is pending including during an application for a rehearing.⁸⁷ An appellant who is dissatisfied with the declaration of law contained in an opinion of an appellate court may petition for the modification of the opinion,⁸⁸ and the appellate court has inherent power to modify its opinion at any time, so long as it retains jurisdiction of the case,⁸⁹ as on the hearing of a motion for reargument.⁹⁰ Moreover, if it appears that the original opinion may lead to confusion, it may be modified even after publication, by means of a modifying opinion.⁹¹

§ 221. Scope and Sufficiency

Unless required by statute, an opinion of an appellate court need not discuss and pass upon all points raised, the discussion being limited to meritorious assignments.

89. S.D.—Lynn v. Schirber, 186 N.W. 570, 45 S.D. 10.

Effect

Court's modification of its opinion by striking out statement that, if injunction bond was, insufficient, application should be made to the trial court for relief did not determine that no power remained in the trial court to grant such relief, but merely that the question was not involved.—Eisenberg v. Superior Court in and for City and County of San Francisco, 236 P. 617, 193 Cal. 575.

90. Pa.—Philadelphia v. Jewell, 2 Mon. 734.

Effect of opinion on rehearing

Where a written opinion is filed on rehearing, the original opinion is modified to the extent set out in the second opinion, even though the court has reached the same result so far as the ultimate disposition of the cause is concerned.—Lesh v. Johnston Furniture Co., 13 N.E.2d 708, 214 Ind. 176, motion denied 14 N.E.2d 537.

Under a rule of court providing that opinions shall not be given out until the petition for rehearing is disposed of, the court, instead of, as formerly, handing down a separate opinion on petition for rehearing, will, whenever advisable, correct and reform the original opinion to correct errors pointed out in the petition for rehearing.—Schrodt's Ex'r v. Schrodt, 225 S.W. 151, 189 Ky. 457.

91. Wash.—State ex rel. Hill v. Port of Seattle, 180 P. 137, 104 Wash. 634.

The extent of elaboration rests with the author of the opinion, and generally the evidence supporting the findings, judgment, and verdict need not be set out, nor need the instructions attacked be set forth in all cases.

Unless required by statute or constitutional provisions,⁹² all points raised on the appeal need not be discussed and passed upon by the appellate court in its opinion.⁹³ Whenever possible, lengthy opinions should be avoided.⁹⁴ The opinion is usually no more than statements of facts and comments on legal questions under discussion.⁹⁵

The discussion should be limited to meritorious assignments,⁹⁶ and the court should not indulge in a discussion of the facts of the case, unless it tends to illuminate some legal principle involved.⁹⁷ A court should not give an opinion upon a point of law which is not raised by the evidence.⁹⁸

The purpose of a judicial opinion is to state a rule for the guidance of trial judges and the bar in future cases, and matters which have already been repeatedly decided in prior opinions should not be passed upon.⁹⁹ On the other hand, an opinion

92. In Ohio

(1) Appellate courts have a statutory duty of passing on all errors assigned.—Babbitt v. Shade, 19 N.E. 2d 778, 60 Ohio App. 100.

(2) The statute imposing such duty is mandatory.—Mestetzko v. Elf Motor Co., 165 N.E. 93, 119 Ohio St. 575.

In Texas

(1) It has been said that by statute the court of civil appeals is required to pass specifically upon each assignment of error.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., Civ.App., 220 S.W. 781, reversed on other grounds Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co., Com.App., 239 S.W. 919.

(2) However, the settled rule is that such court need not pass on each assignment separately.—Hill v. Pure Oil Co., Civ.App., 38 S.W.2d 855, error dismissed—Garcia v. Garcia, Civ.App., 4 S.W.2d 257, error dismissed—Cooper v. Newsom, Civ.App., 224 S.W. 568, dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

(3) So, where separate propositions, although framed in different language, present practically the same matter, whether of law or fact, as reversible error, the court in its opinion on appeal need not discuss separately each proposition.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Green, Civ.App., 269 S.W. 877, reversed on other grounds, Com.App., 280 S.W. 198.

(4) However, it may, should it deem the practice advisable, give a full opinion as to all assignments.—Cooper v. Newsom, Civ.App., 224 S.W. 568, dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

(5) It must decide all issues properly presented.—Garcia v. Garcia, Civ.App., 4 S.W.2d 257, error dismissed.

(6) Where a justice wrote an opinion and filed conclusions of fact and law and the other justices concurred in result reached, although not as to reasons given, the court complied with the statute.—Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. Long, 86 S.W.2d 460, 128 Tex. 195, affirming, Civ.App., 51 S.W.2d 426.

93. Cal.—People v. Hirschbein, 55 P. 2d 516, 12 Cal.App.2d 447.

N.C.—Perry v. Sykes, 200 S.E. 923, 215 N.C. 39.

Tex.—Daniel v. State, 234 S.W. 77, 90 Tex.Cr. 225.

In Oregon

Under Const. art 7 § 7, providing that at the close of each term the judges shall file concise written statements of their decisions, the term "concise statement" means the conclusion, rather than the reasoning, and the court need not separately discuss each and every assignment of error.—Schmid v. Thorsen, 175 P. 74, 89 Or. 575, denying motion 170 P. 930, 89 Or. 575.

Inconsequential matters

Appellate court need not pass in detail on each of numerous rulings on voluminous evidence, much of which is inconsequential and irrelevant.

Md.—Daiger v. Daiger, 140 A. 717, 154 Md. 501.

Tex.—Brown v. State, 275 S.W. 1069, 101 Tex.Cr. 421.

Description by number

Opinion need not name every exception by number, but is complete if it discloses decision of determinative questions of appeal.—Miller v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 138 S.E. 675, 140 S.C. 123, certiorari denied Camp Mfg. Co. v. Miller, 48 S.Ct. 117, 275 U.S. 556, 72 L.Ed. 424.

Overlapping or repetitious assignments

It is the duty of the appellate court to consider each and all of the alleged errors urged when properly reserved, briefed and presented, in the written and published opinions of the court, but it is not incumbent on the court to treat specifically each error urged where they overlap or amount to needless repetition.

Omission not error

That the court in affirming case omits from opinion discussion of assignment of error having no controlling influence is not error.—Roetzel v. State, 172 N.E. 551, 96 Ind.App. 661, denying rehearing 171 N.E. 206, 96 Ind.App. 661.

Statement as to ruling

Where plaintiff's supplementary petition contained a general demurrer to defendant's answer, to the overruling of which plaintiff excepted, the opinion of the court of civil appeals on appeal by defendant from a judgment against him, where no cross appeal was taken by plaintiff, need not state that the demurrer was filed and overruled.—*Sanger v. Announcing rules of law Courts should announce rules of law that require compliance with statutes and not permit an invasion of the plain intent and purpose of statutes.—Missouri Tp., Chariton County, v. Farmers' Bank of Forest Green, 42 S.W.2d 353, 328 Mo. 868, transferred, App., 12 S.W.2d 763.

Dual purpose

Courts' written opinions serve dual purpose of explaining reasons for should not extend beyond the questions immediately presented to discuss matters which may possibly arise in the future,¹ and an extended opinion should not be written where there are no meritorious questions to be considered.²

Footnote. While a footnote may sometimes make the opinion chaotic and bewildering, such footnote is as much a part of the opinion as the matter contained in the body of the opinion.³

Sufficiency. The judge who writes an opinion must exercise his own judgment as to the degree of elaboration required.⁴ It is adequate for the opinion to show, in any decisive way, clearly how the case was decided, and the reasons therefor, as by reference to other decided cases, to an extract from a textbook, to a decree or charge, or sometimes by merely overruling the exceptions.⁵

In some jurisdictions statutes have given rise to a policy of the court not to discuss evidence in extenso in its opinions.⁶ In any event, an appellate conclusions reached to parties litigant and becoming precedents for guidance of courts and legal profession.—State ex rel. Sluss v. Appellate Court of Indiana, 17 N.E.2d 824, 214 Ind. 686.

Decisions as to constitutionality

Where decisions as to constitutionality must, under a requirement of the state constitution, be filed, the appellate court has the duty of declaring the effect to be given its decision, in order that its clerk may know whether it is to be filed and that the reporter may know whether it is to be published or held in abeyance pending a possible recall by popular vote.—People v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 198 P. 146, 70 Colo. 90, 15 A.L.R. 326.

Function of court is to declare what law is, and not what its members as individuals think it ought to be.—Harris v. Watson, 161 S.E. 215, 201 N.C. 661, 79 A.L.R. 441.

Distinguishing inconsistent opinions

There is no obligation on the part of the appellate court to interpret and distinguish decisions of an intermediate appellate court merely because it is contended that the rule there laid down is inconsistent with the one adopted, either in previous opinions or in the opinion then pronounced, but the court may properly do so.—Burgesser v. Bullock's, 214 P. 649, 190 Cal. 673.

Matters not pertinent to new trial

"To lay down any 'hard and fast' formula would be to stifle the infinite variety that we find, even among the best decisions of the courts, and would be a bane to originality in the building of judicial opinions. (2) The court merely announces its conclusion.—Hodge v. Joy, 92 So. 171, 207 Ala. 198—Profile Cotton Mills v. Calhoun Water Co., 78 So. 389, 201 Ala. 483—Farley v. Baldwin, 77 So. 723, 201 Ala. 197.

(3) The rule applies particularly to litigation between brothers.—Heflin v. Heflin, 113 So. 535, 216 Ala. 519.

(4) The appellate court is not required under the statute to discuss the testimony and to show correctness of trial court's conclusion from weight of evidence.—Howell v. Howell, 100 So. 635, 211 Ala. 415.

(5) The court need not discuss and set out in its opinion the testimony leading it to its conclusion that the weight of the evidence does not support averments of a bill for divorce that defendant was addicted to habitual drunkenness.—Moor v. Moor, 99 So. 316, 211 Ala. 56.

(6) The court need not discuss and recite evidence which it holds sufficient to support decree appealed from in equity case.—Mink v. Whitfield, 118 So. 559, 218 Ala. 334—Alabama Bank & Trust Co. v. Jones, 104 So. 785, 213 Ala. 398.

(7) A detailed analysis of evidence need not be made.—Heflin v. Heflin, supra—Koger v. State, 110 So. 578, 215 Ala. 319.

(8) On appeal in equity cases, it need not indicate what testimony court is not required to set out the testimony tending to support its findings,⁷ and in considering an assignment that the judgment is not sustained by the evidence the court is not required to discuss the evidence in extenso; it is sufficient if the opinion fairly reflects the evidence material to the decision.⁸ Where the evidence is sufficient to sustain the verdict, the court, in considering an assignment that the evidence does not support the verdict, need not set out any part thereof,⁹ but where the evidence is not sufficient to support the verdict, the court usually points out the lack of or insufficiency of the evidence.¹⁰

Where objections to instructions are clearly without merit, the court is not required to set out the instructions in its opinion.¹¹ Likewise, where the appeal is taken directly to an intermediate appellate court for final determination, such court need not set out in its opinion the evidence and instructions for the purpose of a rehearing in the court of last resort.¹²

The parties need not be designated in the opinion by name.¹³

§ 222. Construction, Operation, and Effect

- a. Construction
- b. Operation and effect

a. Construction

General principles of construction of written instruments, particularly the principles of statutory construction, control as to the construction of opinions of courts or judges.

In interpreting an opinion of a court or judge, regard must be had for the facts of the individual case, for the ends sought to be reached, for the evils to be avoided, and the benefits to be attained.¹⁴ should not be considered.—White v. White, 142 So. 534, 225 Ala. 155.

(9) Likewise, under a statute authorizing the appellate court to write opinions only when such opinions will serve a useful purpose, the court need not discuss the evidence when it would serve no useful purpose.—Wilkinson v. Flowers, 77 So. 882, 16 Ala.App. 370.

(10) So, in a murder prosecution, the court should not, on appeal, comment unnecessarily on evidence, where civil suit for death was pending.—Vaughn v. State, 143 So. 211, 25 Ala.App. 204.

(11) Nor will testimony be set out in an opinion, where the "crucial testimony" is too vile and disgusting to be repeated any place.—Murphy v. State, 176 So. 473, 27 Ala.App. 546, certiorari denied 176 So. 475, 284 Ala. 625.

7. Tex.—Cadillac-La Salle Corporation of Houston v. Berry, Civ.App., 125 S.W.2d 1071.

15 C.J. p 969 note 9.

Avoidance of publicity to parties

On appeal from decree awarding alimony and counsel fees, where principal question was determination by court of clearly defined issues of fact, and testimony reflecting on those issues was such that its repetition would only assure needless painful publicity to parties concerned without any compensating advantage, court was under no obligation to do more than state its conclusions with reasons on issues of fact.—Silverberg v. Silverberg, 130 A. 325, 148 Md. 682.

Cumulative findings or statement of evidence additional to that stated in appellate court's original opinion is unnecessary and will not be made where opinion would thereby be unduly lengthened, since evidence appearing in statement of facts is available for consideration by Supreme Court.—Wichita Royalty Co. v. City Nat. Bank of Wichita Falls, Tex.Civ.App., 74 S.W.2d 661, modified on other grounds 89 S.W.2d 394, 127 Tex. 158, rehearing denied 93 S.W.2d 143, 127 Tex. 158.

Jury case

Where a case is tried to a jury the opinion of appellate court need not contain detailed recitals of fact.—Whitchurst v. Howell, 98 S.W.2d 1071, 20 Tenn.App. 314.

Negligence

In action for death of railroad freight conductor, where it is not claimed that verdict for plaintiff was excessive, it is not necessary for appellate court to abstract all evidence tending to show contributory negligence of deceased or nonnegligence of defendant.—McCarty v. Nelson, 195 S.W. 689, 129 Ark. 280.

Standard Rice Co.*, Civ.App., 264 S.W. 276, reversed on other grounds, Com.App., 276 S.W. 904. 15 C.J. p 969 note 10.

15 C.J. p 969 note 11.

Omission not breach of duty

When the court reviews a record to determine whether the evidence supports the verdict and is convinced that it does and announces its conclusion without extensive analysis of the testimony, it is not justly subject to the imputation that it did not examine the record and failed to discharge its duty.—Tyrrell v. Robinson, 180 Ill.App. 286.

10. Tex.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Tarver, Steele & Co., Civ.App., 295 S.W. 320—Jackson v. Anglin, Civ. App., 252 S.W. 1085.

13. N.Y.—In re Investigation Concerning a Change in Court Records, 5 N.Y.S.2d 813, 255 App.Div. 48.

Use of "anonymous" or equivalent

The identity of a party may in a proper case be withheld in an opinion by the use of the term "anonymous" or some equivalent expression.—In re Investigation Concerning a Change in Court Records, supra.

Fictitious name

The text rule does not justify the substitution in the opinion of a wholly fictitious name for the correct name in which the action was instituted, thereby introducing inaccuracy into the records of the court and resulting in a confusion of identity.—In re Investigation Concerning a Change in Court Records, supra.

Governing factor

In determining judicial action, the character of the situation sought to be remedied, rather than its abruptness, is the governing factor.—

The opinion of the court or judge should be interpreted as a whole.¹⁵ be construed with reference to the facts on which it is based,¹⁶ the language used must be held as re-

So it is well settled that a judicial opinion must

Opinions construed

(1) Opinion, sustaining exception to erroneous instruction and stating that other exceptions were not considered, did not decide that verdict did substantial justice.—Barry v. Kettelle, 140 A. 3, denying reargument 139 A. 664, 49 R.I. 50.

(2) Recital in appellate court's opinion reversing decree for defendant in patent infringement suit that decree may be silent as to other claims than the one upon which reversed held to sustain validity of patent only as to single claim as respects contract rights.—Haynes v. Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation, C.C.A.Ind., 46 F.2d 4, certiorari denied 51 S.Ct. 650, 283 U.S. 857, 75 L.Ed. 1464.

(4) Separating expressions in opinions from their context in order to give them a meaning which the opinions do not sanction cannot be sustained.—Orr v. Allen, Ohio, 39 S.Ct. 23, 248 U.S. 35, 63 L.Ed. 109, affirming, D.C., 245 F. 486.

(5) General statements in judicial opinions concerning particular situation cannot be wrested from context and invoked as authority on different questions.—Thibeault v. Poole, 186 N.E. 632, 283 Mass. 480.

(6) Sentences cannot be detached from opinion, and stretched to other circumstances for which not intended.—Rosen v. U. S. Rubber Co., 167 N.E. 655, 268 Mass. 403, 65 A.L.R. 1299.

(7) Isolated expressions in opinion are not to be employed to expand opinion into holding more than its plain import, or interpreted as deciding questions not essential to determination of issues before the court.—People ex rel. Yohnka v. Kennedy, 10 N.E.2d 806, 367 Ill. 236.

(3) Every opinion by a court must portions of the opinion separate from the facts, especially where the law upon the subject has many exceptions.—New York Life Ins. Co. v. Kimball, 106 A. 676, 93 Vt. 147.

By construing various statements, court was justified in saying that in another case the court had approved an instruction permitting jury to consider facts constituting defendants' negligence causing death in enhancement of damages.—State ex rel. Ambiguous or uncertain language is to be construed in the light of the circumstances connected with the case.—Everts v. Barker, 200 P. 473, 58 Utah 519.

Particular opinions construed

(1) No reflection is intended upon counsel by a statement in an opinion that "appellant should not be permitted to evade its liability by a technicality which under the facts of this case is absolutely unjustified."—National Surety Co. v. Chalkley, Tex.Civ.App., 260 S.W. 216.

(2) The statement of a court in its decree confirming the report of a master that "to review the testimony in full would require a tremendous amount of labor, and, according to the view which I take of the case, would be entirely unnecessary," is not meant to indicate that the court did not fully review the testimony in the sense of weighing and giving it full credit, but merely that it was unnecessary to review it in the sense of going over it and discussing it in detail in the decree.—Talbert v. Hamlin, 68 S.E. 764, 86 S.C. 523.

(3) Where, in an action for an injury at a railroad crossing, the testimony did not disclose whether or not the engineer saw the team of plaintiff's intestate on the track, as intimated, and on appeal the court in its opinion stated: "If the facts thus supposed were true, and the engineer, seeing the team standing on the track, under the circumstances mentioned, immediately used all available appliances to stop the train, the question as to the measure of such care would nevertheless be for the jury to determine," the word "supposed" was advisedly used, in view of the grant of a new trial, and was not objectionable as authorizing a judgment to rest on conjecture.—Kunz v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 93 P. 141, 94 P. 504, 51 Or. 191, 205.

(4) In action by holder of municipal securities on bond indemnifying against loss sustained by acceptance, in good faith and without actual notice, of securities which proved to be invalid, statement in opinion in suit by municipality against holder that holder was not bona fide holder entitled to rely on recitals that charter provisions relating to issuance of bonds had been complied with, was not conclusive finding that holder took securities without good faith and with actual notice of their invalidity, but statement only meant that municipality was not estopped from denying validity of such recitals and that doctrine of bona fide holder was inapplicable.—Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, C.C.A. N.Y., 79 F.2d 84.

Construed to support decision

The opinion is to be construed, if it reasonably can be, to support, and not refute, the decision or conclusion for which it is the reason.—Stark v. McLaughlin, 261 P. 244, 45 Idaho 112.

Particular opinions construed

(1) Where five of the seven judges of the supreme court voted against the proposition that a sheriff, under a statute, was absolutely liable for amount of execution in case of failure to sell property levied on, a majority of the court assented to the proposition he was liable only for actual damages which occurred through his honest judgment in allowing an intervening claim to the property.—State ex rel. Nolte v. Reynolds, 223 S.W. 408, 283 Mo. 253.

(2) Statement of court on reversing, because of prejudice resulting from concurrent sales, decree ratifying sale under power in first mortgage made on the same day as a sale under power in third mortgage, that a resale if necessary should be alone under the power in the first mortgage and clear of all liens, was with reference to assumption that first mortgagee would desire to enforce his right, and did not prevent a sale, subject to the first mortgage, under power in the second mortgage, the first mortgagee being induced by mortgagor to desist from further foreclosure proceedings.—Strohmeyer v. Remson, 109 A. 105, 135 Md. 439.

(3) Recital of opinion after sustaining order of railroad commission requiring plaintiff to operate its railroad, on the ground that plaintiff's other business of lumbering was successful enough to stand a loss on the road, that the commission's order calls on plaintiff "to submit a new schedule for transportation which may be operated . . . at a profit for plaintiff," cannot be considered as a finding that such a schedule can be submitted, there being no evidence warranting such a finding.—Brooks-Scanlon Co. v. Railroad Commission of Louisiana, 40 S. Ct. 183, 251 U.S. 396, 64 L.Ed. 323, reversing 81 So. 727, 144 La. 1086.

(4) The supreme court's opinion, sustaining order of secretary of agriculture regulating handling of milk in interstate commerce, amounted to judicial determination that secretary fully complied with all statutory requirements, including his findings and proclamation respecting base period for purposes of order, where it was necessary to deal with his acts preliminary to promulgation thereof in order to dispose of case.—*U. Definite repudiation necessary

Intent of court of last resort to alter settled law of state cannot be attributed to it in absence of express disapproval of existing law and definite repudiation of decisions establishing that law.—Cohen v. Cohen, 188 A. 244, 121 N.J.Eq. 299.

Distinguishable states of fact

Circuit court of appeals cannot extend language of United States supreme court until it clashes with language of another opinion dealing with same subject matter but applicable to distinguishable state of facts, and thus find conflict in two opinions.—Moore v. Chicago Mercantile Exchange, C.C.A.III., 90 F.2d 735, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 30, 302 U.S. 710, 82 L.Ed. 548—Bennett v. Board of Trade of City of Chicago, C.C.A.III., 90 F.2d 735, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 34, 302 U.S. 710, 82 L.Ed. 548, rehearing denied 58 S.Ct. 118, 302 U.S. 774, 82 L.Ed. 600.

General statement, susceptible of misconstruction, should be modified to comport with the decisions of the federal supreme court.—Allen v. Bailey, 14 P.2d 1087, 91 Colo. 260.

Law most recently established

In construing the opinions of the courts, the law most recently established as the law of the state prevails over conflicting law previously established.—People v. Propp, 15 N.Y.S.2d 83, 172 Misc. 314.

24. Utah.—State v. Springer, 121 P. 976, 40 Utah 471.

Result not intended

An opinion of the supreme court should not be construed so as to lead to a result which could not have been deliberately intended by the court, if the language is susceptible of any other construction more con-

The language of an opinion, like that of any other writing, must be given its plain and natural meaning, unless used in a technical sense.²⁵ Following the principle of statutory construction that, where there is in a statute a particular enactment in plain and definite terms, the particular enactment will prevail over general language contained in the same section, discussed in the C.J.S. title Statutes § 347, also 59 C.J. p 1000 note 68—p 1001 note 74, plain and definite language in an opinion separately treating of the several component elements of the case will prevail over general language combining such elements.²⁶

Cited authority. Citation of a case by a court in support of a ruling is itself a judicial construction of the opinion of the case cited.²⁷ Observations of the courts in cases cited as authorities are to be construed in the light of the issue, as well as the law, under discussion.²⁸

Use of decisions of other jurisdictions. Where opinions of cases decided in a foreign jurisdiction have been introduced in evidence as showing the law of such jurisdiction, in construing such opinions the court of the forum is entitled to consider opinions in later cases even though such opinions are not introduced in evidence.²⁹ Moreover, while a foreign judicial decision not introduced in evidence cannot be considered by an appellate court as evidence, nevertheless the court may resort to it for the interpretation of opinions which were introduced in evidence.³⁰

An opinion by a court or judge is merely evidence of the law, and not the law. It is not a part of the record. Mere expressions of the individual views of a judge are not binding on the court. Per curiam opinions indicate the full agreement of the judges. Opinions by commissioners which are approved by the court become the opinions of the court.

While in its popular sense the term "law" includes decisions of courts,³¹ the courts do not make law, but simply declare it;³² the decision of a court is merely evidence of what is the law, and is not the law,³³ even though it has been said that an opinion filed in compliance with constitutional requirement becomes a part of the law of the state.³⁴ An opinion, however positive, is not in any sense a final act, and may always be changed before final decree.³⁵ It cannot prevail against the final order or decision.³⁶

Opinion construed

A decision holding that complaint did not set out a substantial federal question and that, consequently, the district court lacked jurisdiction to dispose of the case upon its merits was a decision that the district court had no jurisdiction.—*Humboldt Lovelock Irr. Opinion controlled by judgment see the C.J.S. title Judgments § 22, also 33 C.J. p 1104 note 39—p 1105 note 41.

The decision of the highest court of another state on a particular question will be presumed to govern the matter to which it applies in the absence of any other decision or statute to the contrary.³⁷ The presumption exists that all facts in a record bearing upon the points decided have received due consideration by the court, whether all, a part, or none of these facts are mentioned in the opinion.³⁸ Likewise, it is assumed that a dissenting opinion acquiesces in the conclusions of the majority as to uncontroverted matters.³⁹

Verbal error in an opinion is immaterial.⁴⁰

An opinion becomes no part of the record,⁴¹ nor, as is stated in the C.J.S. title New Trial § 211, also 46 C.J. p 434 note 34, is an oral statement of the ground by the judge made at the time of an order as to a motion for new trial a part of the order.

An expression of the individual views of the judge who is delivering the opinion of the court is not an expression of the opinion of the court, where it is clear that the judge is expressing merely his own views and not the views of the court as such,⁴² but an opinion prepared by a member of the court is not merely the opinion of such member, being the opinion of the court itself although prepared by the writer.⁴³

Per curiam opinion. The fact of the filing of a per curiam opinion does not detract from the force of the decision, or indicate that the question was lightly treated, but it indicates rather that the members of the court were united in regarding the point decided as clear and as not requiring elaboration.⁴⁴

Opinions of commissioners. In some jurisdictions under rules of court opinions prepared by commissioners of appeals and submitted to the court for examination and criticism and approval are the opinions of the court,⁴⁵ and in other jurisdictions even in the absence of a rule of court a similar rule is held,⁴⁶ but there is also authority for the view that, where opinions are prepared by commissioners, they must be permitted to state their reasons in their own way, without binding the court, although it concurs in their conclusions of law and express findings of fact.⁴⁷

§ 223. Property in, and Access to, Opinions

The state cannot compel a clerk of court to refrain from furnishing copies of the opinions of courts or judges for publication by law publishers, but, while the public is entitled to free access to such opinions, law publishers have, to make copies for publication, only restricted and conditional rights of access subject to reasonable rules by the clerk of court as custodian.

In a sense, the opinion is the property of the judge.⁴⁸ The state has no such property interest in such opinions as to deprive the clerk of court of the right to furnish copies for publication in advance of the publication of the official reporter, although the constitution provides that the legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of the decisions, but that no judge shall be allowed to report them.⁴⁹

Right of access to opinions. Justice requires that the public shall have free access to the opinions of the courts and it is against sound public policy to prevent such access,⁵⁰ but a publisher has not the unrestricted and unconditional right of access to the opinions and decisions of a court to make copies for publication, the clerk having the right and duty to control by reasonable rules the inspection and handling of the records of his office.⁵¹

A headnote, or "syllabus," is a summary of the points decided in a case which is placed at the beginning of the report. In a number of jurisdictions courts are required to write the syllabi, and in many jurisdictions the syllabi are controlling as to the holding, while in other jurisdictions the opinions contain the law of the case.

A headnote has been defined as a syllabus to a reported case; a summary of the points decided in the case, which is placed at the head or beginning of the report.⁵² The terms "headnote" and "syllabus" are synonymous.⁵³

In some jurisdictions, the courts are required by constitutional or statutory provisions or their rules of practice to prepare syllabi of their opinions,⁵⁴ but statutory requirements of syllabi by appellate courts have in some instances been held unconstitutional as an encroachment by the legislature on the judiciary, as is stated in Constitutional Law § 128 c. Moreover, in cases involving only questions of fact, no syllabus is necessary or required.⁵⁵

The syllabus is to be confined to the points of law arising from the facts of the cause that have been determined by the court.⁵⁶

The language used in a syllabus, as in judicial opinions, must be interpreted in the light of the particular facts to which it is applied.⁵⁷

In some jurisdictions the syllabus is deemed the authoritative expression of the court, to which the entire court is committed,⁵⁸ which rule is sometimes subject to the limitation that the syllabus is an expression of the law adjudicated in the case only in so far as it is warranted by the judgment of the court upon the facts,⁵⁹ so that the syllabus and opinion are to be taken together to show what has been decided.⁶⁰ However, in jurisdictions where the headnotes are given no special force by statute or rule of court, the opinion alone will be looked to for the original and authentic statement of the grounds of the decision.⁶¹

VII RECORDS

§ 225. Nature and Necessity

A record may be described as a memorial or history of the judicial proceedings in a case. Records must be kept in the higher or more important courts.

A record is a memorial of a proceeding or act of a court of record, entered in a roll for its preservation;⁶² a memorial or history of judicial proceedings in a case, commencing with the writ or complaint and ending with the judgment.⁶³ The original entry of each matter in the course of a suit is essentially the record of that matter.⁶⁴

In view of the rule that the higher or more important courts can speak only through their records, see infra § 237, it is universally required that such courts shall keep such records,⁶⁵ the object being to secure an accurate memorial of all the proceedings in the case so that persons interested may ascertain the exact state thereof.⁶⁶ So the only court

Court records

(1) The expression "court records" has been held to refer to the evidence of the proceedings had at a court, the object of which is to preserve a memorial.—Allen v. Phillips, 112 S.W. 403, 404, 37 Ark. 185.

(2) The term has been held not to apply to records in the department of public safety relating to the trial of a police patrolman before the director of public safety.—State ex rel. Flynn v. Davis, 137 N.E. 729, 730, 46 Ohio App. 46.

"File"

(1) A "file" may mean the record of the court.—Holman v. Chevallier, 14 Tex. 337, 339—Jones v. Wells, 3 Tex.A.Civ.Cas. § 94.

(2) The "file" in a cause includes original subpoenas issued for witnesses and all papers belonging to the cause.—Jackson v. Mobley, 47 So. 590, 157 Ala. 408.

Attendance and fees of witnesses

The duty of keeping a record of the witnesses in a case, their attendance and mileage, has been held to devolve on the clerk of the court rather than on the trial judge, and it will be presumed that the clerk has properly performed his duty in this respect.—Joynner v. City of Seattle, 258 P. 479, 144 Wash. 641.

Municipal court

Under particular statutory provisions it has been held that a municipal court was required to keep a record.—Demereaux v. State, 172 N. E. 551, 35 Ohio App. 418.

Parties

The addition of new parties or the substitution of parties in a pending case requires that such matter appear in the record of the court's proceedings.—Fountain v. Pierce, 176 N.E. 444, 123 Ohio St. 609.

The power of the court to supply lost or destroyed records is considered in the C.J.S. title Records § 42, also 15 C.J. p 980 note 85, 53 C.J. p 634 note 60-p 642 note 39.

§ 226. Making and Requisites

Records must be made and kept in such manner as to show the true state of the court's business.

The dockets, minutes, and records of a court of record must be made and kept in such manner as to represent the true state of the court's business.⁷⁰

In compliance with this requirement it has been held that the court records should show all the proceedings of such court;⁷¹ whatever proceedings the law or practice of the court requires to be enrolled;⁷² and matters required by statute to be shown;⁷³ and without regard to statute it has been held that the court record should show those proceedings which are vital to the cause presently before the court.⁷⁴ Where a court consists of several judges, a transcript of the record should show that there were justices enough to constitute a court, and therefore having authority to make, or cause to be made, a record of the court.⁷⁵ The minutes of the court should show all motions, or at least their substance.⁷⁶ On the other hand it has been held that the record need not show matters which would not aid the appellate court in deciding questions of law.⁷⁷ Proceedings not required to be enrolled need not be shown on the record unless required by order of court;⁷⁸ nor does a failure of the minutes formally to recite the opening of the court necessarily constitute a fatal defect.⁷⁹ It has also been held unnecessary that the minutes of a court should state the place at which the court sat.⁸⁰ The rule that a court of record can act only through its orders made of record does not require, where the court has large administrative and executive powers, with authority to appoint agents, that all the acts of the agents should appear of record.⁸¹ A report by a trial court in the course of its administrative duties, but having no effect on the decision of the court in the case before it, has no proper place in the court records pertaining to such case.⁸²

Reprimanding attorney

Judge hearing divorce proceeding had no jurisdiction to file with records of case a report wherein judge

A rejected tender of a plea of guilty of assault and battery, on arraignment for shooting with intent to kill, should not be recorded on the court's journal.⁸³

What constitutes record. The record of a court of record has been held to consist of the docket or entry book, the file, and the minutes of the court.⁸⁴ Moreover, it has been held that in a broad sense such written memorials as a statutory register of actions, files, minutes, orders, decree, judgment, statutory judgment book and statutory docket are judicial records.⁸⁵ In actions at law the docket entries have been held to constitute the record until the full and extended record is made up.⁸⁶ In consonance with these more liberal views it has been held that court minutes kept by the clerk on being approved by the trial judge are as effective as if written by the court;⁸⁷ in a case where it appeared that the trial judge passed on the minutes it was held that, where the clerk puts the minutes of record, they constitute sufficient journal entries of record,⁸⁸ and all the authorized written minutes made in the course of the case, have been treated as part of the record, whether made in the minute book, appearance docket, continuance docket, trial list, or argument list, or placed among the files.⁸⁹ Under particular statutory provisions authorizing the appointment of a court reporter it has been held that his record as kept becomes an official record of the court.⁹⁰ In view of the definition of a court record as a memorial or history of judicial proceedings commencing with the writ or complaint and ending with the judgment, see supra § 225, it is held that pleadings⁹¹ and depositions or other forms of written evidence⁹² in a case constitute part of the record. It has been held, moreover, that, when filed as required by statute, a notice of appeal becomes a part of the record in a case.⁹³ Further, an original transcript of testimony may remain a record of the lower court, although filed with the clerk of an appellate court as part of the transcript of the record of the case.⁹⁴

On the other hand, various writings associated with judicial proceedings have been held to constitute no part of the court records. For example, there are cases which hold that the minutes consti-reprimanded plaintiff's attorney for violation of court rule requiring that default divorce cases be set through calendar department where alleged violation had no effect on interlocutory decree entered.—Grivi v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, supra.

tute no part of the record of a court.⁹⁵ Proceeding on the theory that the court reporter's notes are merely the record of certain of the proceedings on the trial of a cause, it has been held that such notes do not, ordinarily, constitute the minutes proper and constitute no part of the court records.⁹⁶ Among the other writings and entries which have been held to constitute no part of the records of courts are: The trial list of causes;⁹⁷ entries made by the clerk in his docket book;⁹⁸ a "subpoena docket,"⁹⁹ and an entry made by the clerk in the record pursuant to court order but after the term.¹ Unless made so by agreed statement, or the like, affidavits, depositions, and matters of parol evidence have been held to constitute no part of the record.²

Authentication. It is generally required by statute that the records or minutes of a court shall be signed by the judge³ or by the clerk.⁴ This requirement has under some statutory provisions been held to be mandatory and essential to the validity of the record.⁵ In consonance with this view it has been held that a statute requiring that the minutes shall be drawn up, read, and signed on the last day of the term imposes a mandatory duty⁶ which cannot be complied with by a signing of the minutes after the term has expired by operation of law and the court is in vacation.⁷ Under other statutes the requirement for signing is considered to be merely directory,⁸ so that failure to sign the record before adjournment does not affect the validity of judgments or orders of the court,⁹ including the order of final adjournment.¹⁰ Where the essential requirements of a statute were that court proceedings be transcribed by the clerk and signed by the court, noncompliance with merely directory provisions which required reading by the clerk

Mode of signing

(1) Requirements for the signing of court records have been held to contemplate the signature of the presiding trial judge in his proper name rather than by his initials.—Fairbanks v. Beard, 141 N.E. 590, 247 Mass. 8, 30 A.L.R. 698.

(2) Accordingly in a case where a record entry was signed with the initials of the presiding judge, it was held that they might be disregarded as part of the record.—Fairbanks v. Beard, supra.

Presumptions

(1) In the absence of any proof to the contrary, it may be presumed that the minutes of the court were signed by the judge.—Sweeney v. Sweeney, 46 S.E. 76, 119 Ga. 76, 100 Am.S.R. 159.

(2) Similarly it has been held, where the trial judge's failure to sign the minutes was relied on, that the fact that minutes had not been assailed as to correctness and stood on record as court's own acts raised strong presumption that they were approved by judge.—Calhoun v. Serio, La.App., 161 So. 772.

Records kept by another tribunal

If the records of one tribunal are required to be kept with another and are made records of such other, they may be authenticated by the seal and signatures of the chief judge and clerk of the court in which they are deposited.—Taylor v. Barron, 35 N.H. 484.

Records of predecessor

On application to the surrogate to sign the records of a predecessor left incomplete, it is proper to require proof, by affidavit or otherwise, of the fact and to recite in the record the mode in which completed.—Matter of Espie, 2 Redf.Surr., N.Y., 445.

Orders

Under the text rule it has been held that signing of the record by the trial judge is required to make operative, orders entered in such record.—Equitable Trust Co. of Dover v. Bayes, supra.

Unsigned minutes

The minutes of a term of court not signed by the judge have no force.—Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Heisk., Tenn., 521.

6. Miss.—Watson v. State, 146 So. 122, 166 Miss. 194.

Writing and entry as part of minutes

Writing or entry on court's minute book does not become part of minutes within the meaning of such statute until the tentative minutes are read and signed by presiding judge.—Watson v. State, supra.

in an audible voice was held not to affect the validity of orders made.¹¹ In the absence of a law so requiring, records need not be made out at length and signed by the judge before the close of the term.¹² A statute confirming all acts of surrogates in certifying the records has been held to cover the record of a will in a case existing and undetermined in the courts at the passage thereof.¹³

A statute requiring that the court reporter shall within a reasonable time after trial write out and certify the record thereof has no application to daily transcripts furnished to court and counsel during the course of trial.¹⁴

Indexes. A statute requiring the judges to superintend their records and to require that the dockets "and all indexes to the record be correctly made out at the proper time" does not authorize them to order new indexes to their records;¹⁵ but a statute authorizing the transcribing or copying of records, when obliterated or in a ruinous condition, has been applied to indexes in such condition.¹⁶

Language. Under applicable constitutional or statutory provisions it is essential that the records of courts shall be kept in the English language.¹⁷ An act requiring the use of the English language in the records of the courts in the Philippine Islands has been held to be prospective only.¹⁸

Requiring record to be read. Purpose of a statute, requiring that court proceedings be entered in a specified book and be read in open court by the clerk thereof at the next session, is to permit correction of errors or omissions in the record.¹⁹

Sealing of papers. The parties to an action have been permitted to have the papers before the court at the hearing of the cause sealed, to be opened only on order of the court.²⁰

Separate records. The legislature may, by statute, require separate dockets to be kept by county and circuit courts;²¹ and it has been held not irregular to keep the minutes of civil cases in one book, and those of criminal cases in another.²²

What are entries; requisites thereof. An "entry" as applied to judicial proceedings has been held to be a statement of a conclusion reached by the court or an act done during the progress of a cause which is spread of record and designed to furnish incontestable evidence of the matter stated.²³ In the absence of any prescribed form in which the minute entries of a court are to be made they should show substantially all that was done on the trial that the law requires, and this should be set out in fit and expressive words.²⁴ The legislature may authorize the presiding judge of a court to prescribe abbreviated forms of entries of orders in the records of the court, but such legislation does not authorize the use of forms containing abbreviations of words which render them unintelligible, or the making of entries in any language other than English.²⁵ Under the view that the minutes of a court are not the records on which orders or judgments are recorded but are merely the memoranda of what takes place in court, made by the authority of the court, see supra this section, it has been held that a particular entry of an order for the removal of a cause was in compliance with a statute requiring that such order be entered on the minutes.²⁶ The practice of preparing entries for the court to sign and enter of record is proper.²⁷ The judge's notes should be entered by the clerk on the docket when orders, verdicts, etc., do not show more fully the action of the court.²⁸ Minute entries by a federal circuit court clerk in a record recognized

Provision inapplicable

A memorandum of the list of "papers filed and writs issued" kept by the clerk of the court, from which papers and writs a record thereof is made, is not a record, within the meaning of a constitutional provision requiring the preservation of court proceedings by record in the English language.—Isbitz v. by the court as its minutes are valid, although made with a rubber stamp.²⁹

Time when entries may be made. The clerk of a federal circuit court has until the end of term in which to complete the minute entries for the term,³⁰ and it has been held that a state court has the right at any time during the term to make a record entry of proceedings which were had previously in the same term and direct that such entries be made to appear as of the date they are directed to be made.³¹ It has been held, moreover, that, when through negligence or oversight the formal order of convening a term of court has not been entered on the journal entry may be made in conformity with the facts during or after the expiration of the term.³² On the other hand, it has been held that a clerk in a state court has no authority after adjournment of court to write out in full his minutes of the preceding day.³³ Under a statute contemplating that all entries on the minutes of state circuit courts shall be made in term time under the supervision of the particular court, clerks of such courts have no authority to make such entries while the court is in vacation, and this notwithstanding the particular entries are made in accordance with the bench notes of the trial judge.³⁴ Moreover, under a statute requiring that separate subpoena dockets be kept in civil and criminal cases, it has been held that required entries as regards subpoenas be made within a reasonable time after their issuance and return, and entries made after final disposition of the cause are too late.³⁵

Liability for change by clerk. Where a change in the minutes of a trial court was made by its clerk before they were signed by the judge at the end of the term, the party who procured the clerk to make the change was not liable to the party injured.³⁶

§ 227. Entries Nunc Pro Tunc

- a. Nature, object, purpose, or function
- b. Authority to make
- c. Time for making
- d. Proceedings for entry
- e. Operation and effect

a. Nature, Object, Purpose, or Function

An entry nunc pro tunc is an entry made now of something which was previously done and to be effective as of the former date.

An entry nunc pro tunc is an entry made now of something which was previously done, to have effect as of the former date,³⁷ the function, object, or purpose of such entry being to make the record speak the truth;³⁸ to supply on the record something which has actually occurred,³⁹ but has been

Order not void

Where the order of a particular state court setting the jury cases and relating to the drawing of the juries had been announced in open court, it was held that the mere fact that such order was not written in the minutes of the court until a later day of the term did not render the order void.—Sovereign Camp, W. Recollection of judge as basis

(1) Under the view that the entry contemplated by the text rule is not nunc pro tunc, it is held that, such entry requiring a written memorandum as a basis, the entry contemplated that the mere recollection of the judge is a sufficient basis.—Crecelius v. Home Heights Co., Mo., 217 S.W. 508.

omitted from the record through inadvertence or mistake.⁴⁰ More specifically it has been held that the purpose of a nunc pro tunc entry is to correct mistakes of the clerk or other court officer, or inadvertences of counsel, or to settle defects or omissions in the record, so that it will show what actually took place.⁴¹ It is not, on the other hand, the function of such entry by a fiction to antedate the actual performance of an act which never occurred;⁴² or to supply an entire omission to act within the time limit for such action;⁴³ or to represent an event as occurring at a date prior to the time of the actual event;⁴⁴ or to make the record show that which never existed,⁴⁵ or to restore a lost record.⁴⁶ Where the language of the court's minutes was not inconsistent with the formal record entry, it was held that there was no occasion for a nunc pro tunc entry to make the record conform to such minutes.⁴⁷

b. Authority to Make

A court is authorized to correct its own records by an entry nunc pro tunc.

Proving attendance of witnesses

Under statutes authorizing recovery of fees for attendance of witnesses on proof presented within a specified time, their entire failure to act as required within the time prescribed by statute could not be cured by subsequent nunc pro tunc entry attempting to authorize the making of such proof.—Green v. Mistake of party

The fact that a party, by mistake to his detriment, had the clerk change his correct entry on the court's minutes, is not ground for refusing him a nunc pro tunc entry to have the entry speak the truth, no one having been misled.—Pittsburgh, C. the transaction occurred,⁵⁷ and it has been held that a nunc pro tunc entry after an appeal has been taken may be valid.⁵⁸

d. Proceedings for Entry

Proceedings for entry nunc pro tunc may be on motion of court or of parties, and are auxiliary to some action pending.

Entries nunc pro tunc may be made on the court's own motion⁵⁹ or on proper application by the parties.⁶⁰

In the absence of statute requiring notice it has been held that reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard should be given to parties against whom correction of court records by entry nunc pro tunc is proposed;⁶¹ and it has been held that jurisdiction to make such entry, after the term at which the proceedings sought to be corrected were had, requires that notice be given, to those who may be affected by the entry.⁶² Under particular circumstances, however, notice of an application for entries nunc pro tunc may not be necessary.⁶³ Notice served on the attorney of record of a party may be sufficient as to such party, and this notwithstanding the correctness of the record is not questioned until after entry of final judgment.⁶⁴

Proceedings to procure an entry nunc pro tunc are merely auxiliary to some action pending rather than original proceedings.⁶⁵

Showing necessary to warrant entry. It is usually held that record entries nunc pro tunc can properly be made only when based on some writing in a cause which directly or by fair inference indicates the purpose of the entry so sought to be made.⁶⁶ In accordance with this view it is held

Judge's minutes as foundation

Minutes kept by judge are sufficient foundation on which to make nunc pro tunc entry when they show what records should contain.—Neuenschwander v. State, 161 N.E. 369, 200 Ind. 64.

Lost record

Where a record or paper in an action is lost, it has been held that its contents cannot be shown by parol, but it must first be established and supplied in the manner prescribed by Rev.St., 1899, § 4560, describing the procedure for establishing or supplying lost records; then such reestablished record can be used as a basis for a nunc pro tunc entry.—Becher v. Deuser, 69 S.W. 363, 169 Mo. 159.

(2) Nunc pro tunc entry inserting blank space for name of surety contained in order allowing appeal, fixing amount of appeal bond, and approving surety was held proper where court bench docket containing judge's minutes disclosed that space was left blank, and space for name of surety was left blank in civil order book and was not inserted until after expiration of term, and court did not in fact name and approve surety during term.—Reitzel v. Campbell, 5 N.E.2d 148, 103 Ind. App. 650.

Where a statement of facts was filed after adjournment of the court for the term, but within the time allowed by an order not entered in the minutes on an oral motion made therefor at the trial, the court at a subsequent term was held to have jurisdiction to permit the filing of such order nunc pro tunc on the recollection of the judge and other parol testimony that the order had been applied for and granted during the previous term, without any memorandum or other written evidence thereof.—Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Roberts, supra.

with great caution and on the most conclusive evidence;⁷⁵ that the evidence constituting the basis for the correction of the record be clear and convincing⁷⁶ and that the entry be made only where the errors to be corrected are proved beyond all doubt.⁷⁷ In cases recognizing the rule that a record might be corrected nunc pro tunc on parol evidence alone, it was held that such evidence should be decisive and unequivocal.⁷⁸

Nunc pro tunc entries relate back to the time that the original entry should have been made.

A nunc pro tunc entry correcting the records of a court relates back to the time that the entry should have been made or proceedings had,⁷⁹ and makes valid those proceedings, to which the entry relates, but which were apparently defective.⁸⁰ In consonance with the general rule whereby court records are regarded as constituting legal evidence of the matters to which they relate, see infra § 237, an entry nunc pro tunc is competent evidence of the facts which it recites.⁸¹ Moreover, such entry imports verity⁸² where not appealed from,⁸³

and cannot be impeached collaterally.⁸⁴ It has been held, however, that a nunc pro tunc entry of findings not stating what conclusions of fact and law had theretofore been made could not have any effect on the proceedings originally had.⁸⁵ In accordance with rules governing the function, object, and purpose of entries nunc pro tunc, as stated in subdivision a of this section, it is held that such an entry cannot supply omitted action by the court,⁸⁶ nor make the record show what ought to have been done;⁸⁷ nor may an entry nunc pro tunc operate so as to extend the time within which an appeal must be taken.⁸⁸

b. Withdrawal

- (1) In general
- (2) Effect of withdrawal
- (3) Restoration

(1) In General

Judicial records or papers should not be withdrawn from the files except for good reason.

Judicial records or papers should not be removed from the office of the clerk or files where they belong except for good and sufficient reasons,⁹² and no person has a right to remove them without permission of the court.⁹³ Ordinarily, papers before the court at the hearing of the cause may not be withdrawn from the records, even on application of both parties⁹⁴ or with the consent of the clerk.⁹⁵ The court may, however, grant permission to remove papers from the records,⁹⁶ this being a matter within the discretion of the court both as to the removal⁹⁷ and as to the terms and conditions on which the permission shall be granted.⁹⁸ Accordingly, it is within the discretion of the court to permit a notice served with plaintiff's petition to be withdrawn from the record to enable the person who made the return to correct any informality therein,⁹⁹ to permit a party to take a presented bill of exceptions temporarily from the files for the purpose of making suggested corrections,¹ or to allow exhibits to be returned after they have been properly copied and thus made part of the court records.² There may, nevertheless, be circumstances in which it is not only proper but the duty of the court to deny such an application.³ During the time wherein an appeal may be taken, an application for the withdrawal of papers from the files constituting part of the record should, or may be, denied.⁴ Under a

Surrogate cannot, under the provisions of the New York statutes, allow the testimony and proceedings on an application for probate to be withdrawn from his court on an abandonment of the proceedings by the proponent.—Matter of Greeley's Will, 15 Abb.Pr., N.S., N.Y., 393.

Removal from state

In South Carolina it is held that the court has no power to order a record removed from that state for use in another state in view of Cr. Code, § 307, making it a misdemeanor for the clerk of a court of record to allow the removal of any record except when attending therewith in court pursuant to process.—Ex parte Lockhart, 27 S.E. 620, 50 S. Clerk required to preserve record

For purpose of destruction

The power of a court to permit the withdrawal of its records from the clerk's office for the purpose of destruction should be exercised with the greatest caution, and only in the most exceptional cases.—Schecker v. Woolsey, 37 N.Y.S. 292, 2 App.Div. 52.

Removal from jurisdiction

(1) Court cannot authorize sending paper which is foundation of action outside jurisdiction.—Morales v. Panama Bank Co., 2 Canal Zone 296.

(2) On ex parte application, the court may not permit a record to be taken out of its jurisdiction into another county for use in taking depositions.—Brown v. Alexander, 11 Wkly.N.C., Pa., 95.

4. Wash.—McLean v. York, 188 P. 791, 110 Wash. 566.

On death sentence

Motion by administrator of defendant sentenced to death, that certain exhibits introduced at trial be ordered delivered to him, was held to be prematurely filed, where conviction had not become final so that it could not be set aside under any statute requiring appellant to file in the appellate court printed transcripts of the record in the lower court, he is not entitled to withdraw from the office of the clerk of the lower court original court records, such as transcripts of evidence, bills of exceptions, or other original papers and documents on file in the case, for the purpose of having printed copies made.⁵

Ordinarily, when the originals are withdrawn, copies should be left,⁶ but the court may grant the permission with or without such condition.⁷

(2) Effect of Withdrawal

Records or papers withdrawn from the files, although with permission of the clerk, are in contemplation of law still in his possession and on the files of the court.

Records or papers, although taken from the office or files by permission of the clerk are in contemplation of law still in his possession and on the files of the court,⁸ and their removal does not affect the jurisdiction of the court to act thereon,⁹ and it is no defense to an action on certain contracts that plaintiff had improperly removed them from the files of a prior action thereon without an order of court.¹⁰ Neither may a court, having power to make an order permitting withdrawal of papers from the file of the clerk, be precluded from receiving and considering papers that have been withdrawn without a court order as required by statute.¹¹

(3) Restoration

Papers withdrawn from the files of a court by an attorney must be restored.

An attorney who withdraws a transcript from the clerk of the court of appeals must return it, or where it is lost while in his custody, he must replace it.¹² Proceedings in a case should not, however, be stayed because an attorney has not restored papers which by permission he has withdrawn from the files.¹³

The court may, whenever it learns that a paper has, with or without permission, been withdrawn from its files, proceed on its own motion to have it restored,¹⁴ and a failure to comply with an order for its restoration may be punished as a contempt.¹⁵ If a paper which has been withdrawn from the files and not returned is necessary as evidence in a case, its restoration may be enforced by means of a subpoena duces tecum.¹⁶ Proceedings for the restoration of papers withdrawn from the files may be instituted under the title of the original action, proceedings.—State v. Thorp, 172 A. 879, 86 N.H. 501.

On dismissal

Where after dismissal of a suit for breach of promise to marry but during the time wherein an appeal might have been taken, plaintiff applied for leave to withdraw certain exhibits, denial of such application was held not to constitute an abuse of discretion.—McLean v. York, 188 P. 791, 110 Wash. 566.

After appeal taken

In action by contractor's surety against owner of building for delivery of notes and trust deeds in escrow which were to be delivered to surety on completion of building, where notes and trust deeds were held in custodia legis, on surety's appeal from judgment finding building not to be completed, motion to withdraw notes and trust deeds from such custody was required to be denied, since to grant it would be to prejudge merits of case.—*Gavin v. which has been settled, the title being merely a matter of convenience and identification and the proceedings in nowise reviving the action.¹⁷

§ 229. Custody and Control

Courts have custody and control of their own records.

A court of record has general authority over its own records,¹⁸ and they are within its custody and control,¹⁹ particularly so far as they pertain to the court's business²⁰ and so far as is essential to the proper administration of justice.²¹ The control which a court exercises over its own records has been held to be inherent and is not subject to defeat by any ministerial act or omission of the clerk.²² In exercising control over its records, a court has power to protect them from irrelevant, unimportant or superfluous papers,²³ and to keep the records free from stain and scandal not pertinent to the cause and unnecessary to the decision.²⁴ The power of the court to control its records is retained while the court is in session,²⁵ but, except as provided by statute, has been held to be lost on final adjournment for the term or on expiration of the time specified by statute.²⁶ There exists authority, however, to the effect that a court never loses jurisdiction over its records.²⁷

Subject to the general supervision and control possessed by courts of record over their own records, as stated in the preceding paragraph of this section, it has been held that particular statutory provisions contemplate that such records shall remain permanently in the custody of the clerk, and the court may, if deemed necessary for the proper administration of justice, refuse to allow the original records to be taken from such clerk as their legal custodian.²⁸ Where the clerk of a circuit court is the legal custodian of the records and files, it has been held that the supreme court has no power to compel him to surrender them to any other person;²⁹ nor will a legal custodian of the records of former county courts be compelled to surrender them to a board of county commissioners to be al-

19. Securities

Production of securities in court by defendant as witness for plaintiff and their introduction into evidence by plaintiff was held to have the effect of putting them into the manual custody and control of the court.—Dobson v. Neighbors, 153 So. 861, 228 Ala. 407.

Records of trial court are peculiarly within control of that court.—Gow v. Dubuque County, 238 N.W. 578, 213 Iowa 92.

Constructing statutes together

Statutes involving custody of records of county and circuit courts should be read and construed together.—Bend Pub. Co. v. Haner, 244 P. 868, 118 Or. 105.

Method whereby certain courts shall be enabled to exercise control over their records has been held to be that provided by applicable statutory provisions.—Happy Coal Co. v. Brashear, 92 S.W.2d 23, 263 Ky. 257.

"Scandal," within the meaning of the text rule, is an unnecessary statement which bears cruelly on an individual's moral character, or statement of anything contrary to good manners, or unbecoming court's dignity to hear.—Nadeau v. Texas Co., supra.

Opinion of justice

A special concurring opinion by one of the justices of an appellate court, applying epithets and adjectives to one of the parties and its attorneys, whereby they were charged with crimes and unprofessional and immoral conduct, was held to be scandalous under the text rule and, on motion, was ordered to be stricken from the files of the court and expunged from its records.—Nadeau v. Texas Co., supra.

Alteration of minutes

As between the presiding judge and the clerk of the court, it was held, under the text rule, that, where the clerk in a criminal trial made an entry in the minutes as to the disagreement of the jury and the order of a mistrial, the judge properly altered the entry to show the facts on which the mistrial was ordered.—State v. Bilton, supra.

tered by them.³⁰ A statute relating to the custody of records is not invalid because it provides for a certified copy of a decree to be annexed to a tax record and such record to be delivered to the county treasurer in whose office it shall remain, "except as needed in the office of the county clerk," since the court may at any time repossess itself of the tax record.³¹

§ 230. Defects and Omissions

Court records, as made, have been presumed to be free from defects and omissions, although it has been held that parties are not entitled to assert any rights based on a defective or absent record.

In consonance with the rule that the more important courts speak only through their records, which constitute evidence of the matter which they contain, see infra § 237, it is held that interested persons may, in reliance on the record as made, properly assume that the officers charged with the duty of making and keeping the record have discharged such duty and that the record truthfully reflects what has actually occurred and what was done in the particular case.³² A default in making an entry cannot prejudice parties who rely on the integrity of the record.³³ The failure of the clerk or recording officer to make a correct record does not vitiate the proceedings in a court of record,³⁴ nor may the failure of those charged with the duty of making and keeping the record to discharge such duty, affect the validity of things done as of the date shown by the record.³⁵ It has been held, however, that, since a court must speak by its record or not at all, parties are not entitled to assert any rights based on a defective or absent record.³⁶ A court practice permitting the record to show the filing of papers which have not, in fact, been filed is viewed with disfavor,³⁷ and where the record is made to show that exceptions to a decision were filed before the decision itself, and a preliminary motion in March is not docketed until after decision in July, the irregularities are destructive of all confidence in its accuracy.³⁸ Where the minutes recite the opening of court on a certain day pursuant to adjournment, and continuous proceedings from day to day in open court in the presence of accused and his counsel, failure of the minutes to state that the court was opened from day to day is not a fatal defect.³⁹

Changes in a record entry, which was in correct form as originally entered, will be presumed to have been done under direction of the court rather than done without authority and with malicious intent.⁴⁰ Apparent alterations and interlineations made by the clerk should be construed as mistakes corrected as soon as made, rather than as a tampering with the record,⁴¹ and interlineations and alterations in a certified record marked and verified as such by the initials of the clerk of court are presumed to have been noted at the time of authenticating the record.⁴²

A docket entry cannot be read in contradiction of the record after it has been properly extended.⁴³

§ 231. Amendment and Correction

Court records may be subject to correction and amendment. When improperly allowed, the proper remedy is by application to have an amendment set aside.

Court records are subject to amendment and correction in accordance with rules discussed in sub-

As of what time amendments made. Where the court finds it necessary to amend its record in the interest of truth, the amendment should be made as of the day of the first decision.⁴⁴

What amounts to amendment. A finding by the judge after the term that the parties had consented to a continuance of a motion and the entry of such finding of record is practically an amendment of the record at the term.⁴⁵

Setting aside amendment. Where an amendment of court records has been improperly allowed, the remedy of the aggrieved party is to have such amendment set aside.⁴⁶

§ 232. — Authority to Amend

Courts possess authority to amend their records in order to make them speak the truth.

In case of an omission or error in the record, the power exists in the court to amend such record so that it shall conform to the actual facts and truth of the case;⁴⁷ especially when such facts are with-

Question of law or fact

While the question whether an amendment of a judicial record shall be allowed is usually one of fact, yet the question whether it can be allowed is one of law.—Jaffrey v. Smith, 80 A. 504, 76 N.H. 168—Sawyer v. Manchester & K. R. Co., 62 N.H. 135, 18 Am.S.R. 541.

Criminal cases

(1) The power to amend, as stated in the text, extends to criminal as well as civil cases.

(2) But papers filed in a criminal case become a part of the record and cannot be changed, except by order of the court after full hearing and as authorized by law.—Carroll v. State, 118 S.W. 1031, 56 Tex.Cr. 78.

Power to change judgment

(1) "The power of a court to change its judgment, as well as the time within which such change can be made, depends upon different principles."—State v. Douglass, 208 P. 236, 238, 35 Idaho 140.

(2) Amendment and correction of judgment in general, see the C.J.S. title Judgments § 236, also 34 C.J. p 228 note 80—p 229 note 82.

Particular courts

(1) In Vermont, county and municipal courts have been held to have in the knowledge of the court.⁴⁸

In the exercise of its power to amend court records, a court is not authorized to do more than make such records correspond to the actual facts.⁴⁹ So, a court cannot amend its records so as to make them show that which never occurred;⁵⁰ reflect a state of facts known to such court to be false;⁵¹ or create a new record or change the record so as to contradict or alter what in truth did take place.⁵² A court cannot, under the form of an amendment to its records, correct a judicial error⁵³ or remedy the effect of judicial nonaction,⁵⁴ such as by making a record of an order or judgment that was never in fact made or rendered.⁵⁵ Neither does it fall within the power of the courts to cure, by amendment, errors or omissions of a party to court proceedings,⁵⁶ or to cure errors or omissions of counsel.⁵⁷ The court, may not, however, be precluded from correcting a record entry merely because the "record" does not show that it is, itself, incorrect.⁵⁸

The power of the court to correct its record is usually regarded as inherent,⁵⁹ and not dependent the same power as regards amendment to their respective records.—Cootey v. Remington, 189 A. 151, 108 Vt. 441—Vermont Evaporator Co. v. Taft, 184 A. 704, 108 Vt. 209.

(2) In Massachusetts, a Boston municipal court was held to possess power to make its records conform to the truth.—Bryer v. American Surety Co. of New York, 189 N.E. 109, 285 Mass. 336.

(3) In Pennsylvania, orphans' courts have been held to be among those having power to amend their records.—In re Willing's Estate, 135 A. 751, 288 Pa. 337.

In different counties

A judge while holding the district court in one county within the district had no power to correct the records of the district court of another county, even on notice.—Williams v. Dean, 111 N.W. 931, 134 Iowa 216, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 410.

New record

A court cannot make a new record for another court to accord with parol proof of what such record should be.—In re Dubosky, D.C.Pa., 232 F. 380.

State court succeeding territorial court

The district court of Oklahoma is the legal successor of the territorial district court for the purpose of correcting the record of a judgment rendered by the territorial court in an action pending at the time of admission of the territory to statehood—

over such other court,⁶⁵ although the authority of one court to amend the records of another may exist by virtue of appropriate statutory provisions conferring such authority.⁶⁶ A succeeding judge may make the record speak a fact actually existent in a judicial proceeding, and which should be a part of the record.⁶⁷

In accordance with the rule that the records of the court can be altered only by the court itself, see supra this section, it has been held that the clerk of the court has no authority on his own responsibility to amend, change, or correct the court records,⁶⁸ particularly after adjournment.⁶⁹ There exists, however, authority to the effect that the clerk may, prior to the time that the minutes are signed by the presiding judge, or until the adjournment of court, or the expiration of the limitation fixed by statute, make the minutes speak the truth by correcting clerical errors,⁷⁰ and in a particular case, it has been held that the clerk had power of his own motion, during the term or before the first day of the next succeeding term, to supply an omission in the record.⁷¹

No third person has a right to alter or correct court records,⁷² and it is a serious assumption for any third person to attempt to do so personally or to procure a clerk or register to do so.⁷³

Where the rights of third persons will be affected by the allowance of an amendment for the purpose of putting into a process, pleading, or return something which was not originally in such process, pleading, or return, it has been considered that such an amendment will not, as a general rule, be allowed.⁷⁴

Change or mutilation of papers or records. In exercising its power of making necessary amendments to its records, a court has no authority to change or mutilate the papers or records already on file.⁷⁵

Reason for rule

"While the trial court loses jurisdiction of the case when an appeal is taken, it does not lose jurisdiction of its records."—Kansas City v. Jones Store Co., supra.

Action of appellate court

Where trial court's order overruling motion to correct record constituted a final judgment from which no appeal was taken, and was res judicata as to same facts, an order of an appellate court postponing hearing on appeal and granting permission to either party to apply to trial court for correction of record, did not enlarge power of trial court or tend to undo that which court had already done, since the effect of the appellate court's action was merely to postpone the case and give the parties an opportunity if the way was still open to correct the record in the trial court.—Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. Bearden, 268 S.W. 36, 167 Ark. 444.

§ 233. — Subject-Matter

Errors or omissions due to accident, mistake or inadvertence are subject to correction by amendment.

Errors or omissions in court records, due to accident, mistake, or inadvertence, are subject to correction by amendment.⁷⁶ This is particularly true as regards clerical errors or mistakes as distinguished from mistakes arising from the judicial acts of the court,⁷⁷ and as regards mistake and accident not

Date of will

(1) Where it appeared that a will filed for probate was dated at a time subsequent to actual date of execution, as appeared from proof of execution and order admitting the will to probate, it was held that a further order purporting to amend the error by inserting the correct date was subject to a writ of prohibition under the text rule.—State v. Nystrom, 186 N.W. 750, 45 S.D. 193.

(2) It was suggested in such case that the amending order declare that the certificate of proof and earlier order be thereby corrected to read the correct date instead of the incorrect one, thus avoiding changes or interlineations in the original papers.—State v. Nystrom, supra.

Indorsing matter on records

Intentionally rendered judgment

A judgment intentionally rendered on a misapprehension of facts is not subject to vacation as a clerical error or misprision.—Karrick v. Wetmore, 97 N.E. 92, 210 Mass. 578.

Mistakes of recording officers of the court, as distinguished from mistakes arising from the judicial acts of the court, are subject to correction by amendment of the court records.—McPherson v. State, 63 S.W. 2d 282, 187 Ark. 872.

"Clerical errors"

(1) "Clerical errors," within the meaning of the text, have been held to include not only those made by clerk but also those mistakes apparent on record, made by counsel or even by court in progress of trial.—Wilder v. Bush, 75 So. 143, 201 Ala. 21.

(2) "Clerical errors" appearing from face of record may, of course, be corrected by amendment within the text rule.—Buchanan v. West arising from the neglect or fault of a party.⁷⁸ Accordingly, failure to perform the mere ministerial function of recording a judicial pronouncement may be cured by subsequent amendment of the court records,⁷⁹ and, in a proper case, matter which has been improperly injected into court records may be stricken therefrom.⁸⁰ On the other hand, subject to limitations on the power of the court to authorize amendments of court records, as discussed in § 232, they cannot be amended to show the happening of an event which never in fact occurred,⁸¹ or to make a correction rendered necessary by conduct of counsel.⁸² A record which correctly represents the testimony which was given in court is not subject to amendment to show the real state of facts on discovery that such testimony was false.⁸³ In a particular case, it was held that the trial court did not err in refusing a request to amend its minutes to show certain representations which were set forth in substance in an affidavit in support of a motion which was denied by the court.⁸⁴

§ 234. — Time for Amendment

In the absence of a statutory limitation, the right to amend is not lost by mere lapse of time.

The power of the court to amend its records so as to make them speak the truth is not lost by lapse of time,⁸⁵ unless there is a statutory limitation of the time within which amendments may be made,⁸⁶ and in accordance with this view it has been held that in a proper case a court may amend its records at any time to make them reflect the truth.⁸⁷ At any rate, the minutes or records of a trial court may be amended by such court at any time during the term,⁸⁸ or prior to the giving and enrollment of a

"Clerical error"

A "clerical error," within the meaning of a rule authorizing courts of record to correct their own clerical errors and mistakes at any time, has been held to be an error or mistake ordinarily apparent on the face of the record, capable of being corrected by reference to the record; and is usually a mistake in the clerical work of transcribing the particular record, or is usually a mistake in form.—Wilson v. judgment or decree;⁸⁹ and it has been held, as regards clerical errors, that this may be done even after entry of final judgment.⁹⁰ Moreover, it has been held that such correction may be made by the court in chambers as well as in term.⁹¹ In consonance with the view that an amendment of court records may be had at any time to make them conform to the truth, see supra this section, it is very generally held that an amendment may be made after the expiration of the term at which the proceedings were had,⁹² particularly for the correction of mere clerical errors,⁹³ or in vacation,⁹⁴ or whenever the error is brought to the notice of the court, provided the rights of third persons are not prejudiced.⁹⁵ There are, on the other hand, cases in which the right to amend the record after the term has been denied,⁹⁶ especially where the substantial or judicial amendment, as distinguished from an amendment of a mere clerical error, is sought,⁹⁷ and particularly as regards records of chancery courts which lose their jurisdiction of the cause at the end of the term at which a final decree is rendered.⁹⁸ At all events, the evidence must be sufficient and substantial to warrant correction of court records after the term at which they were made.⁹⁹ certification that a bill of exceptions is correct preclude an amendment from thereafter being made in a proper case;² and even after affirmance of a judgment, the trial court, on its knowledge of what took place, can correct the journal entry so as to make it recite the judgment actually rendered.³

A long delay in seeking an amendment may warrant a refusal to allow the same;⁴ and it has been held that after a party has acquiesced in the use of affidavits in proceedings in the surrogate's court, and they have been considered by the court as a part of the record, and used for all the purposes for which they were made, and no further use of them is contemplated, it is too late to move to strike them from the record, for the reason that they divulge a privileged communication.⁵

§ 235. — Proceedings for Amendment

Any interested person may institute proceedings to have court records amended to speak the truth.

Any person interested, even though not a party to court proceedings, may apply to have court records corrected so that they will speak the truth.⁶ Where the parties are sui juris, it has been held that the court cannot make an amendment of its record without a request by some of the interested parties.⁷ The solicitor general of the state has been held to be the correct officer to initiate proceedings to correct the records of state courts in criminal proceedings.⁸

An amendment of the record may be made on motion with due notice to the opposite party,⁹ and on hearing,¹⁰ or, as is more generally observed in a particular case, the proper mode of correcting errors in court records, or supplying omissions therein, is by formal motion heard on notice and formal order entered in accordance with the facts as they are made to appear.¹¹ Accordingly, it has been held that notice to opposing parties and hearing is essential,¹² and it has been declared to be the better practice, where the rights of litigants will be affected by a proposed amendment, to require that notice be given to them.¹³ This is particularly true if the change in the record be material,¹⁴ and if made at a term subsequent to that in which the proceedings represented by the record were had.¹⁵ So, it has been held that where the parties to a cause were sui juris, it was erroneous for the trial court on its own motion to amend the record without giving to the parties affected notice or an opportunity to be heard.¹⁶ There exists, however, authority to the effect that the power to amend may be exercised by the court on its own motion without notice,¹⁷ no notice being required particularly if amendment is made at the same term as that in which the proceedings were had.¹⁸ No notice need, of course, be given to the moving party.¹⁹

Failure of movant to verify a motion to amend court records may be waived by conduct of the opposite party in participating in the hearing on such motion without objection.²⁰ On a motion to amend, the question will not be considered collaterally as to what effect the amendment may have or whether the court had the right to do what it is alleged to have done.²¹

Where application for amendment of court records is by petition, it is not governed by strict rules of pleading.²²

Showing necessary to warrant amendment. In order to warrant an amendment of court records, it is, usually, necessary that a basis for such amendment be shown by written memorandum from such records,²³ affidavits,²⁴ or the recollection of an individual,²⁵ being insufficient for such purpose. The general rule is particularly applicable where an amendment is sought after the expiration of the term at which the proceedings were had.²⁶ There is, on the other hand, authority for the view that the evidence need not be found in the record;²⁷ that parol evidence is admissible to show the true state of facts;²⁸ and that an amendment may be based on the recollection of the court,²⁹ or on the recollection of the court supplemented or refreshed by such official memoranda as may be available under the circumstances.³⁰ furtherance of justice,³² such court is the exclusive judge of the necessity and propriety of an amendment of its record and of the sufficiency of the proof offered in support thereof.³³ The court should, however, exercise its power of amendment with great caution and only where it clearly appears that a mistake has been made.³⁴ In other words, the proof to correct a record of a case should be clear and unequivocal to the effect that the written memorial does not reflect the facts.³⁵ Where the amendment is sought by way of motion, all proper evidence may be heard under the motion.³⁶ In a proceeding for correction of its record a court may, however, consider only the evidence introduced on the hearing, and may not thereafter obtain another signature, and compare it with the disputed signature, with the aid of a magnifying glass, and treat as evidence the knowledge thus obtained.³⁷

Order or record of amendment. When a court, after the parties have departed without day and after the judgment term, amends the record, the order or record of such proceeding must show the jurisdictional basis for making the order, namely, notice or presence of parties, and the ground or basis whereupon the court acted in amending.³⁸

§ 236. — Effect of Amendment

An amendment to court records relates back to the time when proceedings were in fact had, and may make valid that which was apparently defective, or render ineffective an apparently valid record entry.

An amendment to court records relates back to the time when the proceedings were in fact had,³⁹ and may make valid that which was apparently defective⁴⁰ or render ineffective an apparently valid entry,⁴¹ as the case may be.

An amendment to court records is presumed to correct them so that they set forth the true situation,⁴² and is presumed to be based on the court's own knowledge of what actually occurred.⁴³ So, an amended record is evidence of the truth which it contains,⁴⁴ and, in accordance with the general rule as to court records generally, see infra § 237, imports absolute verity,⁴⁵ and cannot be collaterally attacked.⁴⁶

§ 237. Operation and Effect

Records of a court constitute evidence of its official acts and import verity.

The higher or more important courts can speak only through their records,⁴⁹ which constitute the legal evidence of such courts' official acts,⁵⁰ and are binding on the judge or judicial officer making such records as well as on the litigating parties to the proceedings.⁵¹ On the other hand, it is held that matters relating to proceedings in courts but not disclosed by their records do not legally exist.⁵² Such records import absolute verity⁵³ unless or un-fact which is essential to the jurisdiction of the court,⁵⁸ and where the approval of the judge is required by statute, a record which has not been so approved is not conclusive.⁵⁹ Evidence may be considered for the purpose of explaining and supporting the record rather than to contradict it.⁶⁰ Where the court and counsel disagree as to a pertinent fact or facts and there is a minute entry in relation thereto, such entry will control.⁶¹

Construction. In construing a judicial record, it must be read as a whole,⁶² and a construction which gives some effect to the record is preferred to one which makes it inoperative.⁶³ So, the records of trial courts should be so construed as to support and not defeat judgments founded thereon,⁶⁴ and papers on file as part of the record should be construed in such manner as to effectuate their purpose.⁶⁵ It may be legally presumed from the record entries that they were entered by the person having authority to make them.⁶⁶ More particularly, it may be presumed that every entry in the clerk's docket has been made by direction of the court, in pursuance of either an order for the particular entry or of a general order, or of a general usage presupposing such an order.⁶⁷ The final record, the journal, and the appearance docket of a court of record are each records of such court, and the silence of the first does not negative the existence of a fact shown by either of the other two;⁶⁸ nor does silence of a record as to whether witnesses were sworn negative the fact where it appears that complete records required to show such fact were not always kept.⁶⁹ The fact that in the minutes for a certain day of the special term chambers, offered in evidence without calling or explaining the absence of the clerk who kept them, or showing when or how they were made, there first occur memoranda of certain determinations by one of the judges, including his approval of a certain undertaking, and on a later page memoranda of determinations by another judge, including the noting of a default of defendant in respect of the justification of sureties on the same undertaking, does not show that such orders were made at any particular time in the day, or that the entries were made consecutively in relation to time, and leaves such questions to be determined by the jury.⁷⁰

Particular record entries may be corrected by other parts of the record affirmatively showing what such entries should be.⁷¹ So, the record of a court of general jurisdiction reciting that defendant has been duly served with process may be overthrown by other portions of the record of equal dignity showing that such recital is not true.⁷² An order of court controls the clerk's recitals where the two are in conflict.⁷³ The minutes of the court, regularly entered and approved, in a criminal case, will control over the judge's minutes on his docket, or memorandum made by him thereon, when they are conflicting.⁷⁴ Judgment of conviction controls as against the record of conviction in case of conflict.⁷⁵ The later of two conflicting docket entries made by the same court on the same rights of the same parties prevails.⁷⁶ Where the opinion and journal of an appellate court are in conflict, it has been held that the journal controls.⁷⁷

VIII. COURTS EXERCISING ORIGINAL JURISDICTION

A. COURTS OF GENERAL OR SUPERIOR JURISDICTION

§ 238. Nature, Grounds, and Extent of Jurisdiction Generally

The jurisdiction of courts of general, original jurisdiction depends in general on the governing provisions of the constitution or statute.

The nature and character of the jurisdiction which a court possesses may be determined in many cases from the constitutional provisions in reference to such court,⁷⁸ although jurisdiction which is exercised by common-law courts or courts of general jurisdiction may depend to some extent at least on statutes conferring it.⁷⁹ Superior courts of general jurisdiction may also possess inherent powers other than those conferred by statute,⁸⁰ and the jurisdiction of such a court is not to be restricted except by the unequivocally expressed will of the legislature;⁸¹ but a limitation on jurisdiction duly imposed will, however, be given effect.⁸²

For definition of "courts of original jurisdiction,"

see supra § 3; definition of "original jurisdiction," see supra § 17; definition of "courts of general jurisdiction," see supra § 2; and definition of "general jurisdiction," see supra § 16.

§ 239. Construction and Application of Provisions Conferring Jurisdiction

In the exercise of special statutory powers or jurisdiction, courts of general jurisdiction must follow and not go beyond the statutory authorization.

In respect of the exercise of special statutory powers or jurisdiction by a court of general jurisdiction, the status of such court is in general substantially that of a court of limited and inferior jurisdiction, as shown infra § 245, and the court must follow, and not go beyond, the statutory authorization.⁸³

Courts of general original common-law jurisdiction have inherent power to issue writs of mandamus in proper cases;⁸⁴ and independently of this, constitutions or statutes commonly confer such power on them either in express terms⁸⁵ or by authorizing them to issue writs in general,⁸⁶ or otherwise by implication.⁸⁷

Constitutional and statutory provisions governing jurisdiction in criminal cases are considered generally in the C.J.S. title Criminal Law §§ 112-121, also 16 C.J. p 149 note 35-p 151 note 61.

§ 240. — Of Civil Causes

General rules as to what are "civil actions" or "civil cases" apply in determining the meaning of such terms in statutory or constitutional provisions governing jurisdiction.

In determining what are "civil actions" or "civil cases," as used in constitutional or statutory provisions governing jurisdiction, rules set forth in the C.J.S. title Actions § 1 a (8), b (2) as to the meaning of such terms are applicable.⁸⁸

§ 241. — Of "Special Cases"

A "special case" within the meaning of a constitutional provision permitting the legislature to confer jurisdiction in "special cases" has been defined as a case unknown to the framework of courts of law or equity, but this definition has not been accepted universally.

The view has been taken that, within the meaning of a constitutional provision permitting the legislature to confer jurisdiction on a certain court in "special cases," a special case is a case unknown to the framework of the courts of law or equity;⁸⁹

but it has also been considered that under such a provision all remedies which were pursued by actions at common law were not excluded, and that jurisdiction might be conferred where the remedy was by a bill in equity.⁹⁰ Particular actions or proceedings have been considered and held to be "special cases" within the meaning of the constitutional provision,⁹¹ while other actions or proceedings have been held not to be "special cases."⁹²

§ 242. — Of Actions Ex Contractu

General rules as to what are actions ex contractu apply in determining whether or not a court has jurisdiction of a particular action.

In determining what are actions ex contractu within the jurisdiction of the particular court, rules set forth in the C.J.S. title Actions § 1 a (3) as to what are actions ex contractu are applicable.⁹³

Examine Pocket Parts for later cases.

§ 243. — Of Actions Ex Delicto

General rules as to what are actions in tort apply in determining whether or not a court has jurisdiction of a particular action.

In determining what are actions in tort, which are within the jurisdiction of a particular court, rules set forth in the C.J.S. title Actions § 1 a (4) as to what are actions in tort are applicable.⁹⁴

B. COURTS OF LIMITED OR INFERIOR JURISDICTION

§ 244. Nature and Scope of Limitations

In respect of jurisdiction, courts of limited or inferior jurisdiction are confined within the limits of the powers granted, and no powers are to be regarded as granted by implication other than those which are necessary for the full exercise of powers expressly granted.

Inferior courts of limited jurisdiction may not in general assume a power by implication,⁹⁵ but must remain within the limits of the powers granted.⁹⁶ While it has been stated broadly that a statute conferring a limited jurisdiction is construed liberally in so far as the mode of proceeding is concerned,⁹⁷ the powers conferred on courts of limited or inferior jurisdiction must be exercised by them in the mode prescribed,⁹⁸ and such a court cannot entertain a controversy which is not clearly within the comprehension of the law conferring jurisdiction,⁹⁹ and an inferior tribunal cannot, under pretense of determining its jurisdiction, usurp a jurisdiction which is denied to it,¹ nor can it, when having jurisdiction of the subject matter in controversy, abuse or exceed its legitimate powers.²

The mere fact that a court is designated a court of record does not affect its jurisdiction;³ but if the court is a local and inferior court, its jurisdiction must be determined from the statutes creating it.⁴

§ 245. — What Are Courts of Limited Jurisdiction

A court of whatever rank may, in the exercise of special statutory powers, have the status of a court of limited and inferior jurisdiction, and the fact that a court has exclusive jurisdiction in certain cases does not necessarily prevent its classification as a court of limited jurisdiction.

In respect of the exercise of special statutory powers, a court of whatever rank,⁵ including a court of general jurisdiction,⁶ is governed by the same rules that are applicable to courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction, and in general may, in this connection, be regarded as such a court.⁷

"Limited jurisdiction" defined see supra § 16.

Where certain jurisdiction is expressly conferred by statute on a court, all power necessary to carry such jurisdiction into effect is likewise conferred thereby.—Ex parte State, 71 Ala. 371.

96. Alaska.—Schofield v. Powell, 5 Alaska 373.

Quasi judicial body of limited jurisdiction can exercise no power not expressly or impliedly conferred on it.—City of New York v. Public Service Commission for First Dist., 171 N.Y.S. 830, 104 Misc. 306, affirmed People ex rel. City of New York v. Public Service Commission, 172 N.Y.S. 912, 186 App.Div. 888.

Construction of statute

A statute which confers a limited jurisdiction is construed strictly in so far as the extent of the jurisdiction is concerned.—Gary Realty Co. v. Swinney, 269 S.W. 961, 306 Mo. 592, certiorari denied Swinney v. Gary Realty Co., 45 S.Ct. 513, 268 U.S. 695, 69 L.Ed. 1162.

97. Mo.—Gary Realty Co. v. Swinney, supra.

Pleading and practice in inferior tribunals

It has been stated broadly that strict rules of pleading and procedure which are applicable to courts of record do not apply to inferior tribunals.—Gipner v. State Civil Service Commission of California, 56 P.2d 535, 13 Cal.App.2d 100.

Retroactive effect of statute

Statute defining jurisdiction of a court did not apply to an action pending before the passage and approval of the statute.—Mullen v. Renzlaman, 119 P. 641, 31 Okl. 53, Ann.Cas.1913D 778—15 C.J. p 982 note 10 [a].

Jurisdiction not acquired

Court authorized by statute to entertain jurisdiction in a particular case only, if undertaking to exercise jurisdiction in case to which statute is inapplicable, does not acquire jurisdiction.—Tulsa Terminal, Storage & Transfer Co. v. Thomas, 18 P.2d 891, 162 Okl. 5.

Quasi-judicial body of limited jurisdiction cannot act in excess of its powers on matters over which it has general jurisdiction.—*City of New York v. Special jurisdiction

(1) When jurisdiction is vested by statute, contrary not appearing, court, although of general jurisdiction otherwise, is of special jurisdiction as to statutory authority.—Blount County Bank v. Barnes, 118 So. 460, 218 Ala. 230.

(2) A court of general jurisdiction may have special statutory jurisdiction conferred on it, not exercised according to the common law, and which does not belong to it as a court of general jurisdiction, and in such cases its decisions are treated as those of courts of special jurisdiction.—Central Illinois Public Service Co. v. Industrial Commission, 127 N.E. 80, 293 Ill. 62—Calkins v. Calkins, 82 N.E. 242, 229 Ill. 68.

(3) When a court of general jurisdiction has powers conferred on it by statute, which it did not otherwise possess, it is in that respect treated as a special tribunal.—Maguire's Case, 115 A. 176, 120 Me. 398.

Validity of proceedings

A view somewhat at variance with the statement in the text is found in the statement that: "The jurisdiction of the court which rendered the judgment was complete. It was a general jurisdiction over the whole subject matter; and while acting within that jurisdiction, their judgments are not to be impeached, though erroneous on the face of them. The court of common pleas did not in this case, it is true, proceed according to the course of the common law; it acted under the re-

Where an act confers on a court exclusive jurisdiction in certain cases, but abstains from conferring general jurisdiction, such court is one of limited jurisdiction.⁸ However, the view has been taken that, although courts may be limited in their jurisdiction as to the division of judicial powers between them, they are not thereby made courts of inferior jurisdiction whose judgments are void unless the record shows the facts necessary to bring all their powers into exercise.⁹

For definition of "courts of limited jurisdiction," see supra § 2, and of "inferior courts," see supra § 7.

§ 246. — Civil Jurisdiction of Criminal Courts

Civil jurisdiction, sometimes conferred on criminal courts, must be exercised in the manner, and within the limits, fixed by the applicable constitutional or statutory provision.

The civil jurisdiction of a criminal court must in each case be determined from the constitutional or statutory provision creating or conferring jurisdiction on it,¹⁰ and, where civil jurisdiction is conferred, it can be exercised only in the mode and to the extent designated.¹¹

The jurisdiction of a court may be limited by reason of the subject matter in controversy,¹² as in the case of actions which involve the title to, or an interest in, land, as shown in the following subdivision. Apart from the question as to whether or not title to real property is involved, considered in the following subdivision, certain courts have, by statute, been denied jurisdiction of an action of trespass quare clausum fregit.¹³ A statutory provision which permits defendant in a summary proceeding in an inferior court to recover the possession of real property to set up an equitable defense does not purport to confer equity jurisdiction on inferior courts.¹⁴ Certain inferior courts have jurisdiction to determine title to personal property as an incident to the authority to protect their own process and to aid their own officers where the exercise of equity powers is not involved.¹⁵

Courts of inferior or limited original jurisdiction have no jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus,¹⁶ unless such jurisdiction is conferred by constitutional or statutory provision.¹⁷

b. Title to Real Property

Some courts do not have jurisdiction of actions in which title to real property is involved or in issue, or to be tried.

The jurisdiction of a court may be limited by excluding jurisdiction of actions in which the title to, or an interest in, real property is involved or in issue,¹⁸ or of actions to try, or to hear and determine, title to land.¹⁹

As to whether title to, or an interest in, real property is involved or in issue so as to exclude jurisdiction, the general rule is that, if the title is the principal thing to be determined, it may be said that the title is involved or in issue;²⁰ but if the question arises only incidentally, the title is not involved or in issue so as to affect the jurisdiction of the court,²¹ even though, according to some cases, it may become necessary to pass on the question of title as an incident to the issues involved.²² As otherwise stated, a suit is one involving the title to real property so as to exclude jurisdiction only where the necessary result of the judgment or decree is that one party gains or another party loses an interest in real property, or where the title is so put in issue by the pleadings that the decision of the case necessarily involves the judicial determination of such rights.²³ Some limitations are applicable where no final judgment may be rendered which would not have the effect of divesting one of the parties of title and possession and vesting them in the other.²⁴

A case is not necessarily within the limitation imposed on the jurisdiction of some courts merely because the suit or action involves the right of possession of real property,²⁵ nor because the records of title to real property may be competent evidence.²⁶

According to some cases title to real property is involved so as to exclude jurisdiction where in order to recover, plaintiff must either prove²⁷ or disprove title.²⁸

While, under the practice in some jurisdictions, simply raising an issue as to title by the pleading does not exclude jurisdiction,²⁹ and the question as to whether the action is one to try title to land does not necessarily depend primarily on the construction of plaintiff's petition,³⁰ whether or not the action or suit comes within the limitation so as to exclude jurisdiction may, under the governing practice, be determinable from the pleadings,³¹ and the method of putting title in issue by plea is sometimes regulated by statute or rule of court.³² Un-

Bill of particulars

Jurisdiction was not excluded where there were no allegations in plaintiff's bill of particulars which called for exercise of general equity jurisdiction or which called in question title to real property, especially where neither the answers which called for the exercise of equity jurisdiction or decision of a question regarding title nor other pleading by defendant had been filed when the court was called on to rule on a demurrer to the bill of particulars.—Bevard v. Title not put in issue

Title is not put in issue by defendant's pleading, so as to exclude jurisdiction, where it does not allege facts which show or tend to show that title is in issue or must necessarily be tried; pleading which contains only conclusions of law is not sufficient.—Johnson v. Greenen, 188 N.E. 796, 98 Ind.App. 612.

der some statutes, the question as to jurisdiction is to be determined by the declaration.³³ The mere statement in a pleading of a conclusion that the title is involved or in issue is not sufficient to exclude jurisdiction.³⁴ Under some circumstances, the question as to whether jurisdiction is excluded may be determinable from the pleadings and proof.³⁵

Questions as to jurisdiction of justices of the peace of actions involving title to real property are considered in the C.J.S. title Justices of the Peace § 30, also 35 C.J. p 499 note 49—p 509 note 52.

Particular actions or suits. Some statutory provisions which exclude jurisdiction in the case of disputed title to real property relate only to actions as distinguished from special proceedings.³⁶

Among other suits or actions³⁷ which, under particular circumstances, have been regarded as not within the particular limitation involved, so as to exclude jurisdiction, are an action for damages for trespass on real property,³⁸ a suit to enjoin trespass on land in which title is only incidentally involved,³⁹ actions against tenants,⁴⁰ and actions arising out of, or connected with, contracts for the sale or exchange of, or mortgages of, real property.⁴¹

Unverified pleading of defendant insufficient

Ind.—Johnson v. Greenen, 188 N.E. 796, 98 Ind.App. 612.

Affidavit in support of plea

(1) Affidavit in support of defendant's plea was insufficient because it failed to set forth the source, nature, and extent of the title claimed by defendant.—Kahalekulu v. Kamaka, 29 Hawaii 336.

(2) Affidavit of defendant in support of plea to jurisdiction on ground that title would be brought in question, was insufficient where it failed to show that alleged contract for purchase by defendant of property in question, on which claim of title was based, was still in force and effect.—Jellings v. Kathe, 30 Hawaii 160.

Alleging ownership in third person

Peacock, 74 P.2d 359, 181 Okl. 383—Hodge v. Mayfield, 223 P. 853, 98 Okl. 8.

Summary proceedings

Notwithstanding a statutory provision denying to a particular court jurisdiction of any "civil action" in which title to real property is involved, it was held that the court had jurisdiction of a summary proceeding to remove alleged squatters, notwithstanding defendant pleaded title, in view of another statutory provision conferring jurisdiction on such court of summary proceedings to remove tenants and owners.—In re Pirew, 172 N.Y.S. 307, 105 Misc. 21.

(2) Divorce actions.—Laizure v. Baker, 11 P.2d 560, 91 Colo. 48.

Equity jurisdiction

A statute providing that the county court may give the administratrix permission to bring a suit, the object of which is to quiet title to real property, to remove a cloud therefrom, or to procure any legal or equitable relief to make the title marketable, is in aid of the jurisdiction of the county court, and not a surrender of the same to the district court, and does not vest in the district court any part of the probate jurisdiction of the county court.—Whitlock v. Alliance Coal Co., 214 P. 546, 73 Colo. 205.

County courts. Although for some purposes the county courts are superior courts,² they are inferior courts with relation to the district courts in so far as the latter have jurisdiction of appeals from the county courts.³ There have been other decisions relating to the county courts,⁴ including decisions as to their jurisdiction⁵ and procedure,⁶ and as to the review of their proceedings.⁷

Police courts. The review of police court proceedings has been the subject of judicial decision.⁸

§ 255. Connecticut

The superior, city, borough, town, and common pleas courts of Connecticut are courts of original jurisdiction.

There have been decisions relating to the superior court,⁹ which is a court of general jurisdiction,¹⁰ and it is considered as one court for the whole state.¹¹ the review of proceedings of borough¹⁷ and town¹⁸ courts.

(2) On the other hand, no judgment can be entered by the district court which could not have been entered by the county court.—Estes v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 113 P. 1005, 49 Colo. 378.

§ 256. Delaware

The superior and common pleas courts of Delaware are courts of original jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of the superior courts¹⁹ and courts of common pleas²⁰ have been the subject of judicial inquiry, and there have been decisions as to the review of proceedings of common pleas courts.²¹

§ 257. Florida

In Florida the circuit courts, the county courts, the county judge's courts, the Escambia County court of record, and the civil courts of record are courts of original jurisdiction.

The circuit courts of Florida are superior courts²² of record,²³ and of general jurisdiction,²⁴ both at law and in equity;²⁵ and there have been decisions relating to the circuit courts,²⁶ including decisions as to their jurisdiction of particular matters.²⁷

County and county judges' courts. Neither the county courts²⁸ nor the county judges' courts²⁹ are courts of general jurisdiction proceeding according to the course of the common law. They have only such jurisdiction as is conferred upon them by the constitution or laws of the state.³⁰ The organization of a county court operates to suspend the jurisdiction of the county judge's court in ordinary civil actions at law.³¹ There have also been other decisions relating to the county courts,³² including de-

Probate matters

(1) The constitution gives circuit courts supervision and appellate jurisdiction of matters arising before county judges pertaining to their probate jurisdiction, or to the estates and interests of minors; and under such provision, notwithstanding

ing a statute provides that any order declaring a judge qualified shall be subject to review only by the supreme court, the order of a county judge denying suggestion of disqualification in a proceeding for revocation of probate of a purported will in the county judge's court, is reviewable only by appeal to the circuit court.—Petition of Kansas Masonic Home, 175 So. 526, 128 Fla. 708.

(2) Order of county judge finding himself qualified in cause seeking revocation of probate of will is matter "pertaining to probate jurisdiction" within constitutional provision giving circuit courts appellate jurisdiction in such matters.—In re Florida Conference Ass'n of Seventh Day Adventists, Fla., 175 So. 715.

(3) Under Probate Act of 1933, where a circuit judge took jurisdiction of a will contest because of the county judge's illness, an appeal from his decision lay to the circuit court, which should consider the appeal on its merits, rather than to the supreme court.—In re Wilkins' Estate, 174 So. 412, 128 Fla. 273.

Exceptions to court of appeals

(1) A statute, passed under authority of the constitutional amendment of 1927, providing for a review of an order of the Atlanta municipal court refusing a new trial or other final judgment or order, by bill of exceptions to the court of appeals in the same manner as in the case of a judgment of the superior court, is not unconstitutional.—Dillon v. Continental Trust Co., 175 S.E. 652, 179 Ga. 198—Cable Piano Co. v. Williamson, 176 S.E. 103, 49 Ga.App. 529.

(2) Under such statute, a direct bill of exceptions from Atlanta municipal court will lie to court of appeals.—Dillon v. Continental Trust Co., 175 S.E. 652, 179 Ga. 198—Dillon v. Continental Trust Co., 176 S.E. 650, 49 Ga.App. 664.

(3) Time for presentation of bill of exceptions to trial judge for certification.—Jenkins v. Federal Life Ins. Co., 176 S.E. 111, 49 Ga.App. 514.

(4) It was formerly the rule under the constitutional amendment of 1916 (see Acts 1916 p 19), that direct bill of exceptions from the municipal court established under amendment of 1912 (see Acts 1912 p 30) would not lie to the court of appeals, which rule applied to all pending cases from municipal court irrespective of time when writ of error was sued out.—Griffin v. § 259. Idaho

There are decisions relating to the district and probate courts of Idaho.

In Idaho, there have been decisions relating to the district courts²⁵ and the probate courts.²⁶ The district courts are courts of general jurisdiction at law and in equity,²⁷ having jurisdiction in all special proceedings and in the issuance of writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all writs necessary to the exercise of their powers.²⁸

§ 260. Illinois

Courts exercising original jurisdiction in Illinois include circuit courts, county courts, the superior court of Cook County, city courts, and the municipal court of Chicago.

The circuit courts, in Illinois, have original jurisdiction of all causes in law and equity,²⁹ and they are courts of general common-law and chancery jurisdiction.³⁰ Circuit courts under some statutes also exercise special jurisdiction,³¹ and in exercising such jurisdiction such courts are limited to the language of the statute conferring it.³²

County courts. There have been a number of decisions relating to the county courts,³³ which are courts of record³⁴ with limited, although not inferior, jurisdiction,³⁵ having general jurisdiction over particular classes of subjects³⁶ with power to pass on the question of their jurisdiction and to exercise it when it is once determined.³⁷ These courts have no general equity jurisdiction and can have such jurisdiction only by an express grant from the legislature.³⁸ However, they exercise a certain equitable jurisdiction in the allowance of claims against the estates of decedents,³⁹ and in the adjustment of accounts of guardians,⁴⁰ and they have, within the limits of their jurisdiction, the power to enforce certain of their decrees and orders by chancery process.⁴¹

The superior court of Cook County has general jurisdiction in both law and equity, concurrent with that of the circuit court.⁴² There is no difference between the two courts except in name, the superior court being in legal effect a circuit court, and its judges being in effect circuit judges;⁴³ but they are separate courts and distinct entities.⁴⁴ Provisions of the Municipal Court Act do not apply to proceedings in this court.⁴⁵

City courts. There have also been decisions relating to the city courts⁴⁶ which have the same general jurisdiction as circuit courts,⁴⁷ although they are limited to causes of action arising within the city,⁴⁸ and their territorial jurisdiction, for the service of original process, is confined to the corporate limits of the city.⁴⁹ There are decisions relating to the practice and procedure in such courts,⁵⁰ and to appeals therefrom.⁵¹

The municipal court of Chicago is a constitutional court⁵² of record.⁵³ This court operates as a state agency for the administration of justice,⁵⁴ and as a part of the local municipal government of Chicago,⁵⁵ for the purpose of administering the law therein.⁵⁶ It goes under the generic name of, and is in

§ 271. Mississippi

In Mississippi the circuit court has original common-law jurisdiction, while jurisdiction in matters of equity is in the chancery court. The county court has been said to be a court of general jurisdiction, although it has no jurisdiction in equity for the maintenance of civil rights.

The circuit court of Mississippi has original common-law jurisdiction in all matters not vested by the constitution in some other court,⁹² while jurisdiction in matters of equity is conferred on the chancery court, as is also jurisdiction in matters testamentary and of administration.⁹³ The police courts are inferior courts having jurisdiction concurrent with justices of the peace within certain territorial limits.⁹⁴

Instructions

Minn.—Mississippi State Highway Commission v. Reddoch, 186 So. 298, followed in 186 So. 300, and

The county court, which has jurisdiction concurrent with the circuit and chancery courts in all matters of law and equity wherein the amount or value of the thing in controversy does not exceed a certain amount,⁹⁵ has been said to be a court of general jurisdiction and a court of record,⁹⁶ although it has no jurisdiction in equity for the maintenance of civil rights.⁹⁷ There have been decisions relating to the practice and procedure in county courts,⁹⁸ and to the review of its proceedings.⁹⁹

§ 272. Missouri

The circuit courts are courts of general jurisdiction in Missouri, while the county courts are courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction.

There have been decisions relating to the Missouri circuit courts, which are constitutional courts

Miss.—Mississippi State Highway Department v. Haines, 139 So. 168, 162 Miss. 216—Welch v. Bryant, 128 So. 734, 157 Miss. 559.

Scope of review; trial de novo

Under statute providing for appeal from county court to circuit court, the circuit court considers the case on the record made in the county court and, if harmful error is found, grants a new trial de novo in the circuit court, if not, affirms the judgment.—Mississippi State Highway Commission v. Reddoch, Miss., 186 So. 298, followed in 186 So. 300 and Mississippi State Highway Commission v. Huff, 186 So. 314—Carmichael v. J. Cahn Co., Miss., 184 So. 417—*Blount v. § 279. New York

- a. Supreme court
- b. County court
- c. City or municipal courts
- d. Other courts

a. Supreme Court

In New York the supreme court is a court of original general jurisdiction in both law and equity, its jurisdiction being wide enough to cover any and all causes and persons within the territorial jurisdiction of the state.

Under the New York constitution the supreme court is a court of original general jurisdiction in both law and equity.³⁷ Its jurisdiction is unlimited.

Attachment issued out of circuit court, notwithstanding suit was subsequently transferred to chancery, because circuit court was without jurisdiction, was not void, and constituted lien on land.—Vaux v. Vaux, 172 A. 68, 115 N.J.Eq. 586.

Only court

The supreme court is the only

ed,³⁸ unqualified,³⁹ and coextensive with the boundaries of the state,⁴⁰ the legislature having no power to deprive it of jurisdiction,⁴¹ or limit or qualify the same,⁴² although it may grant concurrent jurisdiction to other courts.⁴³ It has jurisdiction to hear and determine any justiciable question of which the common-law or chancery courts of England would have had cognizance, subject only to territorial limitations,⁴⁴ such jurisdiction being wide enough to cover any and all causes of action and any and all persons within the state's jurisdiction.⁴⁵ court of original general jurisdiction.—Landers v. Staten Island R. Co., 53 N.Y. 450, 14 Abb.Pr., N.S., 346, reversing 13 Abb.Pr., N.S., 338.—Decker v. Canzoneri, 9 N.Y.S.2d 210, 256 App.Div. 68.

Regardless of amount

N.Y.—Allen v. Fink, 207 N.Y.S. 428, modified on other grounds 208 N.Y.S. 827, 211 App.Div. 411.

In the absence of anything limiting the general jurisdiction of the supreme court, it has power to try and determine all property rights claimed by an assignee in bankruptcy and all equity suits with regard to such property or in any way affecting it.—Cook v. Whipple, 55 N.Y. 150, 14 Am.R. 202.

Amount in controversy

N.Y.—Marsh v. Benson, 34 N.Y. 358, reversing 11 Abb.Pr. 241, 19 How. Pr. 415.

Equity jurisdiction constitutional

N.Y.—Aberdeen Restaurant Corporation v. Gottfried, 285 N.Y.S. 832, 158 Misc. 785.

Equitable issues under counterclaim

N.Y.—New York v. Matthews, 108 N.E. 80, 213 N.Y. 563, affirming 141 N.Y.S. 432, 156 App.Div. 490.

Appointment of receiver

N.Y.—Potter v. Merchants' Bank, 28 N.Y. 641, 86 Am.D. 273.—Bangs v. Duckinfield, 18 N.Y. 592.

Matters of surrogate's court jurisdiction

(1) The supreme court may take the account of a trustee, probate a will, and exercise jurisdiction in many other matters where the Surrogate's Court also has jurisdiction.—In re Malloy's Estate, 17 N.E.2d 108, 278 N.Y. 429, affirming 1 N.Y.S.2d 184, 253 App.Div. 30.

(2) Supreme court has jurisdiction to determine effect of disposition of real property by will.—Daniell v. Hopkins, 177 N.E. 390, 257 N.Y. 112, 76 A.L.R. 1367, reversing 245 N.Y.S. 818, 231 App.Div. 745.

(3) In supreme court, power to remove testamentary trustee is not limited to specific instances prescribed by statute as grounds for removal of executor, as is case in surrogate's court.—In re Drummond's Estate, 165 N.Y.S. 78, 100 Misc. 78.

(4) In litigation involving trust indenture and appointment under will, jurisdiction to dispose of questions of validity under statute of perpetuities and effect of acts of parties vested in supreme court of state.—Chase Nat. Bank v. Frazier, 276 N.Y.S. 524, 243 App.Div. 623, affirmed 199 N.E. 526, 269 N.Y. 541.

(5) Although it has jurisdiction to determine validity and enforce contract to dispose of property by will, the supreme court will refuse to act where simpler method is available in surrogate's court.—Schley v. Donlin, 225 N.Y.S. 453, 131 Misc. 208.

Removal of cause from other court

Where plaintiffs, occupying apartment in Bronx County near Yonkers line in building owned by defendant corporation, whose principal place of business was in the borough of Bronx, instituted negligence action in the city court of Yonkers, whose jurisdiction covers Westchester County, defendant corporation was entitled, as a matter of law, to have action removed to the supreme court, Westchester County, and upon such removal to have it transferred to the supreme court, Bronx County.—Hochman v. Frenbern Realty Corporation, 1 N.Y.S.2d 676, 253 App.Div. 835.

Setting aside assignment

Children claiming reassignment of mortgages to administrator was fraudulent may sue in supreme court to set aside assignment.—In re Wien's Estate, 244 N.Y.S. 397, 137 Misc. 456.

15 C.J. p 995 note 27.

Formal action necessary

The supreme court has inherent power to enjoin any illegal act, but it is not a summary power except when expressly made so by statute, and it can ordinarily be exercised only within well-defined limits, and through the medium of formal actions.—In re Harvie, 203 N.Y.S. 497, 122 Misc. 669.

Action to enforce payment of mortgage tax

N.Y.—People v. Park Row Realty Co., 151 N.Y.S. 804, 88 Misc. 254, affirmed 152 N.Y.S. 1133, 169 App. Div. 903.

Declaration of rights and injunction

Supreme court has jurisdiction of actions by gas and electric corporations for declaration of rights and injunction against enforcement of statute requiring reports, payment into state treasury, and refund of unclaimed consumer deposits, court of claims being open to claimants in cases of contracts where state comptroller may not audit.—Brooklyn Borough Gas Co. v. Bennett, 277 N.Y.S. 203, 154 Misc. 106.

Determination as to constitutionality of act apportioning senatorial districts

N.Y.—Sherrill v. O'Brien, 81 N.E. 124, 188 N.Y. 185, 117 Am.S.R. 841.

The court sits in special term for the trial of equity cases⁴⁶ and the determination of motions,⁴⁷ and in trial term for the trial of jury cases,⁴⁸ but the court is the same no matter how it is sitting.⁴⁹

b. County Court

The county courts of New York are of limited jurisdiction, and possess only such power and authority as the constitution and statutes confer on them.

Ejectment

N.Y.—City of Syracuse v. Hogan, 138 N.E. 406, 234 N.Y. 457, reversing 193 N.Y.S. 928, 201 App.Div. 874.

Examination of books of bank by stockholders

Supreme court has power, in its discretion, to compel the officers of a national bank in process of liquidation, on expiration of its charter by limitation, to exhibit books, papers, and assets of the bank to the stockholders, and to permit them to examine and to take extracts therefrom.—Tuttle v. Iron Nat. Bank, 62 N.E. 761, 170 N.Y. 9, affirming 73 N.Y.S. 1150, 67 App.Div. 627.

Matrimonial cases

N.Y.—Berry v. Berry, 114 N.Y.S. 497, 130 App.Div. 53.

Recanvass of votes

It has jurisdiction by mandamus to direct recanvass of votes cast for mayor.—Matter of Brush, 75 N.Y.S. 285, 69 App.Div. 617.

Interfering with county court jurisdiction

While, under Civil Pract. Act § 130, certain ex parte orders in actions pending in a county court may be made, and subsequently vacated or modified by the supreme court, the latter court may not exercise jurisdiction in matters affecting substantial rights of the parties, or interfering with the jurisdiction and authority of the county court.—Curry v. Earll, 203 N.Y.S. 750, 209 App.Div. 205.

How issue joined

In supreme court defendant must serve an answer on plaintiff's attorney, issue being joined by service of the pleading.—Bachrach v. Fisher & Grassgren, 244 N.Y.S. 23, 137 Misc. 382.

46. N.Y.—In re Davies, 61 N.E. 118, 168 N.Y. 89, 32 N.Y.Civ.Proc. 163, 58 L.R.A. 855, reversing 67 N.Y.S. 492, 55 App.Div. 245, reversing 66 N.Y.S. 129, 32 Misc. 1.—Syenite Trap Rock Co. v. Williams, 153 N.Y.S. 74, 167 App.Div. 774, affirmed, 119 N.E. 1081, 222 N.Y. 689.

Damages for trespass and injunction
N.Y.—Racquette Falls Land Co. v. Buoyce, 89 N.Y.S. 359, 43 Misc. 402, reversed on other grounds 95 N.Y.S. 381, 108 App.Div. 67.

Partition

N.Y.—Hewlett v. Wood, 3 Hun 736, appeal dismissed 62 N.Y. 75.

Prohibition

The special term has power to issue an alternative writ of prohibition to the court of general sessions.—People v. General Sessions Ct., 98 N.Y.S. 557, 112 App.Div. 424, reversing 98 N.Y.S. 66, 49 Misc. 72, and affirmed 78 N.E. 149, 185 N.Y. 504.

Severance of issues

In proceeding by city of New York to condemn lands, special term had jurisdiction to sever city's claims to lands under water within projected lines of streets, and after making findings thereon dismiss city's claims thereto.—In re Lands on Upper New York Bay in City of New York, 213 N.Y.S. 486, 215 App.Div. 204, modified on other grounds 214 N.Y.S. 234, 215 App.Div. 438, appeals dismissed. In re Staten Island Proceeding, City of New York, 154 N.E. 589, 243 N.Y. 522, modified on other grounds. In re Water Front on Upper New York Bay in Borough of Richmond, City of New York, 167 N.E. 911, 246 N.Y. 1, reargument denied 159 N.E. 646, 246 N.Y. 549, and certiorari denied Greater New York Dock & Warehouse Co. v. Stapleton Dock & Warehouse Corporation, 48 S.Ct. 320, 276 U.S. 626, 72 L.Ed. 738.

Procedure replacing certiorari, mandamus, and prohibition

The statutory procedure superseding certiorari to review, mandamus, and prohibition consolidates practice relating to such modes of relief, somewhat broadening meaning of terms previously used, scope of relief granted, and jurisdiction of special term.—Penn-York Natural Gas Corporation v. Maltbie, 299 N.Y.S. 1004, 164 Misc. 569.

47. N.Y.—Peabody v. West, 103 N.Y.S. 942, 119 App.Div. 103.

No general equity jurisdictions

Special term for motions has no general equity jurisdiction.—Barrett v. Barrett, 225 N.Y.S. 174, 221 App.Div. 710.—Goodwin v. Goodwin, 13 N.Y.S.2d 894, 172 Misc. 118.

An issue of law raised by a demurrer to the complaint may be tried at a special term for motions on consent.—Peabody v. West, 103 N.Y.S. 942, 119 App.Div. 103.

Order of discharge on payment into court

Where several parties made claim to the proceeds of a policy, the special term of the supreme court had jurisdiction to make an order discharging the insurer from all liability on payment of the proceeds of the policy into court.—Lane v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 92 N.Y.S. 877, 102 App.Div. 470.

In particular judicial district

Where material facts involved on motion for prohibition against award of contract for completing barge canal along a certain route occurred in a county within a certain judicial district, a special term within that district had jurisdiction.—People ex rel. Jordan v. Wotherspoon, 157 N.Y.S. 923, 94 Misc. 419, affirmed 162 N.Y.S. 1138, 176 App.Div. 947.

Stay of municipal court judgment

(1) Special term is without power to stay, pending final determination of foreclosure action instituted by trustee of bondholders, execution of money judgment obtained by individual bondholder in municipal court action.—Continental Bank & Trust Co. of New York v. 898 West End Ave. Corporation, 280 N.Y.S. 929, 245 App.Div. 86.

(2) Real Prop. L. § 122, pertaining to reorganization of mortgaged premises does not confer such power, where at time stay was granted reorganization plan was merely in process of formulation.—Continental Bank & Trust Co. of New York v. 898 West End Ave. Corporation, supra.

Review of commission

The purpose of amendment to civil practice act with relation to special proceedings against a body or officer was not to enlarge scope of review by special term to include certiorari proceedings based on sufficiency of evidence to sustain determination of education commissioner refusing to license a certain motion picture or weight of evidence on which determination was based, but such review is still within jurisdiction of appellate division.—Foy Productions v. Graves, 299 N.Y.S. 671, 164 Misc. 479, transferred 3 N.Y.S.2d 573, 253 App.Div. 475, affirmed 15 N.E.2d 435, 278 N.Y. 498.

48. N.Y.—In re Sisson, 166 N.Y.S. 521, 179 App.Div. 236.
15 C.J. p 995 note 33.

Trial term without jurisdiction in mandamus

Final order made by the trial term denying an application for a peremptory writ of mandamus and dismissing the proceeding is without jurisdiction, and must be reversed.—People ex rel. Blank v. Supreme Lodge Knights and Ladies of Honor, 110 N.Y.S. 148, 126 App.Div. 86.

49. N.Y.—Salmon v. Gedney, 75 N.Y. 479, affirming 11 Hun 29.—Smith v. Rathbun, 22 Hun 150, affirmed 88 N.Y. 660.

The county courts of New York⁵⁰ are courts of limited jurisdiction,⁵¹ not general jurisdiction,⁵² and possess only such jurisdiction and powers as are expressly given to them by the constitution and statutes enacted pursuant thereto.⁵³

They have no equity jurisdiction except such as is provided by statute,⁵⁴ or such as is incidental to the powers granted.⁵⁵ They have no power to determine title to,⁵⁶ or right to possession of,⁵⁷ realty, except as such questions are incident to a foreclosure of a mortgage⁵⁸ or portion⁵⁹ of realty of which the county courts have jurisdiction.⁶⁰ They may also have jurisdiction of an action for the invasion of the right of possession.⁶¹

Its jurisdiction in actions to recover money only is restricted to cases in which the complaint demands judgment for a sum not exceeding a certain amount.⁶² Once having obtained jurisdiction, however, it may enter judgment for any sum.⁶³ In the case of the foreclosure of a lien on personal

15 C.J. p 995 note 37.

Mandamus

County court has no jurisdiction to issue mandamus against town supervisor to compel his sale of bonds and turning of the money over to a drainage commission.—People ex rel. Dunphy v. Chaney, 156 N.Y.S. 1035, 171 App. Div. 303.

54. N.Y.—Rohsler v. Rohsler, 199 N.Y.S. 830, 120 Misc. 569—Ertrachter v. Locust Bldg. Co., 169 N.Y.S. 879, 102 Misc. 368—Stappenbeck v. Mather, 133 N.Y.S. 482, 73 Misc. 434.

Specific performance

Where an option, executed after a lease, gave tenant the right to have a new formal lease executed at the expiration of the term at a different rent, the county court, in summary proceedings against the tenant as holdover, did not have jurisdiction to dismiss landlord's petition on the merits on the ground that tenant had exercised his option, which in effect decreed specific performance of the option, since the county court has no such equitable jurisdiction.—Armstrong v. Shapiro, 202 N.Y.S. 305, 207 App. Div. 304, reversing 196 N.Y.S. 630, 119 Misc. 522.

55. N.Y.—Stappenbeck v. Mather, 133 N.Y.S. 482, 73 Misc. 434.

Consent of parties immaterial

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 340, the county court has no jurisdiction, even by consent of parties, in an action in equity to set aside certain transfers of realty alleged to have been made in fraud of creditors, where a determination of the issues raised would involve the title to realty.—Ertrachter v. Locust Bldg. Co., supra.

In trespass action

N.Y.—Lopiano v. New York Telephone Co., 250 N.Y.S. 223, 139 Misc. 831.

57. N.Y.—Andrews v. Horton, 120 N.Y.S. 431, 66 Misc. 66—Wilkins v. Williams, 3 N.Y.S. 897, 15 N.Y. Civ. Proc. 168.

No jurisdiction of action of ejectment

N.Y.—Oneida County Savings Bank of Rome v. Saunders, 166 N.Y.S. 280, 179 App. Div. 282—Piekello v. Lake View Brewing Co., 119 N.Y.S. 847, 65 Misc. 365.

58. N.Y.—Marcus v. Rosner, 197 N.Y.S. 503, 119 Misc. 517—Ertrachter v. Locust Bldg. Co., 169 N.Y.S. 879, 102 Misc. 368.

Putting purchaser in possession

Under Civ. Pract. Act §§ 67, 69, the county court, as an incident to a mortgage foreclosure, has jurisdiction of all matters relating to putting a purchaser at a foreclosure sale in possession.—Marcus v. Rosner, 197 N.Y.S. 503, 119 Misc. 517.

Determination of antecedent rights

If interest of infant, who conveyed property, was antecedent to mortgage executed by her grantee, in foreclosure of such mortgage, in which infant partly disaffirmed, county court did not have jurisdiction to adjudicate rights of infant.—Oneida County Savings Bank of Rome v. Saunders, 166 N.Y.S. 280, 179 App. Div. 282.

59. N.Y.—Ertrachter v. Locust Bldg. Co., 169 N.Y.S. 879, 102 Misc. 368.

60. N.Y.—Marcus v. Rosner, 197 N.Y.S. 503, 119 Misc. 517—Stappenbeck v. Mather, 133 N.Y.S. 482, 73 Misc. 434.

Subrogation in foreclosure action

A county court has jurisdiction, after a sale under a second mortgage, to subrogate a petitioner to the rights of the first mortgagee and order the proceeds of the sale paid to her, especially since statute gives such court, within its jurisdiction, the powers of a supreme court justice.—Bussing v. Whitaker, 163 N.Y.S. 982, 177 App. Div. 95.

61. N.Y.—Delamater v. Folz, 3 N.Y.S. 711, 50 Hun 528.

62. N.Y.—Tappin v. Maclean, 192 N.Y.S. 196, 117 Misc. 757—Owen v. Brown, 139 N.Y.S. 451, 78 Misc. 273.

63. N.Y.—Tappin v. Maclean, 192 N.Y.S. 196, 117 Misc. 757.

Distinguished from city court

While the city court which has jurisdiction of actions, irrespective of the amount in controversy, cannot render judgment for more than two thousand dollars, the county court, the jurisdiction of which is limited to actions in which the complaint demands judgment for no more than two thousand dollars, having acquired jurisdiction, may render any judgment the supreme court might render.—Tappin v. Maclean, supra.

Jurisdiction over counterclaim regardless of amount

N.Y.—Howard Iron Works v. Buffalo El. Co., 68 N.E. 66, 176 N.Y. 1, reversing 81 N.Y.S. 452, 81 App. Div. 386—Weinstein v. Helfenberg, 139 N.Y.S. 303, 78 Misc. 190.

Accrual of interest beyond two thousand dollars does not deprive county court of jurisdiction.—Tappin property the court's jurisdiction is limited to a certain amount.⁶⁴ It has been held that where the action is commenced by service of a summons, and the complaint states a cause of action beyond the jurisdiction of the court, the complaint may be amended to bring it within such jurisdiction.⁶⁵

In a case of which the county court has jurisdiction, it possesses the same jurisdiction, power, and authority as the supreme court possesses in a like case.⁶⁶

There are found in the reports numerous decisions with respect to such courts,⁶⁷ relating, inter alia, to such matters as jurisdiction over nonresidents of the county,⁶⁸ actions for money had and received,⁶⁹ procedure,⁷⁰ injunctions,⁷¹ its power over judgments of the city or municipal courts,⁷²

v. Maclean, 192 N.Y.S. 196, 117 Misc. 757.

64. N.Y.—First Trust & Deposit Co. v. Syrdelco, Inc., 292 N.Y.S. 206, 249 App.Div. 285, dismissal of appeal denied 7 N.E.2d 677, 273 N.Y. 528, appeal dismissed 11 N.E.2d 301, 275 N.Y. 468.

Mortgage on lease

Mortgage on lease of real estate held personal property mortgage, although in form of mortgage on real estate, and hence foreclosure action, although conducted as action to foreclose mortgage on real property, was for foreclosure of mortgage on personal property, as regards county court's jurisdiction.—First Trust & Deposit Co. v. Syrdelco, Inc., 292 N.Y.S. 206, 249 App.Div. 285, dismissal of appeal denied 7 N.E.2d 677, 273 N.Y. 528, appeal dismissed 11 N.E.2d 301, 275 N.Y. 468.

65. N.Y.—Owen v. Brown, 139 N.Y.S. 451, 78 Misc. 278.

66. N.Y.—Bussing v. Whitaker, 163 N.Y.S. 982, 177 App.Div. 95—Lowry v. Himmeler, 239 N.Y.S. 347, 136 Misc. 215—Gardenier v. Scripster, 210 N.Y.S. 331, 124 Misc. 332—Rohssler v. Rohssler, 199 N.Y.S. 830, 120 Misc. 569—Tappin v. Maclean, 192 N.Y.S. 196, 117 Misc. 757.

Adjusting equities in mortgage foreclosure

Under Civ.Pract.Act §§ 69, 74, county court has jurisdiction in foreclosure action by mortgagee to pass on defense that parties agreed, prior to execution of mortgage, that mortgagors would not be personally liable, and that mortgagee would look exclusively to land as security for debt.—Gardenier v. Scripster, 210 N.Y.S. 331, 124 Misc. 332.

Impressing trust

(1) County court is without jurisdiction of action by purchaser of land for partition to impress a part of the purchase money with a trust in favor of the rightful owner of the land and to substitute the money for the interests in the land owned by others and to confirm title in the purchaser, notwithstanding provision of Code Civ.Proc. § 348.—Stappenbeck v. Mather, 133 N.Y.S. 482, 73 Misc. 434.

(2) Where, in an action for partition in the county court, defendant interposed a counterclaim to impress an implied trust on the property, it was held that, although under Const. art 6 § 14, and Civ.Pract.Act § 67, limiting the jurisdiction of the county court, the court has no jurisdiction to impress a trust on real property, under Civ. Pract.Act § 69, formerly Code Civ.Proc. § 348, giving county courts the same jurisdiction as the supreme court possesses, in a like case after jurisdiction has once been acquired, and authorizing it to render judgment or grant any relief which the supreme court might render in a like case, the court has power to render judgment on the counterclaim.—Rohssler v. Rohssler, 199 N.Y.S. 830, 120 Misc. 569.

67. N.Y.—Savage v. Mitchell, 9 N.Y.S.2d 246, 256 App.Div. 881. 15 C.J. p 995 note 40.

Action against city of New York

N.Y.—Maisch v. New York, 111 N.Y.S. 645, 127 App.Div. 424, affirmed 86 N.E. 458, 193 N.Y. 460.

Action to declare forfeiture of contract for sale of realty

N.Y.—Andrews v. Horton, 120 N.Y.S. 431, 66 Misc. 66.

Action on judgment of justice of the peace of the county against resident of the county.—Fink v. Shoemaker, 68 N.Y.S. 1112, 33 Misc. 687.

68. N.Y.—Yager v. Yager, 212 N.Y.S. 707, 214 App.Div. 671, reversing 212 N.Y.S. 263, 125 Misc. 773. 15 C.J. p 996 note 41.

Residence of defendant in county necessary to jurisdiction of county court.—Yager v. Yager, supra.

Foreign corporation

County court has no jurisdiction of action against foreign corporation, such a corporation being a nonresident of the county.—Wachtel v. Diamond State Engineering Corporation, 213 N.Y.S. 77, 215 App.Div. 15.

Pleading necessary

Complaint in county court must allege that defendant is resident of county, and absence of such allegation creates presumption of defendant's residence elsewhere.—Yager v. Yager, 212 N.Y.S. 707, 214 App.Div. 671, reversing 212 N.Y.S. 263, 125 Misc. 773.

No jurisdiction by waiver

Foreign corporation's failure to deny jurisdictional fact held not to give county court jurisdiction of it, since jurisdiction can only be waived where, in certain circumstance, court could have jurisdiction, and not where court under constitution is without jurisdiction.—Wachtel v. Diamond State Engineering Corporation, 213 N.Y.S. 77, 215 App.Div. 15.

Damages from laying out street

Constitutional restriction is applicable only to actions for recovery of money, and not to proceedings to assess damages to landowners from the laying out of a street.—Matter of Polts St., 46 N.Y.S. 43, 18 App.Div. 563.

69. Oral realty contract

The county court has jurisdiction of subject matter of action for money had and received under oral agreement for purchase of land.—Savage v. Mitchell, 9 N.Y.S.2d 246, 256 App.Div. 881.

70. Foreclosure action

In foreclosure in county court should have permitted plaintiff to take judgment of foreclosure, subject to interest infant grantor had in property at time of execution and delivery of mortgage by his grantee, with leave to plaintiff to discontinue without prejudice to like action in court of general jurisdiction.—Oneida County Savings Bank of Rome v. Saunders, 166 N.Y.S. 280, 179 App. Div. 282.

Keeping court open for business

Purpose of Civ.Pract.Act § 70 providing that county court should always be open for transaction of business for which notice was not required to be given to adverse party except when otherwise provided by law was to give county judge in certain matters powers which court of chancery formerly possessed.—Rudd v. Hazard, 194 N.E. 764, 266 N.Y. 302, reversing 271 N.Y.S. 1042, 241 App. Div. 905, affirming 259 N.Y.S. 18, 144 Misc. 552.

71. N.Y.—People v. Dwyer, 90 N.Y. 402, 2 N.Y.Civ.Proc. 379.

72. Power over city court judgments

(1) Power of county court over judgment of city court of Buffalo is limited to enforcement of judgment after transcript thereof has been filed in Erie county clerk's office, under Buffalo City Court Act § 40.—Itzenplitz v. Chassin, 204 N.Y.S. 333, 122 Misc. 500.

Power of legislature to establish
N.Y.—Curtin v. Barton, 34 N.E. 1093, 139 N.Y. 505.

Amount in controversy

N.Y.—Hamburger v. Hellman, 90 N.Y.S. 1060.

Action on judgment of supreme court
N.Y.—Baldinger v. Turkowsky, 74 N.Y.S. 897, 36 Misc. 822.

Submission of controversy

The court has no jurisdiction where the case was submitted on an agreed state of facts, but was not accompanied by an affidavit of good faith.—Scheinholz v. Platt, 127 N.Y.S. 313.

No jurisdiction of action for recovery of moneys paid under duress
N.Y.—Goldstein v. Abramson, 86 N.Y.S. 30.

Collateral attack on judgment

City court judgment held subject to collateral attack for want of jurisdiction in action in supreme court.—Butter Amusement Corporation v. Garrison, 229 N.Y.S. 773, 224 App. Div. 278.

76. Action arising from conditional sales contract

Albany city court held without jurisdiction of action to replevy chattels where defendant's wrongful detention arose from default under conditional sales contract.—Frigid- aire Sales Corporation v. Dolan, 249 N.Y.S. 143, 139 Misc. 828.

Applicability of civil practice act

The silence of the Albany city court act as to the time in which an action may be commenced in the city court, as well as to how actions therein may be saved from limitation, renders applicable the sections of the civil practice act relating thereto.—Knox v. Beckford, 3 N.Y.S.2d 718, 167 Misc. 200.

Filing

N.Y.—Schmidt v. Elseman, 26 N.Y.S. 766, 6 Misc. 264.

Time for decision

(1) Justice of city court of Albany cannot render judgment after expiration of time prescribed.—American Ry. Express Co. v. Eddy, 220 N.Y.S. 164, 128 Misc. 502.

(2) Where, however, a jury is demanded, but is followed by a stipulation for submission to the court, plaintiff is entitled to have case restored to general calendar and date fixed for trial, the action not abating on expiration of the trial justice's term.—American Ry. Express Co. v. Eddy, supra.

Appeal

N.Y.—Phillips v. Hogan, 126 N.Y.S. 1088, 142 App. Div. 205.

Costs on appeal

Where the whole amount involved was but five hundred and fifty dollars, defendant should be allowed only fifty dollars of the one hundred and sixty-four dollars accrued costs, where plaintiff, after reversal on appeal of judgment in his favor, was allowed to amend the complaint and process.—Tierney v. Perkins, 179 N.Y.S. 904.

77. N.Y.—Daley v. Dennis, 242 N.Y.S. 408, 137 Misc. 1.

Waiver of procedural requirements

Charter provisions designed for regulation of procedure in city court may be waived like other personal, statutory, or constitutional rights or privileges.—Daley v. Dennis, supra.

Jurisdiction as to parties

(1) General appearance and participation in action in city court waived and cured all irregularities in preliminary proceedings.—Daley v. Dennis, supra.

(1) Generally

City or municipal courts have been established in a number of municipalities in the state. These courts are inferior local courts and are generally not courts of record.

City or municipal courts⁷⁵ have been established in a number of municipalities throughout the state of New York, including Albany,⁷⁶ Auburn,⁷⁷ and Binghamton.⁷⁸ City or municipal courts have also been

(2) No return is necessary in action in city court where defendant appears.—Daley v. Dennis, supra.

Default judgment

(1) Auburn city court acquiring jurisdiction by appearance of defendant could on default enter judgment on filing summons and complaint with proof of service.—Daley v. Dennis, supra.

(2) Defendant failing to apply for relief from such judgment until more than three months after entry, as required by statute, was not entitled to relief.—Daley v. Dennis, supra.

Charge to jury

Auburn city court judge may properly refuse to charge jury.—Atwater v. Lober, 239 N.Y.S. 340, 135 Misc. 560.

Appeals

(1) On appeal from Auburn city court, case is tried novo.—Doyle v. Freeman, 257 N.Y.S. 550, 235 App. Div. 345.

(2) Where plaintiff filed cross appeal from judgment demanding new trial in county court, Auburn city court judgment was superseded and action transferred to county court for exercise of original jurisdiction.—Jennings v. Piwinski, 241 N.Y.S. 349, 136 Misc. 447.

Appeal bonds or undertakings

(1) Appeal undertaking construed according to statute with reference to which parties are presumed to have contracted.—Atwater v. Lober, 239 N.Y.S. 340, 135 Misc. 560.

(2) Surety, on undertaking on appeal from Auburn city court, was not released from liability by stipulation for dismissal of appeal of which she had no notice.—Atwater v. Lober, supra.

78. Requirements as to residence

Residence within city either of plaintiff or of defendant is all that is necessary for jurisdiction of the court as to action within its jurisdiction.—Gahagan v. Fairbanks, 265 N.Y.S. 759, 147 Misc. 685.

Process

(1) In one case it was held that the city court of Binghamton acquired jurisdiction of nonresident defendant by service of process in Broome County, although outside city established in Brooklyn.⁷⁹ City or municipal courts | palities in state of New York, including Buffalo,⁸⁰ have been established in a number of other municilimits, the later statute conferring such jurisdiction being considered as not violating Const. art 6 § 18 which prohibits conferring greater jurisdiction on inferior courts than that possessed by county courts.—Gahagan v. Fairbanks, supra.

(3) In another case the court was held not to have jurisdiction under such service, the earlier statute permitting the same being held invalid.—Darling v. White, 124 N.Y.S. 846, 67 Misc. 366.

15 C.J. p 996 note 48.

80. N.Y.—City of Buffalo v. De Bon, 249 N.Y.S. 586, 232 App.Div. 318.—City of Buffalo v. Murphy, 239 N.Y.S. 206, 228 App.Div. 279, followed in City of Buffalo v. Heimbürg, 239 N.Y.S. 219, 228 App.Div. 753.—Newman v. Schwert, 284 N.Y.S. 682, 157 Misc. 764.

15 C.J. p 996 note 49.

Applicability of civil practice act

(1) The provisions of the civil practice act are expressly made applicable to this court with respect to practice and procedure, except as such rules conflict with the statutes dealing therewith specifically.—Newman v. Schwert, supra—Judge v. Milligan, 229 N.Y.S. 287, 131 Misc. 925.—A. D. Deemer Furniture Co. v. G. H. Poppenberg, Inc., 216 N.Y.S. 72, 127 Misc. 117.

(2) Nothing is added to the jurisdiction of the court by such provision.—A. D. Deemer Furniture Co. v. G. H. Poppenberg, Inc., supra.

(3) Civil practice act provision relating to entry of assignment of judgments held not in conflict with city court act and must be made applicable thereto.—Newman v. Schwert, supra.

(4) County clerk held required to accept transcript of judgment from Buffalo city court, notwithstanding assignment of judgment was indorsed on transcript, and city court act did not provide for assignments, since civil practice act provision providing for entry of assignment of judgment applied to city court act.—Newman v. Schwert, supra.

Jurisdiction like that of justice of peace

Under Buffalo City Charter § 456, L.1891 c 105, municipal court of city of Buffalo has in civil actions and proceedings jurisdiction at least equal to that of justice of the peace.—Brownell v. Parsons, 116 N.E. 366, 220 N.Y. 483, reversing 147 N.Y.S. 1100, 162 App.Div. 936.

Commitment of drug addicts

N.Y.—People ex rel. Sherwood v. City of Buffalo, 216 N.Y.S. 463, 127 Misc. 290.

Summary proceedings

Under Buffalo city charter, providing that its city court shall not have jurisdiction of a "civil action" involving title to real estate, but shall have jurisdiction of summary proceedings to remove tenants and "others," it is not ousted of jurisdiction of summary proceedings, under Code Civ.Proc. § 2232 subd 4, to remove squatters, by defendants pleading title to the land.—In re Pirew, 172 N.Y.S. 307, 105 Misc. 21.

Commencement of action

Either summons or voluntary appearance is essential to commencing civil action in city court of Buffalo.—City of Buffalo v. Murphy, 239 N.Y.S. 206, 228 App.Div. 279, followed in City of Buffalo v. Heimbürg, 239 N.Y.S. 219, 228 App.Div. 753.

Residence of defendants test of jurisdiction

City court of Buffalo has jurisdiction of parties in those actions in which all defendants are residents of Erie county, and all plaintiffs are nonresidents of county.—Winslow v. Rank, 282 N.Y.S. 654, 246 App.Div. 563.

Jurisdiction over nonresidents

(1) City court of Buffalo has jurisdiction against nonresident of county served within city.—Revere Rubber Co. v. Genesee Valley Blue Stone Co., 46 N.Y.S. 889, 20 App.Div. 166.—Livent v. Mostoff, 252 N.Y.S. 680, 141 Misc. 399.—Sauner v. Vohwinkel, 208 N.Y.S. 408, 124 Misc. 494.

(2) Action commenced by service in Erie county on resident thereof could have been brought in Buffalo city court.—Scioldoni v. Republic Light, Heat & Power Co., 231 N.Y.S. 311, 224 App.Div. 566, affirmed 168 N.E. 432, 251 N.Y. 574.

Interpleader

(1) On granting of insurance company's motion in action against it and individuals, claiming interests in premiums paid on canceled life insurance policies, to recover such premiums, that it be let out on paying amount thereof into court, action became equitable one in nature of interpleader, thereby depriving city court of jurisdiction.—Mason v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 9 N.Y.S.2d 539, 256 App.Div. 113.

(2) The section of Buffalo city court act purporting to give such court jurisdiction of interpleader actions is unconstitutional, such actions being equitable in nature.—Mason v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., supra.

Changing dates of issue and return of process

The clerk alone has such authority.—System Co. v. Kessler, 136 N.Y.S. 232.

Service of pleadings

In civil action in Buffalo city court, brought by city to collect penalty, defendant's attorneys were not entitled to have copy of complaint served on them.—City of Buffalo v. De Bon, 249 N.Y.S. 586, 232 App.Div. 318.

Defective pleadings

Only remedy against defective pleading in an action brought in municipal court of Buffalo is by demurrer.—A. D. Deemer Furniture Co. v. G. H. Poppenberg, Inc., 216 N.Y.S. 72, 127 Misc. 117.

Great liberality of pleading permitted

N.Y.—Catalano v. International R. Co., 145 N.Y.S. 1005.

Amendment of complaint during trial

N.Y.—Schork v. Moritz, 6 N.Y.S. 554.

Bill of particulars

On plaintiff's failure to serve bill of particulars, order of preclusion was not necessary to exclude evidence respecting matters requested.—Judge v. Milligan, 229 N.Y.S. 287, 131 Misc. 925.

Calendar practice

Rule of Buffalo city court providing that, where cause has been on reserved calendar for two years, it shall be dismissed by clerk without notice, held construable as authorizing clerk merely to dismiss case from calendar and not to dismiss complaint or render judgment, and as so construed was not invalid.—Ryan v. Hornblass, 269 N.Y.S. 838, 151 Misc. 157.

Examination before trial

Buffalo city court held without jurisdiction to order examination of a party before trial.—Strot v. Stork, 287 N.Y.S. 575, 153 Misc. 906.

Depositions

The taking of depositions is by a proceeding in an action, and since the relief is subsidiary to the main relief sought, such matters relate to jurisdiction, and under L.1909 c 570 § 115, conferring on courts of the city of Buffalo jurisdiction vested prior thereto in courts of justices of the peace, the proceeding in the city court of Buffalo to take a deposition should be under Code Civ.Proc. § 2980, relating to the deposition of witnesses for use in justice's court. Such provisions apply to taking the deposition of a witness who is a party to the suit in the City Court of Buffalo.—Windheim v. Lafayette Hotel Co., 190 N.Y.S. 833, 117 Misc. 113.

Corning,⁸¹ Dunkirk,⁸² Elmira,⁸³ Johnstown,⁸⁴ Mid-dletown,⁸⁵ Mount Vernon,⁸⁶ New Rochelle,⁸⁷ Ni-agara,⁸⁸ Norwich,⁸⁹ Oneonta,⁹⁰ and Rochester.⁹¹ City or municipal courts have also been established

Default judgments

(1) Applications to open default or other judgments of the city court of Buffalo, after transcript has been filed in the county clerk's office should be made directly to City Court, under Buffalo City Court Act § 20(18), L.1909 c 570, as amended by L.1915 c 188, and rules of court, and under § 46 city court has power to control any situation not provided for in former section.—Itzenplitz v. Chassin, 204 N.Y.S. 389, 122 Misc. 500.

(2) Where there were not sufficient facts before the city court of Buffalo to warrant opening the default and vacating the judgment, order opening a default judgment was improper.—Pfeiffer v. Rivoli Operating Corporation, 7 N.Y.S.2d 66, 255 App. Div. 825.

Summary judgment

(1) Buffalo City Court was held to have no power to grant summary judgment.—A. D. Deemer Furniture Co. v. G. H. Poppenberg, Inc., 216 N.Y.S. 72, 127 Misc. 117.

(2) Note, however, that an order vacating summary judgment in such court was held appealable, although a default order.—Doolittle v. Tiftickjian, 266 N.Y.S. 818, 239 App. Div. 140.

Power to charge the jury

N.Y.—Heath v. Kyles, 1 N.Y.S. 770.

Time for decision

Judge of Buffalo city court could not retain jurisdiction of case for seven months after closing of evidence by merely reserving decision and holding case for briefs. In such case he was without jurisdiction to render judgment in absence of record proof of filing of written stipulations by parties or their attorneys extending time for rendition of judgment.—Patrzykowski v. Mursten, 294 N.Y.S. 62, 250 App. Div. 355.

Notice of entry of judgment

Practice, in Buffalo city court, of giving notice of entry of summary judgment, does not amount to rule requiring notice, nor would failure to observe such rule affect validity of judgment.—Doolittle v. Tiftickjian, 266 N.Y.S. 818, 239 App. Div. 140.

Correcting date of entry of judgment

Where, on defendant's motion for new trial, and with plaintiff's consent, amount of judgment and verdict was reduced by city court, and, on defendant's motion, city court changed the date of entry of judgment to date of reduction thereof, judgment in its amended form did not become effective until court allowed reduction, so that the corrected date of entry was a proper disposition of the motion on its merits.—Niro v. Mahoney, 3 N.Y.S.2d 118, 167 Misc. 27.

Judgments or orders appealable

Order denying motion to strike out from record amendment to judgment authorizing body execution was appealable.—Metropolitan Commercial Corporation v. Scheffler, 256 N.Y.S. 473, 143 Misc. 359.

Appeals

(1) Where city court judge stated reasons for decision fully in letter to interested counsel, it was not necessary that evidence be included in return for hearing of appeal.—Labianca v. Digianna, 244 N.Y.S. 437, 137 Misc. 725.

(2) Stay of execution pending.—Buffalo Wholesale Hardware Co. v. Schutrum, 166 N.Y.S. 726.

(3) Errors reviewable.—Peck v. Klepfel, 242 N.Y.S. 161, 137 Misc. 274.

(4) Sufficiency of evidence to sustain judgment.—Krehbiel v. Carroll Bros., 300 N.Y.S. 66, 252 App. Div. 933.

(5) Harmless errors.—Niro v. Mahoney, 3 N.Y.S.2d 118, 167 Misc. 27.

Adjournments

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2933, providing for adjournment of cases in justices' courts, where commissions are issued, to afford opportunity for their execution and return, and the city charter of Buffalo, making this provision applicable to the municipal court, the calling of a case for trial in that court, the introduction of a commission, and an objection to its admission because not properly executed, was not such a commencement of the trial as to deprive the court of power to order an adjournment to permit the commission to be corrected.—Winquist v. Preston, 102 N.Y.S. 1023, 118 App. Div. 564.

81. Power and jurisdiction

Power and jurisdiction of city court of Corning, under L.1905 c 142 § 96, to grant adjournments for more than ninety days, held not limited or affected by Code Civ. Proc. § 2968, limiting period of adjournment of justice courts, § 96 coming within exceptions of § 93.—Warren Refining & Chemical Co. v. Sebring, 181 N.Y.S. 730, 192 App. Div. 14.

Payment of costs as condition precedent to appeal

N.Y.—Rising v. Sebring, 104 N.Y.S. 486, appeal dismissed 109 N.Y.S. 1144.

82. Appeals

That exhibits were not present in return on appeal does not authorize reversal of judgment and dismissal of complaint, where absence of exhibits could not be attributed to fault of either party.—New York Cent. R. Co. v. Muszalski, 299 N.Y.S. 45, 252 App. Div. 251, reversing New York Cent. R. Co. v. Muczalski, 273 N.Y.S. 667, 154 Misc. 608.

83. N.Y.—Murray v. American Casualty Ins. Co., 85 N.Y.S. 449, 88 App. Div. 224.

Rules of justice's court applicable

(1) As to pleading.—Kopczynski v. Kusper, 143 N.Y.S. 130, 158 App. Div. 247.

(2) Service of process.—Murray v. American Casualty Ins. Co., 85 N.Y.S. 449, 88 App. Div. 224.

84. N.Y.—Sweetman v. Emple, 161 N.Y.S. 822.

85. Powers of judge

Under statute creating city court of city of Middletown, the judge thereof had the powers of a justice of the supreme court at chambers and the powers of the county judge of Orange County.—Andrews v. Andrews, 1 N.Y.S.2d 760, 166 Misc. 297.

86. Appeals from city court of Mount Vernon wherein amount demanded in complaint was less than two hundred dollars may be taken only to county court of Westchester.—Cassin v. Heath, 292 N.Y.S. 739, 249 App. Div. 856.

87. Attacking want of jurisdiction

In action by board of health of city of New Rochelle in city court for penalty for violation of ordinance of board, point that board was without authority to bring action could not be taken by demurrer, in view of New Rochelle City Charter § 209, and Code Civ. Proc. § 2939, but is timely raised by motion to dismiss at end of evidence.—Board of Health of New Rochelle v. Farrell, 165 N.Y.S. 811, 178 App. Div. 714.

88. Setting aside judgment

N.Y.—Matter of Korpilinski, 146 N.Y.S. 859, 84 Misc. 96.

89. N.Y.—Johnson v. Case, 162 N.Y.S. 841, 97 Misc. 247.

90. Action for nuisance and trespass N.Y.—Collar v. Ulster & D. R. Co., 131 N.Y.S. 56, 72 Misc. 274.

Title to land

This court has no jurisdiction where title to land comes into question on plaintiff's own showing.—Collar v. Ulster & D. R. Co., supra.

91. Applicability of civil practice act

Statute permitting a judgment to be rendered against one or more of several defendants according to their respective liabilities upon all the evidence without regard to the party by whom it has been introduced will be applied in the city court of Rochester, notwithstanding such court is not a court of record, and that provisions of the civil practice act, so far as matters of practice and procedure are concerned, apply only to courts of record except as the acts creating them invite its application, since such statute relates to a substantive matter, and hence governs such rights in whatever courts litigation to maintain them may be had.—Wheatley v. Boyce, 300 N.Y.S. 117, 165 Misc. 512.

Applicability of general rules of practice

The city court of Rochester is not a "court of record," in which the general rules of practice apply.—Employers Liability Assur. Corporation v. Fisher, 13 N.Y.S.2d 902.

Process

(1) Under Code Civ.Proc. § 3135, requiring mandates of justices of the peace to be entirely filled up, so as to have no blank in the date or otherwise, and providing that a mandate issued and delivered for execution contrary thereto is void, a summons of the city court of Rochester was a nullity, where the blank space for plaintiff's name was not filled in.—O'Brien v. Foster, 181 N.Y.S. 69.

(2) L.1918 c 495 § 512 subd. (c), authorizing the city court of Rochester to amend, correct, or modify any process or mandate, does not authorize it to amend or correct a null or void process; and hence Code Civ. Proc. § 3135, prohibiting blanks in mandates, is not inconsistent therewith, or repealed by that act, especially in view of § 3226, as amended by L.1918 c. 493, enumerating the provisions of the code applicable to such court.—O'Brien v. Foster, supra.

Territorial jurisdiction

Statute authorizing service of summons in Rochester city court action in town of Monroe county adjoining such city held not unconstitutional.—Rochester Exposition Ass'n v. Borogard, 267 N.Y.S. 723, 149 Misc. 200—15 C.J. p 996 note 56 [a].

Assault

Rochester city court had jurisdiction of action for assault.—Schell v. Vergo, 4 N.Y.S.2d 644, 166 Misc. 839.

Pleading

(1) It seems that the rules obtaining in the justice's court govern pleadings in the city court of Rochester.—Bennett v. Piscitello, 9 N.Y.S. 2d 69, 170 Misc. 177.

(2) In seller's action to recover balance of price of oil burner, wherein buyers based counterclaim on breach of express warranty as to oil consumption, court assumed that seller met allegations of counterclaim as to breach of warranty by "traverse or avoidance," although a reply would have been proper.—Bennett v. Piscitello, supra.

Jury terms

The charter provision of Rochester that all trials by jury in city court shall be had at regular jury terms unless a special jury shall be ordered by a judge in the interests of justice, is an exception to the general statutory provision that each jury trial in a summary proceeding shall be had before a jury drawn for that particular case, and the charter provision prevails where the two apparently conflict.—Macomber v. Wilkinson, 6 N.Y.S.2d 608.

Summary proceedings

The statutes providing for summary proceedings to recover possession of realty apply to such proceedings brought in the city court. In summary proceeding by landlord in city court of Rochester, where tenant demanded jury trial when there was no regular panel of jurors drawn for the months of July and August, court properly placed case on the next jury calendar for September under Rochester charter provision that all trials by jury shall be had at the regular jury terms unless a special jury shall be ordered by a judge in the interests of justice, as against contention that under statute trial by jury must be had before a special jury.—Macomber v. Wilkinson, 6 N.Y.S.2d 608.

Verdicts

Service of notice of motion to set aside verdict of a jury does not constitute the making of the motion under Rochester City Court Act § 512 subd "c," providing that a motion to set aside a verdict must be made at the close of the trial or within fifteen days after the entry of the judgment, and a motion was not made in time where notice was served thirteen days after judgment, which was returnable seventeen days after judgment.—Cleary v. New York State Rys., 191 N.Y.S. 71, 199 App. Div. 28, reversing 190 N.Y.S. 300, 199 App.Div. 228.

Collateral attack on judgment

Form or validity of judgment rendered in Rochester city court specifying that it was not on merits held not subject to collateral attack in subsequent action on same cause, where defendant failed to move to amend judgment under provision of city charter or to appeal therefrom.—Ouriel v. John Petrossi Co., 287

N.Y.S. 116, 247 App.Div. 861, reversing Ouriel v. Di Fiore, 279 N.Y.S. 395, 155 Misc. 421.

Order appealable

Order denying motion to set aside verdict and for new trial.—Cleary v. New York State Rys., 190 N.Y.S. 300, 198 App.Div. 228, reversed on other grounds 191 N.Y.S. 71, 199 App.Div. 28.

On appeal county court is not bound by city court's determination of the facts.—Levenberg v. Ludington, 274 N.Y.S. 193, 152 Misc. 735.

92. N.Y.—Rome v. Foot, 162 N.Y.S. 781, 175 App.Div. 459.

93. N.Y.—Curtin v. Barton, 34 N.E. 1093, 139 N.Y. 505.
15 C.J. p 996 note 58.

94. Money had and received

An action to recover one hundred dollars, paid as part of consideration for contract to purchase realty alleged to have been induced by fraud, held an action at law for money had and received, over which city court of Troy had jurisdiction.—Cohen v. Feathers, 205 N.Y.S. 685, 209 App. Div. 780.

95. On appeal on questions of law, county court cannot retry case de novo, and the county court should not reverse the judgment as against the weight of evidence unless the lower court could not reasonably have arrived at its decision.—Jacobson v. Mailman, 246 N.Y.S. 433, 138 Misc. 227.

96. Appeals

(1) Appeal from city court to county court, in absence of undertaking to perfect an appeal for new trial, demanded in the notice of appeal, stands as appeal on questions of law only.—Harrison Bros. Co. v. Excelsior Bag & Mfg. Co., 168 N.Y.S. 291, 180 App.Div. 790.

(2) Defendant appealing from city court to county court, showing intention to file undertaking necessary to appeal for new trial, demanded in notice of appeal, and that its default was due to neglect of its attorney, should be allowed to file it and perfect appeal.—Harrison Bros. Co. v. Excelsior Bag & Mfg. Co., supra.

97. Appeals

City court's omission to grant new trial after setting aside verdict rendered in plaintiff's favor would be supplied by appellate division of supreme court.—Caputo v. Thompson, 286 N.Y.S. 920, 247 App.Div. 890, modifying 287 N.Y.S. 346, 247 App. Div. 797.

98. N.Y.—Hochman v. Frenbern Realty Corporation, 1 N.Y.S.2d 676, 253 App.Div. 835.
15 C.J. p 996 note 59.

These courts are inferior local courts⁹⁹ of limited jurisdiction, possessing only such powers as are conferred upon them by statute.¹ As such they are generally not courts of record,² and because of a constitutional prohibition the legislature has no power to make them such,³ unless, as in the case of the municipal court of the city of New York it is a continuation, consolidation, or reorganization of a formerly existing court, see subdivision c (2) of this section. Statutory provisions concerning the jurisdiction of, and practice in, such courts must be strictly followed.⁴

(2) City Court of the City of New York

The city court of the city of New York is a court of inferior and limited jurisdiction, having no jurisdiction or powers not conferred on it by the constitution and statutes.

While a court of record,⁵ the city court of the city of New York is not a court of general jurisdiction.⁶ It is an inferior court⁷ confined to the territorial limits of the city of New York,⁸ and has only such jurisdiction and powers as are conferred upon it by the constitution and statutes.⁹

No equitable jurisdiction

N.Y.—Merritt v. Halliday, 95 N.Y. S. 381, 107 App.Div. 596.

Jurisdiction as to parties

(1) Residence of either plaintiff or defendant within the city is required to confer jurisdiction on the court.—Santoro v. Frusciante, 4 N.Y.S.2d 741, 254 App.Div. 783.

(2) Cause of action within general jurisdiction of Yonkers city court is, so far as parties are concerned, likewise within that jurisdiction if statutory requirements as to defendants' residence are met.—Battaly v. Coffin, 260 N.Y.S. 96, 236 App.Div. 807, followed in 260 N.Y.S. 97, 236 App.Div. 807.

(3) Where neither plaintiff nor defendant resided in the city of Yonkers, a defendant specially appearing was entitled to an order granting her motion to vacate service of summons on ground of want of jurisdiction of city court of Yonkers.—Santoro v. Frusciante, supra.

Execution against person

Requirement that execution against person issue in county where defendant resides is fulfilled when execution is issued to city marshal against defendant living in city where he resides.—Klec v. Bablash, 247 N.Y.S. 179, 232 App.Div. 681.

99. N.Y.—Andrews v. Andrews, 1 N.Y.S.2d 760, 166 Misc. 297.

1. N.Y.—Patrzykowski v. Mursten, 294 N.Y.S. 62, 250 App.Div. 355.

2. N.Y.—Newman v. Schwert, 284 N.Y.S. 682, 157 Misc. 764.

Buffalo municipal court

By direct provision of Judiciary L. § 3, the municipal court of city of Buffalo is not a court of record.—Brownell v. Parsons, 116 N.E. 366, 220 N.Y. 483, reversing 147 N.Y.S. 1100, 162 App.Div. 936.

3. N.Y.—Andrews v. Andrews, 1 N.Y.S.2d 760, 166 Misc. 297.

4. N.Y.—Newman v. Schwert, 284 N.Y.S. 682, 157 Misc. 764.

5. N.Y.—Weinus v. Light, 170 N.Y. S. 173, 183 App.Div. 591.

Several divisions as separate entities for keeping records

Under provisions of New York city court act stating that summons must state county in which action is brought and that all subsequent proceedings shall be in the division of the court situated in the county designated in the summons, the five divisions of the court are in fact five separate entities, and each entity must keep its own records, its own files of documents, and its own judgment rolls.—Goodman v. Lusblum Realty Corporation, 14 N.Y.S.2d 746, 173 Misc. 375.

6. N.Y.—Klatzko v. Golodetz, 184 N.Y.S. 367, 193 App.Div. 854.

7. N.Y.—People ex rel. McMahon v. Board of Excise of City of New York, 3 N.Y.St. 253.
15 C.J. p 996 note 61.

8. N.Y.—American Historical Soc. v. Glenn, 162 N.E. 481, 248 N.Y. 445—In re Hollywood Garage Corporation, 9 N.Y.S.2d 374, 169 Misc. 906—American Historical Soc. v. Glenn, 227 N.Y.S. 174, 131 Misc. 291.

Applicability

Territorial limitations on jurisdiction of city courts apply to actions against residents of state.—Marcus v. Day, 248 N.Y.S. 649, 139 Misc. 283.

Statute extending limits invalid

Statute authorizing process and mandates of city court of New York to be executed in any part of state held invalid.—American Historical Soc. v. Glenn, 162 N.E. 481, 248 N.Y. 445—In re Hollywood Garage Corporation, 9 N.Y.S.2d 374, 169 Misc. 906—American Historical Soc. v. Glenn, 227 N.Y.S. 174, 131 Misc. 291.

Service of process and mandates

(1) The mandates and process of city court of city of New York may be executed only within city of New York.—In re Hollywood Garage Corporation, 9 N.Y.S.2d 374, 169 Misc. 906.

(2) Substituted service of summons in New York city court action could not be had on defendant residing outside city limits.—Cohen v.

Ziegfeld, 248 N.Y.S. 139, 139 Misc. 174.

(3) Statute held not to authorize service of summons on defendant in city court action outside state without court order.—Edmond Weil, Inc. v. Popper, 256 N.Y.S. 905, 143 Misc. 684, affirmed 258 N.Y.S. 1046, 236 App.Div. 775.

(4) Where there was no recital in order to show cause or in order appointing receiver for judgment debtor that city court of the city of New York was satisfied that with reasonable diligence judgment debtor could not be found within the state, the order appointing receiver could not be sustained.—Dwelling Managers v. Mills, 13 N.Y.S.2d 512, 171 Misc. 673.

(5) Where a defendant in action brought in city court, Bronx county, was served with summons and complaint reciting "county of Bronx" as venue, and after his default in answering, an order was entered in city court, New York county, severing action as to others and permitting entry of judgment against defendant, entry of judgment in New York county, although papers making up judgment roll were entitled in Bronx county, was void.—Goodman v. Lusblum Realty Corporation, 14 N.Y.S.2d 746, 172 Misc. 375.

Under early statute

N.Y.—Silberberg v. Rouden Mfg. Co., 184 N.Y.S. 77.

Service outside city

(1) In a mechanic's lien case the court has no jurisdiction over person of defendant served outside of the city.—McCann v. Gerding, 60 N.Y.S. 467, 29 Misc. 283.

(2) The court has no jurisdiction in a bastardy proceeding where persons reside outside of territorial jurisdiction and are not served therein.—People v. Daley, 108 N.Y.S. 1056, 124 App.Div. 562.

9. Court without jurisdiction

(1) To act pursuant to arbitration law.—Chapman-Kruege Corporation v. Jaffe, 263 N.Y.S. 737, 239 App.Div. 795.

(2) To determine whether transfer was made with intent to give pref-

Its jurisdiction is limited as to amount,¹⁰ except in a "marine cause" within the jurisdiction of the court.¹¹ The court has no jurisdiction to afford affirmative equitable relief,¹² except the foreclosure of mechanic's liens or liens on personal property within the jurisdictional amount,¹³ although it may erence over other creditors when debtor was insolvent or insolvency was imminent.—James Gray, Inc. v. Your Magazine Publishers, 270 N.Y.S. 485, 150 Misc. 448.

(3) To enforce father's statutory obligation to support illegitimate child.—Ippolito v. Terragni, 251 N.Y.S. 374, 140 Misc. 606, affirmed 251 N.Y.S. 376, 140 Misc. 606.

(4) To separate alimony award of matrimonial court into support for children and alimony for wife, so as to render alimony for wife subject to claims of wife's judgment creditor.—Emigrant Industrial Sav. Bank v. Lehman, 270 N.Y.S. 589, 151 Misc. 444.

(5) To stay proceedings brought in violation of arbitration agreement for submission.—Kipp v. Hamburg-American Line, 235 N.Y.S. 450, 134 Misc. 481.

Trespass

City court of New York City has jurisdiction of action in trespass, although action involves issue of title to real property.—Lopiano v. New York Telephone Co., 250 N.Y.S. 223, 139 Misc. 831.

Actions against city of New York

(1) The court cannot take jurisdiction of an action against the city of New York.—O'Connor v. New York, 83 N.E. 979, 191 N.Y. 238, affirming 105 N.Y.S. 1134, 120 App.Div. 875—15 C.J. p 997 note 66.

(2) This is so in a case to enforce a lien for materials furnished for public improvements, even though the relief demanded is against other defendants to the extent of the fund in the city's possession.—Buess v. New York, 141 N.Y.S. 426, 80 Misc. 391.

10. N.Y.—McConnell v. Williams S. S. Co., 267 N.Y.S. 554, 239 App.Div. 393, modifying 262 N.Y.S. 574, 146 Misc. 512, and motion denied 193 N.E. 297, 265 N.Y. 513, affirmed 193 N.E. 336, 265 N.Y. 594—Rivisto v. New York Telephone Co., 265 N.Y.S. 844, 148 Misc. 864—McConnell v. Williams S. S. Co., 256 N.Y.S. 858, 143 Misc. 426, reversing 254 N.Y.S. 597, 142 Misc. 269.

15 C.J. p 996 note 62.

Consolidation of actions

Actions in city court by single plaintiff against different defendants may be consolidated, where amount claimed in none of actions exceeds three thousand dollars.—A. G. Curtain Mfg. Co. v. Law Union & Rock Ins. Co., Limited, of London, 246 N.Y.S. 483, 138 Misc. 556.

Under earlier statutes the limitation applied only to the amount for which judgment could be rendered, the court having had power to entertain an action involving any amount.—Margies v. Clyde S.S. Co., 150 N.Y.S. 4, 165 App.Div. 33—15 C.J. p 996 note 68.

11. N.Y.—Ussop v. American West African Line, 269 N.Y.S. 654, 151 Misc. 12.

Assault and battery

Action arising out of assault and battery by chief cook of ship on subordinate held "marine cause" based on assault and battery.—Ussop v. American West African Line, 269 N.Y.S. 654, 151 Misc. 12.

12. N.Y.—Smith v. Salomon, 172 N.Y.S. 515, 184 App.Div. 544—Hyman v. Spector, 268 N.Y.S. 342, 150 Misc. 145—Schreiber v. Noe, 243 N.Y.S. 360, 137 Misc. 105—Schwartzreich v. Bauman, 183 N.Y.S. 440, 112 Misc. 464—Krugman v. Hanover Fire Ins. Co., 94 N.Y.S. 399—Marcus v. Aufses, 94 N.Y.S. 397, 15 C.J. p 997 note 64.

Grant of power must be clear

Even if equity jurisdiction may be conferred on New York city court, such grant must be clear and distinctive and not merely the subject of a questionable inference.—Brown v. Guerin, 296 N.Y.S. 837, 163 Misc. 79.

Declaratory relief

Attorney's motion for declaratory relief with respect to client can be addressed to city court only under summary powers of court over conduct of attorneys, statutory provision for declaratory judgments giving power over such actions to supreme court only.—Seleznow v. Shub, 240 N.Y.S. 829, 136 Misc. 365.

Attorney's lien

New York city court held not to have jurisdiction to enforce liens of attorneys considered as equitable in nature.—Rubin v. Bernstein, 231 N.Y.S. 242, 133 Misc. 95.

Action against sublessee for rent

An action in equity by an owner whose lessee was insolvent directly against the sublessee for rent is not within the jurisdiction of the city court.—Eagle Impr. Co. v. Wagner, 154 N.Y.S. 210, 91 Misc. 38.

Action to redeem from a deed which is in effect a mortgage.—Oest v. Hendrick, 134 N.Y.S. 900, 76 Misc. 258.

An action for wrongful discharge from employment on salary and specified percentage of net profits should not be dismissed as an action in equity of which the city court of New York had no jurisdiction.—Seldin v. Block, 150 N.Y.S. 471.

Rescission

The court has no jurisdiction to set aside, reform, or rescind an agreement.—Wiederman v. Verschleiger, 158 N.Y.S. 308, 93 Misc. 453, reversed on other grounds 159 N.Y.S. 226, 95 Misc. 276.

Statutory liability of corporate officers

A suit under Gen.Corp.L. § 90 subd 2, by a creditor against the president of an insolvent corporation, who had paid out the assets to certain creditors, thereby preferring them, is a suit of an equitable nature to enforce the trust obligation of the president, over which city court has no jurisdiction.—Schwartzreich v. Bauman, 183 N.Y.S. 440, 112 Misc. 464.

In counterclaim

N.Y.—Schreiber v. Noe, 243 N.Y.S. 360, 137 Misc. 105.

13. N.Y.—Rubin v. Bernstein, 231 N.Y.S. 242, 133 Misc. 95—Marcus v. Sherr, 230 N.Y.S. 425, 132 Misc. 734—Kaplan v. Antonelli, 230 N.Y.S. 321, 132 Misc. 572—Schultz v. Teichman Engineering & Construction Co., 140 N.Y.S. 429, 79 Misc. 357—Steiger v. London, 102 N.Y.S. 497, 52 Misc. 462.

Validity of statute

Act conferring jurisdiction to foreclose mechanics' liens not exceeding three thousand dollars held not invalid, on ground that constitution conferred similar jurisdiction, where property did not exceed three thousand dollars.—Kaplan v. Antonelli, 230 N.Y.S. 321, 132 Misc. 572.

Effect of grant of power

Constitution, conferring on city court jurisdiction to foreclose mechanics' liens and liens on personalty, did not confer greater equitable jurisdiction on New York city court than it previously possessed.—Rubin v. Bernstein, 231 N.Y.S. 242, 133 Misc. 95.

Determining limit

(1) Word "property," in constitution, conferring jurisdiction on New York city court to foreclose mechanics' liens and liens on personal property, where "property" does not exceed three thousand dollars refers to personalty, not realty.—Kaplan v. Antonelli, 230 N.Y.S. 321, 132 Misc. 572.

(2) Hence the court's jurisdiction is limited to foreclosing mechanics' liens less than three thousand dollars, and is not limited to cases where realty is less than three thousand dollars.—Kaplan v. Antonelli, supra.

Rescission as defense

City court held to have jurisdiction to entertain insurers' defense of rescission for misrepresentations, in actions by insured on agreement of adjustment of loss under standard fire policies, since one relying on defense of rescission need not plead or establish counterclaim for equitable relief or bring action in equity for such relief.—Kaplan v. Girard Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 281 N.Y.S. 301, 156 Misc. 207.

Effect of creation of Bronx County
L.1912 c 548, creating Bronx County, did not repeal Greater New York Charter 1897 § 1345, prescribing the jurisdiction of the city court, nor did such act in any way affect the city court's jurisdiction as it existed June 6, 1895.—De Leyer v. Britt, 106 N.E. 57, 212 N.Y. 565, reversing 142 N.Y.S. 752, 157 App.Div. 586.

Venue

(1) In one case it was held that defendant moving for change of venue in city court of city of New York need not serve demand for change the court having power of its own motion to change venue of action improperly brought.—Seligman Fabrics Corporation v. Bur-Lee Frocks, 269 N.Y.S. 649, 150 Misc. 537.

(2) In another it was held that civil practice rule requiring defendant asking change of venue to serve demand on plaintiff's attorney was applicable to actions in New York city court.—Strauss v. Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation, 262 N.Y.S. 807, 146 Misc. 766.

(3) Serving notice of motion for change of venue with amended answer in city court of city of New York held full compliance with court rule requiring service of demand for change of venue by defendant demanding change of place of trial.—Seligman Fabrics Corporation v. Bur-Lee Frocks, supra.

(4) City court acquired no jurisdiction where plaintiffs failed to prove residence of defendants in county and defendants sought nonsuit on that ground.—Miller v. Katz, 254 N.Y.S. 81, 234 App.Div. 870.

Declining to act on motion referred from special term

N.Y.—Elias v. Coleman, 152 N.Y.S. 451, 88 Misc. 714.

How issue joined

In New York city court, defendant must serve answer on plaintiff's attorney, and issue is joined by service of pleading.—Bachrach v. Fisher & Grassgreen, 244 N.Y.S. 23, 137 Misc. 382.

By resident of state

The court may entertain an action by a resident of the state, but not of the city, against a foreign corporation on a cause of action which arose outside the city.—Maas v. Cunard SS. Co., 43 N.Y.S. 219, 19 Misc. 100, 26 N.Y.Civ.Proc. 155.

No jurisdiction

N.Y.—Poss v. Gottlieb, supra.

Partnership

(1) The court has no jurisdiction of partnership accounting.—Lasky v. Coverdale, 145 N.Y.S. 994, 84 Misc. 34—Donald SS. Co., Inc. v. Lewis, 150 N.Y.S. 89.

(2) Agreement among partners after dissolution to divide the commissions on a sale of particular property by any of them thereafter does not create a partnership, and hence an action on such agreement does not involve a partnership transaction, and is within the jurisdiction of the city court of the city of New York.—Mitchell v. Frank, 142 N.Y.S. 313.

22. No power to issue

N.Y.—People ex rel. McMahon v. Board of Excise of City of New York, 3 N.Y.St. 253.

23. N.Y.—Edwards v. Greenwich Sav. Bank, 110 N.Y.S. 920, 59 Misc. 451.

24. N.Y.—Weiss v. Weiss, 133 N.Y.S. 1021, 75 Misc. 644, reversed on other grounds 138 N.Y.S. 1148, 154 App.Div. 890.

25. N.Y.—Hunt v. Genet, 14 Daly 225.

26. N.Y.—Erdrich v. Amory, 184 N.Y.S. 490.

Extent of jurisdiction

The court has jurisdiction to issue a warrant of attachment not exceeding two thousand dollars, with interest and costs, and must limit the liability of the sureties to that sum.—Fagan v. Raymond Mfg. Co., 141 N.Y.S. 948, 80 Misc. 638.

Dependent on place of residence

Attachment may issue against a domestic corporation whose principal place of business is not within the city of New York, although it has a place of business within such city.—Blumenthal v. Hudson River Boot & Shoe Mfg. Co., 15 N.Y.S. 826.

Cure of defects

If the moving papers in support of an attachment in the city court are defective, but the defects can be cured without prejudice to intervening rights, it is the duty of the court, under Code Civ.Proc. § 763, to direct that such defects be supplied nunc pro tunc.—Erdrich v. Amory, 184 N.Y.S. 490.

Liberal construction of moving papers

N.Y.—Erdrich v. Amory, supra.

27. Order permitting issue to be tried

Failure of defendant domestic corporation, sued in city court of the city of New York on a promissory note, to serve with his answer order permitting the issues to be tried, as required by Code Civ.Proc. § 1778, renders the pleading ineffective, and unless the failure is waived places defendant in the same position as though answer had never been served. In such case plaintiff could encisions relating to motions,²⁸ interpleader,²⁹ calendar practice,³⁰ examinations before trial,³¹ and opening or setting aside defaults.³² There have ter judgment as in case of default in pleading, to wit, at the expiration of six days, despite the twenty-day clause of Code Civ.Proc. § 1778.—Hein v. Standard Die & Tool Works, 184 N.Y.S. 78, 113 Misc. 137.

Amendments

(1) Permission by city court to amend complaint held to be conditioned on payment of full bill of costs and ten dollars motion costs, and not limited to costs before notice of trial and motion costs.—Gidseg v. Goldsmith, 185 N.Y.S. 42.

(2) Where a proposed amended complaint did not show so clearly that the action was in the nature of an accounting between partners as to warrant a holding that the city court had no jurisdiction, plaintiff should be allowed to amend his complaint, so that the jurisdictional question might be determined, after issue joined or on the trial.—Lynn v. Scheffres, 188 N.Y.S. 415.

(3) Permission will not be given to serve an amended complaint in city court omitting allegations which, when proved by defendant, even though omitted from the complaint, would destroy plaintiff's cause of action.—Westchester Knitting Mills v. Zuckerman, 198 N.Y.S. 358.

(4) The city court at trial term has no authority to allow an amendment to a complaint which sets up a new cause of action or substantially changes the one pleaded; only at special term may this be done.—Hamilton v. Mendham, 129 N.Y.S. 53, dismissed 133 N.Y.S. 977, 149 App. Div. 907.

Bill of particulars

(1) A motion for a bill of particulars in city court should not be broader than a previous demand made upon the pleader, and, if broader, the excess should be denied.—White v. Kaliski, 109 N.Y.S. 716.

(2) In a buyer's action in city court for seller's failure to deliver goods, alleging a resale contract, and seeking plaintiff's loss of profits and loss of plaintiff's customer, defendant was entitled to a bill of particulars as to whether plaintiff's contract with customer was oral or written, and, if written, a copy thereof.—N. London, Inc. v. Salomon, 185 N.Y.S. 41.

Reargument

(1) City court has power to pass on motion for reargument of motion to set aside verdict and for new trial previously denied.—Gaston Koch & Co. v. Juliette Improvement Co., 239 N.Y.S. 127, 136 Misc. 55.

(2) Under Civ.Pract.Act § 549, city court justice having denied motion to set aside verdict, and judgment having been entered, was without power to grant rehearing at subsequent term, and on such rehearing grant motion to set aside verdict.—Boslowitz v. S. Goldin & Co., 209 N.Y.S. 308, 124 Misc. 746.

29. N.Y.—Marcus v. Aufses, 94 N.Y.S. 397.

15 C.J. p 997 note 80.

Jurisdiction

(1) The cases are not in accord on the question of whether the court has jurisdiction in a case of interpleader. Some cases hold that granting of an order of interpleader transforms the action into an equitable one, of which the court would have no jurisdiction, and hence such an order will not be granted.—Krugman v. Hanover Fire Ins. Co., 94 N.Y.S. 399—Marcus v. Aufses, 94 N.Y.S. 397—Wells v. Corn Exchange Bank, 87 N.Y.S. 480.

(2) Others hold that the court is not divested of jurisdiction because an interpleader has added questions of an equitable nature.—Katz v. Witt, 134 N.Y.S. 675, 74 Misc. 582—U. S. Mortgage & Trust Co. v. Vermilye, 130 N.Y.S. 303, 72 Misc. 375—Krugman v. Hanover Fire Ins. Co., 90 N.Y.S. 448, 45 Misc. 346.

30. N.Y.—Rubenstein v. Schmuck, 113 N.Y.S. 554, 129 App.Div. 326—West Electric Hair Curler Co. v. Hamilton Corp., 150 N.Y.S. 750, 88 Misc. 381.

Prosecution of action

Where an action was begun in December, 1913, and issue joined in March, 1914, cross notices of trial being served in May, 1914, resulting in the cause being first called in April, 1915, while plaintiff was absent from this country, and under the city court practice the case reappeared automatically on one or two subsequent call calendars without any result, and issues as late as April 14, 1921, having been reached and disposed of, the length of plaintiff's inaction showed an intention to abandon.—Levey v. Thomas J. Stewart Co., 194 N.Y.S. 438, 118 Misc. 755.

Affected by length of trial

City Court Rules, rule 2, providing that, where a trial will occupy more than two hours, the court may send the cause to the foot of the general calendar, vested discretion in the city court to hear a case through, although the trial actually occupied more than two hours.—Birdsey-Somers Co. v. Sleeper, 135 N.Y.S. 1075, 77 Misc. 143.

Commercial calendar

(1) Action for breach of warranty in full covenant warranty deed under seal could not be put upon commercial calendar.—Heneve Holding Corporation v. Louis E. Kleban & Son, 241 N.Y.S. 78, 137 Misc. 397.

(2) City Court Rules, rule 2, providing that a case can be placed on the commercial calendar, where plaintiff seeks to recover a specific sum of money, or one for goods sold and delivered, etc., does not include a case where plaintiff is buyer and sues seller for failure to deliver.—Frost v. Hocking Glass Co., 169 N.Y.S. 1042.

(3) That four months did not elapse between breach of employment contract and commencement of action barred placing case on commercial calendar.—Schulman v. Ravenhue Dress, 250 N.Y.S. 385, 140 Misc. 41.

(4) Cause triable in municipal court was not entitled to be placed on commercial calendar.—Schulman v. Ravenhue Dress, supra.

(5) Action in New York city court for personal injuries from sale of deleterious food, under implied warranty of fitness for human use, held not "action for damages arising out of contract for sale of goods, wares and merchandise" within court rule placing such actions on commercial calendar.—Gilbert v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 269 N.Y.S. 640, 151 Misc. 45.

Preferences

(1) Granting preference in city court action for injuries sustained in course of employment by one entitled to compensation, by setting cause down for trial for day certain at term for which plaintiff noticed case for trial, held within court's discretion.—Weinberg v. National Transp. Co., 262 N.Y.S. 824, 146 Misc. 758, modified by limiting preference over other issues noticed for same term 265 N.Y.S. 945, 239 App.Div. 905.

(2) Motion for preference in action in behalf of state superintendent of banks was denied on ground that city court was without authority to grant general preference and that to grant limited preference of only one day would interfere with orderly dispatch of court's business and would be of no practical advantage to plaintiff.—Bank of U. S. v. Fenley Realty Co., 260 N.Y.S. 494, 145 Misc. 579.

31. N.Y.—Gedney v. Planten, 153 N.Y.S. 423, 90 Misc. 275.

Power of court

The city court of the city of New also been numerous decisions relating to discontinuances,³³ conduct of trial,³⁴ verdicts,³⁵ damages,³⁶ judgments,³⁷ executions,³⁸ and appeals.³⁹

York has inherent power to relieve a defendant from the consequences of a default suffered through the omission of his attorney.—Ruhloff v. Catts, 174 N.Y.S. 159.

Showing necessary

On application to open a default in city court, the moving papers must show both a reasonable excuse for the default, under Code Civ.Proc. § 724, as well as facts establishing a meritorious case.—Gude v. Noblett, 183 N.Y.S. 42, 112 Misc. 219.

To interpose counterclaim

A default in city court will not be set aside to permit defendant to interpose a counterclaim or set-off, since in such a case defendant's cross-claim can be made the basis of an independent suit.—Gude v. Noblett, supra.

Liability of surety

(1) An extension of the time for the payment of the original debt will discharge the sureties on a bond given as a condition for vacating a default judgment of the city court of the city of New York.—Montrose v. Baggott, 146 N.Y.S. 649, 161 App. Div. 494.

(2) However, a stipulation extending the time for the entry of the judgment will not release the sureties.—Montrose v. Baggott, supra.

33. N.Y.—Connolly v. Empire United R. Co., 151 N.Y.S. 653, 88 Misc. 118.

34. Mistrial

The city court acts within its authority in declaring a mistrial and sending a cause to the foot of the calendar where the behavior of plaintiff's attorney renders it improper to continue the trial.—McCormick v. Shea, 85 N.Y.S. 1029, 42 Misc. 555.

35. Increase or decrease by court

City court of New York held without power to increase or decrease amount of its verdict, since that is a matter of substance, only remedy of aggrieved party being by appeal.—Murphy v. Export S. S. Corporation, 273 N.Y.S. 120, 152 Misc. 322.

36. Measure

Plaintiff suing in city court of New York, having alleged and proved cause of action, was entitled under allegation of general damages to damages according to the proper measure of damages, notwithstanding misconception in preparation of bill of particulars as to the proper theory of damages.—Cécile Costumes v. Michel, 190 N.Y.S. 509.

37. Correction of errors

City court of New York retains power to correct errors as to form of its judgment.—Murphy v. Export S. S. Corporation, 273 N.Y.S. 120, 152 Misc. 322.

38. Applicability of civil practice act

The city court is a court of record, and Code Civ.Proc. §§ 338, 1365, 1489, as to executions, apply to executions on judgments of such court, in view of Code Civ.Proc. §§ 2, 3159, and § 3347, subd 10.—Weinuss v. Light, 170 N.Y.S. 173, 183 App.Div. 591.

Orders appealable

(2) Other orders.—Weber v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 158 N.Y.S. 620—Higgins v. Dewey, 27 Abb.N.Cas. 81.
5 C.J. p 500 note 60 [a] (3), (4).

Orders not appealable

(1) Discretionary orders generally.—Kretzer v. Allaire, 37 N.Y.S. 687, 16 Misc. 6.

(2) Since a justice of the city court has power to revise or recall his decision, an appeal from an order imposing costs on the ground that the memorandum announcing a justice's decision did not mention costs is frivolous and will be dismissed.—Orlando v. Palladino, 112 N.Y.S. 1118, 61 Misc. 103.

Notice of appeal

The court has no jurisdiction to order a plaintiff to accept a notice of appeal from a judgment rendered by it.—Benjamin v. Brownstein, 154 N.Y.S. 191.

Time for appeal

Where order appealed from, when made, was valid exercise of city court's power, although it was inadvertently signed by justice day before it was noticed for settlement, defendant's time to appeal began to run from day it was duly entered and notice of entry served.—Cade v. Meyer, 169 N.Y.S. 1043.

Case on appeal

(1) Time for service.—Lightner v. Hartmann-Blanchard Co., 170 N.Y.S. 49.

Record prevails over briefs

N.Y.—Hooke v. Hopkins, 164 N.Y.S. 117.

Matters not raised below

Where question as to sufficiency of complaint was raised for first time on appeal, and the alleged defects were highly technical, and affidavits showed necessary jurisdictional facts, it will not be considered.—Westchester Knitting Mills v. Zuckerman, 198 N.Y.S. 356.

Waiver of error

(1) Plaintiff does not, by proceeding to trial in city court under an order which declares a mistrial, direct him to pay thirty dollars costs to defendant, and directs the case to be placed upon the calendar for trial about a week hence, waive the error in the order in imposing costs on him.—Modern Silk Co. v. Weinstein, 165 N.Y.S. 721, 100 Misc. 358.

(2) By failing to take steps to appeal from order within time from day when it was formally entered and notice of entry served, defendant waived irregularity in order formally entered that it was signed by justice of city court day before noticed for settlement.—Cade v. Meyer, 169 N.Y.S. 1043.

Review of facts

(1) Appellate Term can review facts, although plaintiff failed to make motion for new trial.—Thomson v. Meyercord Co., 174 N.Y.S. 732.

(2) Sufficiency of evidence may be reviewed.—Johnson v. Desmond, 165 N.Y.S. 290.

Harmless errors

N.Y.—Kips Bay Brewing & Malting Co. v. J. H. Tooker Printing Co., 176 N.Y.S. 65.

Reversible errors

In an action for breach of a contract of bailment, where plaintiffs' own breach would restrict its recovery, the submission of plaintiffs' full claim to jury in city court was reversible error, not only because an improper item of damage was submitted, but because it would affect the determination of the jury in relation to defendants' counterclaim for plaintiffs' breach.—Landau v. Goldstein, 184 N.Y.S. 812.

Costs below

Where city court denied costs, apparently upon ground of lack of power, the appellate term, on appeal, may modify judgment, so as to award costs.—Stevens v. Hush, 176 N.Y.S. 602, 107 Misc. 353.

(a) Nature and Jurisdiction

The municipal court of the city of New York is a court of limited jurisdiction, of record, possessing only such powers and jurisdiction as are conferred on it by statute.

The municipal court of the city of New York is not a new court, but a continuation of the district courts of New York city, and some of the justices' courts of Brooklyn.⁴⁰ It is an inferior local court⁴¹ of record,⁴² created by statute,⁴³ of limited or special⁴⁴ civil⁴⁵ jurisdiction, which does not extend to cases wherein a recovery of more than one thousand dollars, exclusive of interest and costs, is sought,⁴⁶ except in certain cases set forth in the statute, and possesses no inherent powers,⁴⁷ except such powers as are inherent in all courts of record,⁴⁸ but only those powers and jurisdiction which are conferred on it by the statute.⁴⁹ The jurisdiction of the court is coextensive with the limits of the city of Greater New York,⁵⁰ and it therefore has jurisdiction where defendant is a resident of the city, although he resides outside of the county in which the court is sitting.⁵¹ It has no power, however, to direct the service of process outside the city limits, see subdivision c (3) (b) of this section.

The court has no equitable jurisdiction with respect to affording affirmative relief;⁵² but it may,

Constitutionality of statute

The provision making this court a court of record does not violate the constitutional prohibition against making inferior courts courts of record because this court is not a new court, but a continuation, consolidation, and reorganization of an existing court.—In re Levy, 182 N.Y.S. 792, 192 App.Div. 550.

44. N.Y.—Richard v. National Transp. Co., 285 N.Y.S. 870, 158 Misc. 324. 15 C.J. p 998 note 91.

Jurisdiction not to exceed that of county courts

Under the constitution the municipal court can have no greater jurisdiction than county courts have. Const. art 6 § 18. But this provision has been construed as having reference to subject matter and persons and not to territory.—Kantro v. Armstrong, 60 N.Y.S. 970, 44 App.Div.

Kallis, 169 N.Y.S. 566, 102 Misc. 693, affirmed 170 N.Y.S. 1111, 184 App. Div. 936.

15 C.J. p 998 note 92.

Limit as to judgment not damages

Although municipal court is limited, in awarding judgment, to one thousand dollars maximum, it is not precluded from fixing party's damages for a larger amount.—Silberstein v. Begun, 176 N.Y.S. 558, 107 Misc. 395, affirmed 181 N.Y.S. 954, 191 App.Div. 951, affirmed 133 N.E. 904, 232 N.Y. 319.

Counterclaim

Under Mun.Court Code § 86, amount of any judgment that may be rendered on counterclaim is limited to one thousand dollars, exclusive of interest and costs, but there is no limit upon amount for which counterclaim may be interposed.—Security Mortgage Co. v. Kallis, 169 N.Y.S. 566, 102 Misc. 693, affirmed 170 N.Y.S. 1111, 184 App.Div. 936.

Interference with supreme court

Municipal court cannot disregard, disturb, or modify any order entered in supreme court, remedy being by applying to Supreme Court.—Bruck v. Larat, 222 N.Y.S. 728, 129 Misc. 768.

Nev-a-Hone Razor Strop Co., 173 N.Y.S. 56. 15 C.J. p 998 note 95.

See, however, a case stating that the municipal court, having jurisdiction of an action originally instituted to recover a sum of money, has equitable power necessary for the preservation of its jurisdiction and for the prevention of any miscarriage of justice which might be caused by the acts, whether deliberate, willful, or otherwise, of any of the parties within its jurisdiction.—Brinn v. Wooding, 298 N.Y.S. 971, 164 Misc. 850.

In summary proceedings

in certain cases, consider equitable defenses which are interposed merely for the purpose of reducing or defeating plaintiff's recovery or precluding the relief which he demands, no affirmative relief being sought by defendant.⁵³

Ordinarily the court is without jurisdiction to adjudicate as to the title to real estate.⁵⁴ Under statute, however, it has been held to have power to determine title in a proceeding brought by a judgment creditor as to property levied on by a marshal on his behalf but claimed by a third person.⁵⁵ So under the statutes it may entertain summary dispossession proceedings against a tenant,⁵⁶ even though the fact of title is raised collaterally therein,⁵⁷ or even though the tenant denies the title of the landlord,⁵⁸ or asserts title in himself.⁵⁹ In such a proceeding the court may entertain an equitable defense interposed by the tenant to defeat the landlord's right to possession, although it cannot give affirmative relief to the tenant.⁶⁰ Therein it may render judgment for the landlord for rent due in any amount, the limitation as to amount of the court's jurisdiction being inapplicable therein.⁶¹

There was no presumption in favor of the jurisdiction of the municipal court, but all facts essential thereto were required to appear in the record,⁶² until a statute, taking effect in 1915, provided that every fair intendment must be made in favor of the jurisdiction of the court.⁶³

There has been a very large number of deci-

Contribution

In action for contribution municipal court of New York held without jurisdiction to pass on question whether some of defendants were insolvent, so as to authorize larger recovery against solvent defendants, since a municipal court is without equitable jurisdiction.—Meyrowitz v. Wattel, 267 N.Y.S. 591, 149 Misc. 862.

Actions held to be at law

Avoidance of release

(1) Whether release relied on by defendant was result of mutual mistake, or mistake and fraud, may be determined in law action in municipal court, since plaintiff seeks, not equitable relief, but merely to negative affirmative defense.—Epstein v. Kaplan, 269 N.Y.S. 604, 150 Misc. 520.

(2) In seaman's action in municipal court for extra compensation after having executed a release, the court would be justified in disregarding the release, if seamen could establish that the release was the result of fraud or of honest mistake.—Jensen v. Barber S. S. Lines, 180 N.Y.S. 754, 110 Misc. 632.

Issues determinable

(1) Municipal court does not have jurisdiction to adjust equity between parties to summary proceeding and award title.—502 Park Ave. Corporation v. Delmonico Hotel, 230 N.Y.S. 262, 132 Misc. 502, 686.

(2) Controversy as to which party prevented sale cannot be determined in municipal court in summary proceeding.—502 Park Ave. Corporation v. Delmonico Hotel, supra.

Extent of relief

Affirmative relief, awarding possession to landlord in summary proceeding equivalent to rescinding contract of sale and restoring landlord and tenant relationship, cannot be granted by municipal court.—502 Park Ave. Corporation v. Delmonico Hotel, supra.

Parcels in different court districts

Municipal court held without jurisdiction of summary proceeding to recover separate parcels of land covered by single lease, where some of parcels were situated in different court district.—Altman v.

Meygro Holding Co., 252 N.Y.S. 293, 141 Misc. 202.

Removal of employee

Under agreement whereby defendant was employed to manage theater for petitioner at agreed weekly compensation for specified time, defendant held "employee" and not "occupant;" hence New York City municipal court was without jurisdiction of proceedings to remove defendant from reality.—City Theatres Co. v. Skouras Theatres Corporation, 268 N.Y.S. 455, 150 Misc. 78.

57. N.Y.—Van Deventer v. Foster, 83 N.Y.S. 1067, 87 App.Div. 62.

59. N.Y.—502 Park Ave. Corporation v. Delmonico Hotel, supra, 15 C.J. p 998 note 3.

Where neither party appears in such proceedings, the court cannot enter a final order in favor of the landlord.—Katz v. Schreckinger, 101 N.Y.S. 743, 52 Misc. 160.

60. N.Y.—Burgener v. O'Halloran, 181 N.Y.S. 235, 111 Misc. 203.

Limits as to amount inapplicable

Municipal court's jurisdiction in summary proceedings to render judgment is not limited to cases involving one thousand dollars or less.—Addoms' Estate v. Citarella, 256 N.Y.S. 669, 143 Misc. 428.

62. N.Y.—Stodder v. New England Nav. Co., 118 N.Y.S. 844, 134 App. Div. 221, 15 C.J. p 998 note 5.

Action to recover money judgment to cover the amount alleged to have been paid as preference may be entertained.—Cohen v. Small, 105 N.Y.S. 287, 120 App.Div. 211, reversing 104 N.Y.S. 412, 54 Misc. 213, and affirmed 83 N.E. 1123, 190 N.Y. 568.

Bulk sale of corporate assets

Court has jurisdiction of creditor's action against buyer of corporate debtor's business at bulk sale, and against codefendants who were officers, directors, and stockholders of debtor, under statute imposing liability on directors and officers concerned in transferring insolvent corporation's property with intent of giving preference, and requiring transferees thereof to account, money judgment rather than equitable relief being sought.—Royal Indemnity Co. v. Ginsberg, 284 N.Y.S. 551, 157 Misc. 507.

7. N.Y.—Scott v. Prudential Outfitting Co., 155 N.Y.S. 497, 92 Misc. 195.

8. N.Y.—Barnett v. Newbury, 150 N.Y.S. 550.

9. N.Y.—Herpe v. Herpe, 151 N.Y.S. 503, 89 Misc. 142.

10. No jurisdiction

N.Y.—Bernstein v. Colton, 5 N.Y.S. 2d 634, 254 App.Div. 896—Kabat v. Lefkowitz, 189 N.Y.S. 83—Metropolitan Electric Protective Co. v. Ashlamian, 185 N.Y.S. 358.

Lease

N.Y.—Kraus v. Smolen, 92 N.Y.S. 329, 46 Misc. 463—O'Rourke v. Snell, 147 N.Y.S. 31.

Validity of release

In action involving validity of release, judgment of municipal court, which necessarily required determination of whether the release represented true agreement between the parties, was res judicata, notwithstanding municipal court's lack of power to reform a written instrument.—Bernstein v. Colton, 5 N.Y.S. 2d 634, 254 App.Div. 896.

11. N.Y.—Pelgram v. Ehrenzweig, 109 N.Y.S. 55, 58 Misc. 195.

No jurisdiction

N.Y.—Mennitto v. Iacovacci, 206 N.Y.S. 589, 123 Misc. 947—Rosenthal v. Garber, 202 N.Y.S. 708—Fischer v. Schwartz, 182 N.Y.S. 605.

Where partners, on dissolution, transfer accounts to one partner, he becomes the absolute owner, and may maintain an action at law in the municipal court against one of the former partners thereafter collecting assets, an accounting in such case not being necessary.—Barnett v. Newbury, 150 N.Y.S. 550.

15. N.Y.—Gormley v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 102 N.Y.S. 692, 52 Misc. 495.

16. N.Y.—Lyons v. Mulvihill, 125 N.Y.S. 475—Horowitz v. Decker, 88 N.Y.S. 217.

Court has jurisdiction

(1) Of action to recover possession of property seized without a search warrant by a New York city police officer, who knew that the property was stored in plaintiff's private dwelling.—Gatto v. Murray, 190 N.Y.S. 360, 116 Misc. 270, 39 N.Y.Cr. 255.

(2) Of action to replevy property purchased at auction sale.—Berman v. Peltz, 204 N.Y.S. 202, 123 Misc. 143.

(3) Of action for replevin of policies of insurance.—Weissman v. Weissman, 11 N.Y.S.2d 1008.

(4) Of action to replevin chattels, although they were unlawfully taken and detained by defendant in the city of New York, in a county other than that of plaintiff.—Luban v. Simmonds, 61 N.Y.S. 697, 46 App.Div. 192.

(5) Defendants other than chattel mortgagor withholding possession of chattel could be sued alone in replevin.—Wiggins v. Russel, 236 N.Y.S. 657, 227 App.Div. 742.

Coupling action with writ of replevin N.Y.—Triangle Mint Corporation v. Horgan, 233 N.Y.S. 570, 133 Misc. 802.

Against administrator

Action arising out of terms of chattel mortgage

N.Y.—Ginzburg v. De Silvestri, 86 N.Y.S. 89, 42 Misc. 530.

Conditional vendee or mortgagee

Court has no jurisdiction of action of replevin against conditional vendee or mortgagee.—Kessler v. Zucker, 202 N.Y.S. 770—Commonwealth Finance Corporation v. De Vito, 179 N.Y.S. 67.

Conditional vendor of goods cannot maintain replevin in the municipal court against a city marshal who had taken the goods on execution directed against the purchaser's husband.—Di Toro v. Horn, 153 N.Y.S. 93.

Mortgagor

Court has no jurisdiction of replevin action against chattel mortgagor arising on chattel mortgage; and the fact that defendants other than chattel mortgagor were withholding possession did not alter fact that action was in replevin and against mortgagor.—Wiggins v.

chattel mortgages¹⁷ or other liens on personal property,¹⁸ foreclosure of mechanics' liens,¹⁹ and cancellation of mechanics' liens.²⁰

(b) Procedure and Practice

The procedure and practice in the municipal court of the city of New York is regulated largely by a code. General provisions of the civil practice act and rules apply, however, unless the matter is covered by the code or rules of the court.

The procedure and practice in the municipal court of the city of New York is regulated by a municipal court code, and the rules as laid down therein are controlling and must be followed.²¹ In general, however, and in so far as is practical, the practice in this court conforms to that in the supreme court,²² general provisions of the civil practice act and rules being applicable in this court unless the matter covered thereby is regulated by the provisions of the municipal court code or the rules of the municipal court.²³

There are to be found in the reports numerous decisions with respect to practice in this court,²⁴

Russel, 236 N.Y.S. 657, 227 App.Div. 742.

Slot machines

Municipal court cannot determine whether slot machines constitute gambling devices by permitting return thereof before prosecution is ended.—Triangle Mint Corporation v. Horgan, 233 N.Y.S. 570, 133 Misc. 802.

17. N.Y.—Fidelity Loan Assoc. v. Connolly, 92 N.Y.S. 252.

Parol mortgage

It cannot be held that the municipal court has no jurisdiction to foreclose a lien, unless it be one created by a formal chattel mortgage, or conditional bill of sale, as provided in Mun.Court Code § 70, since a chattel mortgage may be created by parol, if accompanied by delivery.—Stultz v. Gamble, 180 N.Y.S. 424.

Proof

In action under Mun.Court Code §§ 70-77, to foreclose lien on machine sold under conditional bill of sale, machine being in possession of plaintiff, exclusion of testimony offered by plaintiff to show that machine was not "retaken," within meaning of Pers.Prop.L. §§ 65, 66, which would bar foreclosure proceedings under §§ 70-77, held error.—H. Malmén Co. v. Weaver, 164 N.Y.S. 229.

18. N.Y.—Jacobs v. Feinstein, 117 N.Y.S. 823, 133 App.Div. 416.

Jurisdiction of municipal court of city of New York as to enforcement of an attorney's lien see Attorney and Client § 238.

Seller's lien

(1) The seller may foreclose a lien in the municipal court.—Mathushek & Son, Piano Co. v. Weld, 158 N.Y.S. 169, 94 Misc. 282.—Hauss v. Savarese, 149 N.Y.S. 938, 87 Misc. 330.

(2) And this is true notwithstanding the contract of sale provided that title should remain in him until full payment of the price.—Rudenberg v. Schol, 144 N.Y.S. 748, 83 Misc. 39.

The jurisdiction is limited to foreclosing the lien, although the action also involves an injury to personal property.—Samodwitz v. Karpf, 96 N.Y.S. 704, 80 App.Div. 496.

Equitable lien

Equitable lien of creditor on assets of debtor, transferred to holding corporation without creditor's consent, cannot be enforced in municipal court.—Atlantic Terra Cotta Co. v. Peter Guthy, Inc., 244 N.Y.S. 331, 138 Misc. 76.

15 C.J. p 1000 note 62.

Disregarding unsubstantial errors

Municipal court has inherent statutory power to disregard unsubstantial omission, irregularity, or defect in proceedings.—Harlem Metal Corporation v. Segal, 3 N.Y.S.2d 969, 167 Misc. 321.

Proceeding without notice void

In municipal court, failure to give notice, whether upon motion or notice of trial, renders all subsequent proceedings, based thereon, void.—Genet v. Johnson, 6 N.Y.S.2d 965.

Retention of jurisdiction

The Municipal Court, having acquired jurisdiction of, and tried issues raised by parties to, action by including adjudications as to such matters as and service²⁹ and including adjudications as to such venue²⁵ and change thereof,²⁶ parties,²⁷ process,²⁸ administrator of probably insolvent estate for replevin of household goods subject to warehouseman's lien, properly pleaded by defendant, for storage charges, will retain such jurisdiction, in absence of surrogate's court order transferring matter to latter court or facts showing that such transfer would serve interest of justice.—*Mingey v. Statement of cause of action

(1) Nature and substance of cause of action must be indorsed on, or annexed to, summons, otherwise summons is void.—Steffens v. Martin, 165 N.Y.S. 445, 100 Misc. 263.

(2) Without such statement or service or filing of complaint, the court does not acquire jurisdiction.—Hughes v. Peerless Unit Ventilation Co., 168 N.Y.S. 641, 102 Misc. 214—Pachman v. Greenwald, 171 N.Y.S. 219—Baum v. Halperin, 169 N.Y.S. 489.

(3) Indorsement that action is for goods sold and delivered, while not sufficiently stating the nature and substance of plaintiff's cause of action, as required, is not defective as to defeat jurisdiction.—Di Palma v. Quinn, 171 N.Y.S. 339, 104 Misc. 93.

(4) Summons must show amount demanded is within court's jurisdiction.—Gerken v. Gerken, 199 N.Y.S. 169.

(5) Words "action for damage," indorsed on the summons, is not a sufficient compliance with requirement that nature and substance of action commenced by service of summons be indorsed on summons.—Bloom v. Dicker, 197 N.Y.S. 643, 120 Misc. 75.

Statement of time to appear or answer

What constitutes general appearance
N.Y.—De Veaux v. Pachinsky, 169 N.Y.S. 1039.

Effect of general appearance

(1) The court may entertain jurisdiction where defendant appears generally by attorney.—Elliott v. Savings Bank, 139 N.Y.S. 939, 79 Misc. 258.—Baum v. Halperin, 169 N.Y.S. 489.

(2) General appearance by defendant does not waive objection to jurisdiction of subject-matter on ground that defendant's business was within workmen's compensation law and that defendant had complied with such law.—Schattnner v. American Tobacco Co., 185 N.Y.S. 479, 100 Misc. 261.

Special appearance

(1) By affidavit to contest jurisdiction of person.—De Veaux v. Pachinsky, 169 N.Y.S. 1039.

(2) In action to recover sum paid, where defendant filed notice of special appearance objecting to jurisdiction of municipal court on ground that plaintiff's claim had been duly submitted to arbitration and was pending, municipal court had no jurisdiction to compel arbitration, either by mandatory order or by granting stay of proceedings pending submission thereto, since proper procedure required hearing on question raised by special appearance.—Murian Frocks v. Malamor Dress Corporation, 273 N.Y.S. 184, 152 Misc. 304.

N.Y.—Bloom v. Dicker, 197 N.Y.S. 643, 120 Misc. 75.

Filing writings

N.Y.—Blair & Rolland v. Turner, 168 N.Y.S. 660.

Filing answer

Where defendants attempted to file

answer within time made due by stipulation, clerk's refusal to accept it was unwarranted, and court had no power to impose terms, as on opening of a default.—Rosenberg v. Block, 181 N.Y.S. 392, 111 Misc. 437.

Sufficiency of answer

N.Y.—Stege v. Emerson, 194 N.Y.S. 457, 201 App.Div. 536.

Aid of court

Plaintiff without attorney is entitled to aid of court in so framing his complaint that defendant may know what to meet.—Reed v. Laudau, 115 N.Y.S. 1068.

Proof under pleadings

Mun.Ct.Code § 92, entitled, "Signature to Instrument; When Deemed Genuine," and providing that genuineness of signature to instrument is admitted, unless denied, relates solely to the genuineness of the signature, and a defendant is entitled to prove that a contract sued on was not the contract that he had made, in that it had been altered, under a general denial, without compliance with such statute.—Paramount Advertising Corporation v. Horowitz, 189 N.Y.S. 163.

Sola, 185 N.Y.S. 869—Feintuck v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 135 N.Y.S. 597.

Material defects are not amendable in petition and precept in summary proceeding.—Marmac Building & Holding Corporation v. Vassar Garage Corporation, 207 N.Y.S. 409, 124 Misc. 226.

Jurisdictional defects

(1) Where defendant appeared specially to object to the jurisdiction of court, court must confine rulings to objections before it, and cannot acquire jurisdiction by permitting an amendment to the complaint.—Gerken v. Gerken, 199 N.Y.S. 169.

(2) Failure of oral complaint in municipal court action for rent to allege that thirty days' notice of increase in rent was given, as required, held not jurisdictional defect, but court should have permitted landlord to amend, when tenant moved to dismiss complaint on that ground.—Kuhbach v. Stahl, 204 N.Y.S. 801, 123 Misc. 167.

Change in cause of action

Amendment introducing new cause of action or defense is permissible in furtherance of substantial justice.—Bunke v. N.Y.—Equitable Auto Sales Co. v. Sherman, 170 N.Y.S. 948—Blake v. Malliet, 84 N.Y.S. 161.

After evidence is in

Under Mun.Ct.Act § 166, providing that the court must allow pleadings to be amended at any time if justice will be promoted thereby, it was not error to allow oral pleadings, in an action for the use and occupation of premises, to be amended so as to base the claim on trespass, after plaintiff's testimony was all in.—Bunke v. N. Y. Telephone Co., 81 N.E. 1161, 188 N.Y. 600, affirming 97 N.Y.S. 66, 110 App.Div. 241, affirming 91 N.Y.S. 390, 46 Misc. 97, 34 Civ.Proc.R. 170.

Deprivation of jurisdiction

In action for personal injuries, where complaint showed jurisdiction of subject matter in municipal court, whether it is deprived of that jurisdiction under workmen's compensation law cannot be determined by affidavits in advance of trial, but should be raised by answer or motion at close of trial, or when facts are all shown.—Schattnr v. American Tobacco Co., 165 N.Y.S. 479, 100 Misc. 261.

44. N.Y.—Anchor Realty Co. v. Bankers' Trust Co., 156 N.Y.S. 631, 93 Misc. 64—Nassau Finance Co. v. Suffrin, 150 N.Y.S. 690.

Affidavit

N.Y.—Nerenberg v. Keith, 167 N.Y.S. 612, 101 Misc. 551.

Service on defendant

Attachment cannot be procured in municipal court on ground of defendant's nonresidence within state unless plaintiff can serve defendant within city.—Mayefsky v. Davis, 248 N.Y.S. 721, 139 Misc. 506.

Necessity for levy

N.Y.—Davidoff v. Chipornoi, 166 N.Y.S. 996, 101 Misc. 291.

Rights of third persons

(1) It has been held that Mun.Ct. Code § 50 does not provide exclusive remedy for retaking of personal property by third party claimant nor bar action in replevin for such purpose.—Hartford Acceptance Corporation v. Kirchheimer, 2 N.Y.S.2d 224, 166 Misc. 219.

(2) A contrary statement was made in a case, apparently by way of dictum, in which it was held that a third person could not move to vacate the warrant of attachment or levy made thereunder, the provision of the civil practice act permitting such motion being inapplicable to the municipal court.—L. Arbetter, Inc. v. Isabel, 263 N.Y.S. 176, 147 Misc. 54.

(3) In municipal court, remedy of third person claimant to property levied upon pursuant to attachment is confined strictly to attack upon levy.—L. Arbetter, Inc. v. Isabel, supra.

Vacating

Code provision requiring motion to vacate attachment to be before application of the property to the judgment, presupposes that the judgment is on valid notice, and otherwise does not apply.—Nerenberg v. Keith, 167 N.Y.S. 612, 101 Misc. 551.

Restitution

The municipal court of New York City has no power to order restitution of property sold under attachment, granting restitution after sale of property under vacated attachment and judgment not being one of general powers of court of record, such as the municipal court.—Friedman v. Phillips & Co., 201 N.Y.S. 53, 121 Misc. 21.

49. N.Y.—Lax v. Peierls, 147 N.Y.S. 801, 86 Misc. 26.

50. N.Y.—Buckley-Newhall Co. v. Bangs, 224 N.Y.S. 71, 130 Misc. 293—People v. Laueer, 141 N.Y.S. 296, 80 Misc. 438.

Notice necessary

(1) Warrant will be denied, where notice of application did not state time and place when application would be made.—Winterroth v. Scharger, 217 N.Y.S. 830, 128 Misc. 58.

(2) Affidavit in suit to foreclose lien on chattel, alleging whereabouts ters as writs of replevin,⁵¹ notice of trial,⁵² dis- practice,⁵⁵ and including adjudications as to such continuances,⁵³ dismissals and nonsuits,⁵⁴ calendar of mortgagor was unknown, although reasonable inquiry was made, and that, chattels had been secreted, dispensed with service of five days' notice.—Buckley-Newhall Co. v. Bangs, 224 N.Y.S. 71, 130 Misc. 293.

Return

Court has power to allow return to warrant of seizure nunc pro tunc as of proper date.—Bellom v. Schindler, 224 N.Y.S. 429, 130 Misc. 503.

Validity of writ

(1) Writ of seizure issued by city court to recover chattels on default under conditional sales contract held void.—Grossman v. Weiss, 221 N.Y.S. 266, 129 Misc. 234.

(2) Under provision of municipal court code requiring chattels seized in action to foreclose lien on chattels to be described by affidavit so that they may be readily identified, the granting of warrant of seizure as to chattels not enumerated in affidavit was error, and such chattels would be eliminated from the warrant.—Municipal Capital Corporation v. Levine, 13 N.Y.S.2d 895.

Damages for wrongful seizure

Where service on defendant was defective, depriving municipal court of jurisdiction to enter default judgment, court was without jurisdiction to assess damages and costs in defendant's favor on vacation of warrant of seizure.—Universal Credit Co. v. Blinderman, 288 N.Y.S. 79, 158 Misc. 917.

51. N.Y.—Triangle Mint Corporation v. Horgan, 233 N.Y.S. 570, 133 Misc. 802.

May be coupled with action

N.Y.—Triangle Mint Corporation v. Horgan, supra.

How issue raised

Defendant's motion in municipal court to vacate requisition of replevin and to dismiss the action must be denied as irregular procedure, his appropriate remedy being to answer and go to trial, rights of the parties not being determinable on motion.—Berman v. Peltz, 204 N.Y.S. 202, 123 Misc. 143.—Herman v. Rubin, 161 N.Y.S. 335.

Vacating writ

Court may vacate writ of replevin issued by it, especially where jurisdictional requirements are lacking.—Triangle Mint Corporation v. Horgan, 233 N.Y.S. 570, 133 Misc. 802.

Liability on undertaking

Demand by defendant for return of property is not condition precedent to commencement of action against surety on undertaking in replevin.—Budracco v. National Surety Co., 182 N.Y.S. 590, 112 Misc. 133.

52. Statute strictly construed

N.Y.—Haber v. Gingold, 11 N.Y.S.2d 187, 170 Misc. 817.

Manner of service

To obtain proper jurisdiction for entry of judgment in municipal court, notice of trial must be served in manner prescribed by municipal court.—Genet v. Johnson, 6 N.Y.S.2d 965.

53. N.Y.—Connecticut Blower Co. v. John Thatcher & Son, 176 N.Y.S. 422, 106 Misc. 623.—First National Bank v. Plimpton, 203 N.Y.S. 102, 15 C.J. p 1001 note 85.

Supreme court rules applicable

N.Y.—Broadway & Ninety-Fourth St. v. C. & L. Lunch Co., 190 N.Y.S. 563, 116 Misc. 440.

Counterclaim in issue

(1) Generally, where defendant pleads counterclaim, plaintiff may discontinue and prevent proof of the counterclaim.—Engel v. Davis, 142 N.Y.S. 469, 81 Misc. 202.

(2) Discontinuance by plaintiff landlord in summary proceedings will be denied in exercise of judicial discretion, where, after lengthy trial, sole issue is that raised by tenant's counterclaim.—Broadway & Ninety-Fourth St. v. C. & L. Lunch Co., 190 N.Y.S. 563, 116 Misc. 440.

Terms permissible

N.Y.—Trost v. City of New York, 177 N.Y.S. 220.

For want of prosecution

N.Y.—Levy v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 169 N.Y.S. 902, 95 Misc. 556.

For failure to file return

N.Y.—Illowsky v. Bishop Babcock Becker Co., 158 N.Y.S. 247.

Failure to file complaint

Dismissal for failure to file complaint "within five days" is improper where notice of order to file is not given.—Schwartz, Jaffee & Chas. D. Jaffee Co. v. O. B. Potter Properties, 182 N.Y.S. 685.

Where plaintiff fails to appear, the court can only dismiss.—Wilson v. Silverman, 154 N.Y.S. 143.

Duty of clerk

Municipal Court Rules, rule 8, makes it mandatory on the clerk to dismiss an action on failure of the plaintiff to file the summons with proof of service thereof within specified period.—Kolassa v. Boockman, 194 N.Y.S. 93.

Dismissal or nonsuit

Where court fails to note reason for dismissal, judgment is deemed to be one of nonsuit.—Saraga v. Strauss, 203 N.Y.S. 27, 208 App.Div. 66.

Dismissal on the merits is equivalent to a judgment for defendant on all the issues.—Brook v. Levinson, 159 N.Y.S. 880, 95 Misc. 567.

Dismissal of a case "reserved generally"

N.Y.—Junk v. Moore, 151 N.Y.S. 63, 88 Misc. 551.

55. N.Y.—Smiley v. Hayat Carpet Cleaning Co., 261 N.Y.S. 224, 146 Misc. 319.—Hahn v. Coltoff, 251 N.Y.S. 584, 140 Misc. 805.

Construction of rules generally

Municipal court rule providing for order in which causes shall appear on trial calendar must be construed to mean daily trial calendar.—Sherman Sylvester Scheuer Bldg. Corporation v. Krull, 255 N.Y.S. 97, 142 Misc. 189.

Trial and reserved calendar

Order of municipal court, refusing to restore to trial calendar case placed on calendar of reserved cases, was erroneous under Municipal Court Rules, rule 9.—Court Press v. Jackson, 208 N.Y.S. 273, 124 Misc. 329.

Preferences

(1) Rules governing generally.—Sherman Sylvester Scheuer Bldg. Corporation v. Krull, 255 N.Y.S. 97, 142 Misc. 189.—Hahn v. Coltoff, 251 N.Y.S. 584, 140 Misc. 805.—Esposito v. National Transp. Co., 248 N.Y.S. 672, 139 Misc. 504.

59. N.Y.—Lampy v. Freedman, 111 N.Y.S. 685, 60 Misc. 70.

On issue of fact

Issue of fact in municipal court cannot be disposed of on motion, but requires trial.—Walteter v. Berman, 214 N.Y.S. 60, 126 Misc. 539.

Trial by court or jury

Court has no authority to direct a trial by jury after submission of cause to court.—White Star Garage v. Arizone, 176 N.Y.S. 31, 107 Misc. 237.

Conclusiveness of jury findings

Findings of jury to which framed issues of fact were submitted on consent of counsel were held conclusive on court, in view of evidentiary support therefor.—Feinstein v. City of New York, 283 N.Y.S. 335, 157 Misc. 157.

61. N.Y.—Mosapp v. Reddy, 197 N.Y.S. 222, 119 Misc. 438—Broadway & Ninety-Fourth St. v. C. & L. Lunch Co., 180 N.Y.S. 563, 116 Misc. 440—Levine v. Levine, 159 N.Y.S. 192, 95 Misc. 187.

Power of court

N.Y.—Cooper v. Nelson, 268 N.Y.S. 241, 149 Misc. 688—Stodder v. New England Nav. Co., 118 N.Y.S. 844, 134 App.Div. 221.

Motions to set aside

N.Y.—Conolly v. Jolly, 143 N.Y.S. 180, 86 Misc. 42.

Reinstatement of verdict

Court has power to reinstate verdict but should not where there was no error in original disposition.—Zeldman v. Yarrin, 6 N.Y.S.2d 65.

Motions for reargument

(1) Municipal court justice could grant reargument, and set aside verdict and grant new trial within twenty days after judgment, notwithstanding previous denial.—Prudential Paper Co. v. Ashland Press, 248 N.Y.S. 52, 231 App.Div. 515.

(2) But see case holding that the statutory power of trial judge to grant or deny motion to set aside jury verdict is exhausted after ruling on motion, the judge having no power thereafter to entertain a motion for reargument.—Guinta v. Yoost Photo Play Theatre Co., 213 N.Y.S. 394, 126 Misc. 375.

Grounds

(1) Mistake of jury is ground.—Bale v. Pass, 72 N.Y.S. 93, 64 App.Div. 302.

(2) Where the testimony was conflicting, and verdict was not against the weight of the evidence, it was error for court to set verdict aside.—Klass v. Ph. Davis & Co., 182 N.Y.S. 885.

(3) Where, in personal injury action, at the conclusion of the case no motion was made for a directed verdict, there was a sharp conflict in the evidence, and nothing to indicate that the verdict for plaintiff was the result of sympathy, bias, or prejudice, or that the accident could not have happened as plaintiff and his witness testified, the municipal court's order setting the verdict aside will be reversed.—Morgenstern v. Dry Dock, E. B. & B. R. Co., 199 N.Y.S. 68.

(4) Where specific sum is concededly due, landlord in summary proceedings in municipal court, in which proceeding tenant filed counterclaim, motion to set aside verdict for less sum, and for new trial, should be granted, unless tenant stipulates to correct verdict.—Broadway & Ninety-Fourth St. v. C. & L. Lunch Co., 190 N.Y.S. 563, 116 Misc. 440.

Retrial of case necessary

N.Y.—Murphy v. Joline, 115 N.Y.S. 108, 62 Misc. 461.

Reduction

Municipal court had no power to reduce verdict for personal injuries.—Milder v. Belt Line Ry. Corp., 168 N.Y.S. 6.

N.Y.S. 152—Rudolph v. Newcombe, 168 N.Y.S. 687.
15 C.J. p 1002 note 92.

Construction of statute

N.Y.—Daskal v. Corsan Cracker Co., 220 N.Y.S. 544, 219 App.Div. 329.

Grounds for

(1) In general.—Rudnick v. Hultnick, 198 N.Y.S. 354, 120 Misc. 383—Berger v. Premo, 196 N.Y.S. 527, 119 Misc. 491—Zimmer v. Union Ry. Co. of New York City, 192 N.Y.S. 229, 118 Misc. 77—Schwartz & Weisner Holding Corporation v. Fernald, 191 N.Y.S. 369, 117 Misc. 575—Clarrissio v. Coney Island & B. R. Co., 172 N.Y.S. 183, 104 Misc. 592—Friedman v. Belmont Trimming Co., 199 N.Y.S. 121—Well v. Gorman, 192 N.Y.S. 331—West v. Avidan, 191 N.Y.S. 720—South American Pub. Co. v. Washington Heights Hospital, 170 N.Y.S. 411—Shapiro v. Gordon, 170 N.Y.S. 371.

(2) Unconstitutionality of Municipal Court Code § 48, on which plaintiff relies to show jurisdiction in attachment against nonresident defendants not served, was held not to affect right of defendants voluntarily appearing to have their motion to open default granted.—Henry v. Van Zonneveld, 168 N.Y.S. 621, 102 Misc. 216.

Requirements of motion

(1) Mere notice of motion, without affidavits, is insufficient.—Kerr v. Hobson, 182 N.Y.S. 217.

(2) Necessity for affidavit of merits.—Well v. Gorman, 192 N.Y.S. 331—Hilleary v. Wells Fargo & Co. Express, 184 N.Y.S. 493—Hurta Realty Co. v. Greenstone, 184 N.Y.S. 477—Eichenbaum v. Frank Melville, Inc., 182 N.Y.S. 163.

(3) It is immaterial that affidavit of merits accompanying motion to open default in municipal court is insufficient, where there was no default.—Lordi Const. Co. v. Priore, 191 N.Y.S. 721.

On terms

N.Y.—Cassin v. Scala, 275 N.Y.S. 162, 153 Misc. 425—Michael v. Rand Coffee Stores, 239 N.Y.S. 330, 136 Misc. 211—South American Pub. Co. v. Argos Steel Products Corporation, 191 N.Y.S. 716—Tettler v. Ebenstein, 189 N.Y.S. 33—Atkins v. K. & G. Operating Corporation, 186 N.Y.S. 616—Eagle Die Co. v. Gelatoid Corporation, 186 N.Y.S. 610—Eichenbaum v. Frank Melville, Inc., 182 N.Y.S. 163—Rosenberg v. Case Hotel Co., 166 N.Y.S. 750.

Without terms

N.Y.—Ryan v. Megrue, 198 N.Y.S. 506—Dressler v. Hochstetter, 176 N.Y.S. 1—L. Schulman & Son v. Moore, 173 N.Y.S. 365—Frank Hayden, Inc. v. Robinson, 159 N.Y.S. 861.

Notice required

N.Y.—Wiener v. Hatch, 158 N.Y.S. 805.

In summary proceedings

N.Y.—Moritz v. Gouze, 159 N.Y.S. 821.

Time for opening

(1) Court has no jurisdiction to open default more than one year from date of entry.—Scott v. Hemmer, 227 N.Y.S. 171, 131 Misc. 474, affirmed 228 N.Y.S. 896, 223 App.Div. 872—Weiss v. Forty-Second St., M. & St. N. Ave. Ry. Co., 205 N.Y.S. 428, 123 Misc. 387—Giovini v. Arluck, 190 N.Y.S. 627, 117 Misc. 100—Bernstein v. Rubin, 176 N.Y.S. 80.

(2) This rule is inapplicable where ground is lack of notice of trial.—R. Z. P. Line Poultry Market v. Goldman, 255 N.Y.S. 439, 142 Misc. 727.

(3) After entry of appellate term's order reversing municipal court's order opening defendant's default, and reinstating judgments, municipal court was without power to reopen default, in absence of leave from appellate term to renew motion, especially where no fact was shown, on renewed motion, not shown or well known to defendant when first motion was made.—Negreen v. Stokes, 206 N.Y.S. 608, 123 Misc. 929.

(4) Defendant against whom judgment was entered in municipal court could not be denied relief in 1938 simply on ground that plaintiff entered his judgment in 1934, where defendant claimed that proper notice of trial had never been served on defendant's attorney and that case had been improperly on the calendar and inquest had been unduly taken.—Genet v. Johnson, 6 N.Y.S.2d 965.

(5) As respects defendant's right to have a judgment entered in March, 1934, vacated on ground that proper notice of trial was never served on defendant's attorney, laches was to be reckoned from day that knowledge of judgment was brought home to defendant, and not from its day of entry.—Genet v. Johnson, supra.

Laches

N.Y.—Intercity Carnival Co. v. Illions, 239 N.Y.S. 128, 136 Misc. 56—Dickman v. Union Ry. Co. of New York, 233 N.Y.S. 331, 133 Misc. 710.

Order as self-operating

An order opening defendant's default on payment of ten dollars costs, and providing for denial of the motion if the costs were not paid, was self-operating, making needless second order denying motion for nonpayment of costs.—Berman & Lessenger v. Phoenix Ribbon & Carbon Co., 179 N.Y.S. 850.

Setting case for trial

(1) Statutory provision for setting case down for trial on granting motion to open default, and to vacate judgment entered thereon, was inapplicable to case wherein issue had not been joined and no facts showing propriety of such action were presented.—217 Front St. Metals & Rubber Corporation v. Klug, 256 N.Y.S. 48, 143 Misc. 164.

(2) Necessity for motion.—Weiss v. Forty-Second St., M. & St. N. Ave. Ry. Co., 205 N.Y.S. 428, 123 Misc. 387.

(3) Entry of order necessary.—Bird v. Samuel D. Davis Const. Co., 173 N.Y.S. 152.

Renewal of motion

(1) Where no fact was shown on a renewed motion to open a default judgment in the municipal court that was not either shown or well known to the parties when the first motion was denied without leave to renew it, the renewed motion will be denied, as the municipal court is a court of record, and its orders determining motions are res judicata, unless material and controlling facts not presented on the first motion are disclosed on the second.—American Dry Plate Co. v. New York Ferrotype Co., 200 N.Y.S. 115.

(2) Where successive motions to open default and vacate judgment and for reargument in the municipal court were denied, and an appeal from the last motion for reargument was dismissed, the orders were res judicata, and in the absence of facts additional to those presented on the previous motions an order on rehearing, granting the motion to open default, could not stand.—Sontag v. Katzenberg, 204 N.Y.S. 207, 123 Misc. 145.

Liability of surety on undertaking
N.Y.—Einstein v. Ulin, 194 N.Y.S. 830.

Court may require surety company bond as a condition to the vacation of a default for want of service.—Duly v. Herman, 145 N.Y.S. 900, 84 Misc. 26.

which a decision must be rendered,⁶⁴ judgments⁶⁵ | judgments by default,⁶⁸ judgments on confession or and orders⁶⁶ generally, judgments on pleadings,⁶⁷

64. N.Y.—Shaffer v. Vandewater, 137 N.Y.S. 857, 78 Misc. 133—Landesberg v. Marchitto, 180 N.Y.S. 410—Columbia Graphophone Co. v. Deutsch, 165 N.Y.S. 935.

Calculation of time

(1) Date of rendering of decision as distinguished from date of filing was held to control, as respects applicability of Municipal Court Code § 119, requiring decision to be rendered within fourteen days after submission of case, hence decision rendered within fourteen days, although not filed until fifteen days after final submission, was valid.—Drabik v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 279 N.Y.S. 268, 154 Misc. 829.

(2) From time of filing briefs by stipulation.—Beinert v. William M. Tivoli & Co., 116 N.Y.S. 4, 62 Misc. 616—Cohen v. Rafsky, 187 N.Y.S. 62—A. M. Eisenberg Co. v. Janzlik, 92 N.Y.S. 247.

Jurisdiction lost by delay

N.Y.—Shaffer v. Vandewater, 137 N.Y.S. 857, 78 Misc. 133—Imperiale v. Finalle, 191 N.Y.S. 341—Cohen v. Rafsky, 187 N.Y.S. 62—U. S. Realty & Improvement Co. v. Eging, 174 N.Y.S. 647—J. M. Etzel Co. v. Fairchild Sons, 169 N.Y.S. 504—Holste v. Ardle, 163 N.Y.S. 1084.

Extension of time

N.Y.—Pearlstein v. Bechtel, 188 N.Y.S. 404.

Time for rendering judgments

(1) Judgment not rendered or entered within fourteen days after submission of case is void, under Municipal Court Code § 119. In such event, the case should be placed on the general calendar.—Association of Dress Mfg. Co. v. New Era Dress Co., 199 N.Y.S. 554.

(2) Under Municipal Court Code § 119, the justice, after he has duly rendered his decision within fourteen days, may thereafter cause it to be filed with the proper clerk, and if the method adopted fails he may grant the motion of the prevailing party for an order directing the clerk to enter the judgment and to file copies of lost papers, the "rendering" of a judgment not involving the ministerial act, which may be performed after the required time.—Austin, Nichols & Co. v. Jobes, 182 N.Y.S. 777, 112 Misc. 121.

Amendatory judgment

N.Y.—Trustees of Masonic Hall and Asylum Fund v. Fontana, 164 N.Y.S. 370, 99 Misc. 497—Palmer v. Walter J. Burke Garage Co., 173 N.Y.S. 60, affirmed 176 N.Y.S. 914, 188 App.Div. 917—Hyman v. Nev-

a-Hone Razor Strop Co., 173 N.Y.S. 56.

Amendment of decision

N.Y.—Edwards v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 297 N.Y.S. 902, 163 Misc. 706.

65. N.Y.—Susskind v. Freund, 263 N.Y.S. 300, 147 Misc. 486—Heyman v. Wick, 255 N.Y.S. 356, 142 Misc. 577—Hall v. Superb Iron & Bronze Co., 191 N.Y.S. 690. 15 C.J. p 1002 note 94.

Construction of statute

N.Y.—Diskal v. Corsan Cracker Co., 220 N.Y.S. 544, 219 App.Div. 829.

What constitutes

A writing, signed by clerk, stating that motion for judgment to dismiss complaint has been granted, is not judgment, where there was no direction by justice to enter judgment, and decision on which it was based was to be made effective by subsequent order.—Allen v. Wolkoff, 166 N.Y.S. 1010.

Preparation of

On refusal of successful party's attorney to prepare judgment, it may be prepared by opposing attorney or clerk under court's direction.—Midtown Plottage Corporation v. Sullivan, 227 N.Y.S. 357, 131 Misc. 473.

Signing by clerk

Where clerk failed to sign judgment, justice of municipal court properly allowed judgment to be signed by the clerk nunc pro tunc.—Edelstein v. Oxman, 13 N.Y.S.2d 95, 171 Misc. 552.

Notice to clerk

Municipal court judgment, prepared and delivered without notice to clerk by attorney for unsuccessful party, was improperly entered, and court should order change of date of its entry to permit appellate review.—McIntyre v. Borrero, 215 N.Y.S. 435, 127 Misc. 149.

Entry by clerk

Statutory requirement that successful party's attorney enter judgment was merely directory, and judgment entered by clerk was valid.—Godwin v. Hauer, 227 N.Y.S. 355, 131 Misc. 772.

Necessity for notice of entry

N.Y.—Lane v. The Mirror, 236 N.Y.S. 273, 134 Misc. 767—Chatham Phoenix Nat. Bank & Trust Co. v. Pascal, 233 N.Y.S. 356, 133 Misc. 708.

As between defendants

(1) Court has power to render judgment as between defendants.—McCorken v. Spiegel, 216 N.Y.S. 561, 127 Misc. 496—Fuchs v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 164 N.Y.S. 105.

(2) In action against two defendants, judgment for plaintiff, not specifying which defendant it was against, was erroneous.—Markowitz v. Ratner, 145 N.Y.S. 934.

Against deceased person

N.Y.—Hopkin v. Bowsky, 246 N.Y.S. 453, 138 Misc. 251.

Actions on 67. N.Y.—Cochran v. Scherer, 192 N.Y.S. 199, 117 Misc. 765.

15 C.J. p 1002 note 96.

Basis for

N.Y.—Paterno Const. Co. v. Rentner, 191 N.Y.S. 517.

Motion may be made at any time after issue joined

N.Y.—Fried v. Rivkin, 159 N.Y.S. 373, 94 Misc. 319.

Right to generally

If landlord, suing to recover unpaid installment of rent, pleads prior adjudication of reasonableness thereof in summary proceeding for non-payment, judgment must be granted on pleadings, unless defendant pleads facts arising since period for which adjudication was made, affecting rental value.—Paterno Const. Co. v. Rentner, 191 N.Y.S. 517.

Defense valid on face

Court has no power to grant judgment on pleadings for plaintiff where defense is valid on face of pleadings.—Paterno Const. Co. v. Rentner, 191 N.Y.S. 517.

68. N.Y.—Cassin v. Scala, 275 N.Y.S. 162, 153 Misc. 425—Farber v. Tannenbaum, 173 N.Y.S. 131, 105 Misc. 301.

Reduction of amount improper

N.Y.—Blum v. Hecht, 193 N.Y.S. 535.

Disposing of counterclaim

Under Municipal Court Code § 6 subd. 7, on motion made by plaintiff within time provided in § 129 subd 3, municipal court could make order amending judgment for plaintiff, to contain recital that defendant's counterclaim was dismissed on merits.—Greenbaum v. Goldberg, 172 N.Y.S. 744, 105 Misc. 206.

Substitution of new judgment

Where practical effect of order would be substitution of new judgment, and one for plaintiff in place of that theretofore rendered for defendant, it was wholly unauthorized and a nullity.—Parker v. Beim, 169 N.Y.S. 592.

74. N.Y.—Back v. First Solotwiner Sick Ben. Soc., 280 N.Y.S. 107, 155 Misc. 585—Fristachi v. American Ry. Express Co., 184 N.Y.S. 473—Landesberg v. Marchitto, 180 N.Y.S. 410.

Without conditions as to costs

Where a court clerk refused to file an answer on the ground that the summons had not been filed, and plaintiff afterward took judgment by default, defendant was entitled to have the judgment vacated, without imposition of conditions as to costs or giving security.—Whyte v. Hansill, 193 N.Y.S. 511.

judgments rendered on consent,⁷⁵ executions⁷⁶ or supplementary proceedings in aid thereof,⁷⁷ body execution,⁷⁸ satisfaction of judgments,⁷⁹ new trials,⁸⁰ costs,⁸¹ and rights and duties of a city marshal.⁸²

(c) Review of Proceedings

Appeals from the municipal court of the city of New York are largely regulated by the code for such court, and only such appeals as are provided for in the code may be taken.

Appeals from the municipal court of the city of New York are largely regulated by the code for such court, specific provisions being contained therein as to the judgments and orders appealable, the time for appeal, the mode for taking an appeal, and other matters relating to appeals.⁸³

Generally, appeals therein lie as of right only from a judgment in an action or such orders as are specified in the code or amendments thereto,⁸⁴

Appeal from order

(1) No appeal lies from order refusing to vacate judgment, void for not having been rendered and entered within specified time.—Association of Dress Mfg. Co. v. New Era Dress Co., 199 N.Y.S. 554.

(2) In such event, the case will be remitted to the trial court, with leave to appellant to renew the motion to vacate and to have the case placed on the general calendar.—Association of Dress Mfg. Co. v. New Era Dress Co., supra.

Restitution

N.Y.—Gelband v. Doe, 266 N.Y.S. 679, 149 Misc. 3.—Feldman v. Rabbinowitz, 187 N.Y.S. 569.—Fristachi v. American Ry. Express Co., 184 N.Y.S. 473.

75. N.Y.—Federal Sign System v. Pescia, 146 N.Y.S. 311.

Power of court

Municipal court has power to entertain and grant defendant's motion to vacate judgment, entered by clerk without court order or notice to defendant, for full amount agreed to be paid plaintiff by defendant in stipulation for settlement of action after default in payment of one of installments provided for, defendant's answer not being withdrawn, nor notice of application for judgment waived, by stipulation, which did not discontinue action.—La Salle Extension University v. Parella, 294 N.Y.S. 146, 162 Misc. 220.

Issues determinable on motion

Where defendant was not given opportunity to present the facts in connection with execution, delivery, filing and entry of confession judgment, municipal court could decide issues presented in defendant's motion to vacate judgment.—Tropan v. Smithson, 9 N.Y.S.2d 435.

76. For wages

N.Y.—Keve v. Columbia Kid Hair Curlers Mfg. Co., 145 N.Y.S. 1072, 161 App.Div. 918.

Renewal of

N.Y.—Wilson & Co. v. Hershkowitz, 298 N.Y.S. 14, 163 Misc. 721.

N.Y.—Solomon v. Suffin, 209 N.Y.S. 671, 124 Misc. 748.

78. Requirements

(1) Failure of summons to bear statutory indorsement for execution against person, and failure to serve verified complaint with summons, was not error, where verified complaint was served on defendant's motion.—Ritz Carlton Apartments v. Fried, 232 N.Y.S. 519, 133 Misc. 607, reversed on other grounds 235 N.Y.S. 624, 134 Misc. 347.

(2) In name of assignee of judgment creditor.—People ex rel. Greenhouse v. Sheriff of Kings County, 298 N.Y.S. 845, 252 App.Div. 761.

Provision in judgment

(1) In action in municipal court against defendant, who induced plaintiff to cash checks which, when presented to bank, were refused for lack of funds, where summons bore proper indorsement to effect that plaintiff claimed defendant was liable to arrest and imprisonment, and defendant defaulted, court erred in refusing judgment under which execution could issue against defendant's person.—Litten v. Haywang, 171 N.Y.S. 274.

(2) Incorporation in judgment of provision for body execution was not discretionary with clerk in proper case, clerk being required to include such statement, and this even though case was not heard by court, but was referred to clerk for judgment.—Volentino v. Cannatto, 231 N.Y.S. 646, 133 Misc. 267.

Second execution

Issuance of second execution against person of judgment debtor after prior similar execution lapsed is authorized, where prior execution was returned unsatisfied.—People ex rel. Greenhouse v. Sheriff of Kings County, 298 N.Y.S. 845, 252 App.Div. 761.

79. Power of court

The municipal court has the same powers as the supreme court with respect to the satisfaction of its own judgments and all docket entries relating thereto under statutes, and in a proper case may direct clerk to satisfy judgment of record.—Brinn v. Wooding, 298 N.Y.S. 971, 164 Misc. 850.

Vacating satisfaction of judgments

N.Y.—Duringshoff v. Coates, 157 N.Y.S. 230, 93 Misc. 485.

80. N.Y.—New York Petticoat Mfg. Co. v. Flickinger, 168 N.Y.S. 676, 102 Misc. 225.

15 C.J. p 1002 note 6.

Newly discovered evidence may constitute ground for new trial where ends of justice so require.—Mossapp v. Reddy, 197 N.Y.S. 222, 119 Misc. 438.

Necessity for setting aside judgment N.Y.—Johnson v. Heidenfelder, 195 N.Y.S. 73.

Limiting issues

Under Municipal Court Code § 29 subd 5, the court, setting aside verdict on grounds other than that damages were inadequate, where question of damages was not separable, could not properly limit new trial to question of damages.—New York Petticoat Mfg. Co. v. Flickinger, 168 N.Y.S. 676, 102 Misc. 225.

Court should give reasons

N.Y.—Sylvan Mortgage Co. v. Young, 188 N.Y.S. 516.

81. N.Y.—Levine v. Kosher Matzo's Baking Co., 159 N.Y.S. 845, 95 Misc. 565.—Elchorn v. Negrin, 158 N.Y.S. 98.

Extra costs

N.Y.—Yankowitz v. Arkin, 157 N.Y.S. 995.

82. Suit for conversion

Under the code, a city marshal may sue for conversion of property in his possession as result of lawful levy.—Florea v. Shultz, 216 N.Y.S. 412, 127 Misc. 420.

83. N.Y.—Friedman v. McHugh, 293 N.Y.S. 345, 161 Misc. 856.—Standard Scale Supply Co. v. City of New York, 165 N.Y.S. 81.

(5) Order imposing improper terms on failure to file pleading on attorney.—Abraham v. Wilkes, 170 N.Y.S. 531, dismissing appeal 168 N.Y.S. 350.

(6) Order granting stay until payment of costs of former action by one having permission to bring action in forma pauperis.—Johnson v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 164 N.Y.S. 23.

(7) Order staying plaintiff from proceeding with trial of the action pending trial of an action in the supreme court brought by defendant.—Richardson v. Lehman, 176 N.Y.S. 758.

(8) Order made on retaxation of costs.—Greenberg v. Hurlburt Motor Truck Co., 172 N.Y.S. 459.

(9) Order denying motion to vacate order granting new trial.—Trans-Oceanic Trading Co. v. Muller, 171 N.Y.S. 220.

(10) Informal indorsement, signed by judge in summary proceedings by landlord in municipal court, that "upon stipulation filed herein, and all papers, landlord's petition dismissed."—Youngsters' Realty Corporation v. Oliver, 180 N.Y.S. 26.

(11) Order granting motion directing clerk to accept answer for filing, and to file same nunc pro tunc as of certain date.—Rosenberg v. Block, 180 N.Y.S. 415.

(12) Order granting motion for commission to take deposition of witnesses.—Birmingham, Prosser & Co. v. Shea, 181 N.Y.S. 383.

(13) Order in summary proceeding, denying landlord's motion for order directing clerk to deliver warrant.—Tauszig v. Kantor, 188 N.Y.S. 92, 115 Misc. 366.

(14) Order granting stay of issuance of warrant in summary proceedings.—Kuenzli v. Stone, 182 N.Y.S. 680, 112 Misc. 125.

(15) Order giving defendant leave to answer.—Van Brink v. Aaron, 187 N.Y.S. 108.

(16) Order denying motion to restore action to calendar, with leave to renew on proper papers on payment of costs.—Doctors Service Corps v. Budd, 206 N.Y.S. 654, 123 Misc. 935.

15 C.J. p 1002 note 7 [c].

Where rulings not appealable

N.Y.—Pirkner v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 11 N.Y.S.2d 716, 171 Misc. 2—Mutual Braid Co. v. Jeffers, 174 N.Y.S. 730, 106 Misc. 494—Bird v. Samuel D. Davis Const. Co., 173 N.Y.S. 152.

89. Reentry of judgment

Defendant is not deprived of benefit of appeal from municipal court judgment entered by clerk because plaintiff subsequently entered another judgment.—Godwin v. Hauer, 227 N.Y.S. 355, 131 Misc. 772.

90. N.Y.—Himmel v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 156 N.Y.S. 608, 93 Misc. 191.

Timely appeal necessary

N.Y.—Hunter Waist Co. v. Rothman, 181 N.Y.S. 455, 111 Misc. 378—Rubenstein v. Lubelsky, 194 N.Y.S. 761—Whyte v. Hansill, 193 N.Y.S. 511.

Extension of time

Appeal from order denying motion to set aside judgment cannot extend the time to appeal from the judgment.—Gonick v. Goldfarb, 165 N.Y.S. 226, 100 Misc. 118.

91. Payment of fees on filing

(1) Clerk is justified in refusing to file notice of appeal where fee was not prepaid.—Block v. Israel, 181 N.Y.S. 454.

(2) Where appellant's attorney in good faith duly filed notice of appeal with clerk of municipal court, but through inadvertence the fee did not accompany the notice, the clerk may be required to accept the fee tendered after expiration of the time for appealing, and required to file the notice of appeal as of the date received.—Block v. Israel, 181 N.Y.S. 454.

Setting out order appealed from N.Y.—Bergoff v. Park Row Bazaar, 184 N.Y.S. 477.

92. Marking of exhibits

Marking of exhibits for identification is mere question of practice, and there is no rule absolutely precluding the party offering them from opportunity of having them considered by appellate court merely because identification mark may have been omitted at trial.—Gordon v. Christenson, 185 N.Y.S. 112.

Objections not raised below

Objection that defendant recovering judgment against codefendant did not comply with statute requiring written demand for such judgment, made for first time on appeal, was too late.—McCorken v. Spiegel, 216 N.Y.S. 561, 127 Misc. 496.

93. Right to make

Municipal court had no power to make order declaring that appellant had waived his right to "make a case."—Julius Blum & Co. v. Amiron Supply Co., 170 N.Y.S. 375, 103 Misc. 508.

Settlement of case

(1) Settled case is necessary.—Youngsters' Realty Corporation v. Oliver, 180 N.Y.S. 26—Finkelstein v. Friedman, 164 N.Y.S. 822.

(2) Trial judge on settlement of case may abridge record so that return shall contain so much of evidence only as is material to questions to be raised.—Adler v. Confield, 283 N.Y.S. 778, 157 Misc. 420.

(3) Municipal court has no power to make an order declaring that plaintiff has waived his right to have a case on appeal settled.—Bendelari v. B. S. Moss Theatrical Enterprises, 202 N.Y.S. 295.

(4) Motion to send return back to trial judge to incorporate all of stenographer's minutes of trial would be denied where it was not claimed that return as settled by trial judge did not fully present alleged error which plaintiff sought to review.—Adler v. Confield, 283 N.Y.S. 778, 157 Misc. 420.

Amendment of case

After case on appeal to appellate term was settled by trial justice of municipal court, it was not subject to amendment, especially after appellate term had heard and disposed of same.—Standard Scale Supply Co. v. City of New York, 165 N.Y.S. 81.

National Ladies' Specialty Corporation, 182 N.Y.S. 885.—Loft Realty Co. v. Clayden, 164 N.Y.S. 692.

Appellate Court bound by record

N.Y.—Cohen v. National Ladies' Specialty Corporation, 182 N.Y.S. 885.

Stenographer's minutes

(1) Where party, in support of motion for new trial, obtained and paid for copy of stenographer's minutes, he was entitled to file such copy with clerk on appeal.—Derre v. Dieges & Clust, 170 N.Y.S. 355.

(2) Absence of stenographer's minutes does not deprive plaintiff of his right to appeal.—Lehman-Bleyer Paper Co. v. Public Bank of New York City, 166 N.Y.S. 707.

Record controls over brief

N.Y.—Flores v. Friedman, 167 N.Y.S. 269.

Adding to record

Where defendant's letter to plaintiff was excluded from evidence when offered by defendant, and defendant's attorney did not ask that it be marked for identification, but, after the record on appeal had been filed, obtained order returning it to the municipal court for correction, and made motion that the letter be marked and sent up with the record on appeal from the judgment, such motion should not have been denied, but, in the absence of claim by plaintiff the instrument submitted on the motion was not the one offered on trial, it should have been marked and placed in the record, to enable the appellate term to determine the question of its admissibility on the appeal from the judgment.—Gordon v. Christenson, 185 N.Y.S. 112.

95. N.Y.—Schultz v. De Hart, 153 N.Y.S. 929.

96. N.Y.—Garvey v. Stickland, 158 N.Y.S. 322, 94 Misc. 315.

Defenses not pleaded or proved not considered

N.Y.—London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Marine Repair Corporation, 199 N.Y.S. 237, 120 Misc. 596, reversing 195 N.Y.S. 492.

Matters not in case on appeal not considered

N.Y.—Rosenbaum v. National Acc. Soc., 167 N.Y.S. 325.

As determined by record

(1) Matters in brief, not recited or suggested in the record, cannot be considered.—Giardina v. Bonanno, 184 N.Y.S. 478.

(2) In proceedings by landlord against tenants, the record on appeal from municipal court does not warrant the appellate term passing on the question whether the exclusion of the tenants' names from a directory board in the hallway of the office building constituted an actual partial eviction, where it appears that the parties whose names were excluded were not the tenants, but some of their undertenants, in the premises without the landlord's consent, express or implied, in violation of the terms of the lease.—434 Broadway Realty Corporation v. Stone & Schleimer, 184 N.Y.S. 678.

(3) If respondent landlord did not, on appeal by its tenants in its proceedings against them, intend to press the point that the record did not warrant the appellate term passing on a question which was expressly mentioned in its motion for final order in the trial court, there should be some stipulation to such effect.—434 Broadway Realty Corporation v. Stone & Schleimer, supra.

(4) Under Municipal Court Code § 6 subd 6, and Arbitration Rules, rules 2 and 3, a judgment on award of arbitrator can be reversed on appeal only where error appears on the record.—Fullman v. George V. Ellis Plumbing & Engineering Co., 168 N.Y.S. 34, 102 Misc. 62.

(5) Where parties on appeal have stipulated that record contains all papers on which the court below acted in rendering judgment, and record contains no affidavit of bona fides, as provided for in Code, judgment must be reversed, on ground that lower court had no jurisdiction.—Niles v. Seeler, 181 N.Y.S. 20.

Jurisdictional questions

Where, when defendant appeared specially to object to jurisdiction of the municipal court, that court erroneously permitted plaintiff to amend the pleadings, on appeal, in passing on the question of jurisdiction, only the summons and original complaint can be considered.—Gerken v. Gerken, 199 N.Y.S. 169.

Motion not disposed of

Where, pending determination of a motion for a new trial made by plaintiff at the trial in municipal court, she made another similar motion based on newly discovered evidence, but the court decided the earlier motion in favor of plaintiff, without disposing of the second motion, the second motion is not before the court on appeal from the order granting a new trial, and will not be passed on.—Biegeleisen v. Cohen, 192 N.Y.S. 321.

Setting aside verdict without reasons

Where order of municipal court setting aside verdict does not recite grounds for setting it aside, appellate court is obliged to assume that order was granted on exceptions taken at the trial, and where no exceptions were taken at trial, order must be reversed.—Klass v. Ph. Davis & Co., 182 N.Y.S. 885.—Griffin Roofing Co. v. Seeman, 182 N.Y.S. 883.

Order granting new trial

(1) Order granting new trial in action tried without jury should not be affirmed, unless it affirmatively appears that there was some sufficient ground therefor.—Wm. Kleeman & Co. v. United Gem Stores, 189 N.Y.S. 67.

(2) In landlord's summary dispossession proceedings, where verdict for tenant has been set aside and new trial directed, trial judge's decision will be affirmed by appellate term, where record does not present question of law apparently determinative of issues between parties.—Lederman v. Rosen, 181 N.Y.S. 375.

Amending pleading to conform to proof

Appellate term has power.—Alexander v. Sola, 185 N.Y.S. 869.—Simon Zinn, Inc., v. Herman, 184 N.Y.S. 502.

Questions of fact

(1) Wherever there is a dispute as to any particular fact, the appellate term should regard the question as determined in accordance with defendant's version, the trial justice having given judgment for defendant.—Van Sant v. Perry, 174 N.Y.S. 658.

(2) On conflicting evidence verdict of jury should not be disturbed.—Pincus v. Geo. W. Millar & Co., 199 N.Y.S. 627.

(3) Where there is no evidence to sustain finding of defendant's negligence on which plaintiff recovered, judgment of the appellate term affirming judgment of the municipal court will be reversed, and complaint dismissed.—Lang v. Hudson & M. R. Co., 155 N.Y.S. 801, 171 App.Div. 898.

Matters in discretion of trial court

On appeal from municipal court, where appellate court had granted new trial, to allow defendant opportunity to litigate an issue, the trial court, in granting defendant's motion to amend, to plead such matter, did not abuse its discretion in failing to cisions consider and determine various questions relating to disposition of cause,⁹⁷ jurisdiction after impose costs as a condition.—Mundler v. Palmer, 165 N.Y.S. 987.

Presumptions

(1) Where record does not show that any of the jury in the municipal court had actually been questioned before a demand for a jury of twelve, except the opinion of the justice that the demand was made during "the examination of talesmen," the demand will be held to have been made at the proper time.—Palamara v. New York Rys. Co., 168 N.Y.S. 604.

(2) On objection to a second motion to restore a case to the trial calendar of the municipal court, that the costs on denial of the first motion had not been paid, it must be held, where the second motion was made before the same justice who heard the first, that he gave his leave to make it.—Rossmann v. Serventi, 177 N.Y.S. 855.

(3) In action in municipal court, where, at the close of plaintiff's case, defendants moved to dismiss the complaint for plaintiff's failure to prove his case whereupon plaintiff moved to amend to conform pleadings to proof, and the court took both motions under advisement, but there was nothing in the record to indicate that the amendment was allowed, it will be assumed, on appeal from judgment for plaintiff, that the amendment was allowed.—Wolf v. Rabuschansky, 192 N.Y.S. 800.

Reversible errors

N.Y.—Hotel Touraine v. Waite, 113 N.Y.S. 19, 61 Misc. 54—Weissberg v. Kaplan, 192 N.Y.S. 323—Kindler v. Collins v. Blythe, 192 N.Y.S. 274—Randell v. Pollack, 191 N.Y.S. 306—Wright v. Oldsmobile Co. of Brooklyn, 190 N.Y.S. 712—Lefkowitz v. Leblang, 187 N.Y.S. 520—Burkwitt v. New Jersey Fidelity & Plate Glass Ins. Co., 182 N.Y.S. 689—Weissman v. Greenberg, 157 N.Y.S. 204.

Harmless errors

N.Y.—Croger v. F. A. Sales Co., 174 N.Y.S. 126, 105 Misc. 620.

97. Rendering judgment

(1) Appellate term does not render judgment on appeal from judgment of municipal court.—Chmielewski v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 294 N.Y.S. 574, 250 App.Div. 786.

(2) Where defendants admitted that they received sum of which plaintiff was entitled to one half under contract as construed on appeal from municipal court, it is not necessary to order a retrial of the action, but appellate term can direct judgment for plaintiff.—Stern v. Froman, 190 N.Y.S. 843, 117 Misc. 180.

(3) A judgment in conversion, erroneously requiring return of the chattels, can be cured by the appellate court, if there is competent evidence of the value of the goods.—Handlor v. Perlberg, 158 N.Y.S. 706.

Modification of judgment

In action against railroad by injured employee, it was held that judgment overruling plaintiff's demurrer to defendant's answer, and dismissing plaintiff's complaint, would be modified by permitting plaintiff to withdraw his demurrer within twenty days, and, as modified, the judgment would be affirmed.—Corico v. Smith, 164 N.Y.S. 190, 178 App.Div. 33, modifying 161 N.Y.S. 293, 97 Misc. 447.

Reduction of verdict or judgment

(1) Where amount of judgment in municipal court arrived at below included by inadvertence an amount admittedly deductible, the judgment will be modified, by deducting that sum, with interest.—Stillman v. Rees & Rees, 189 N.Y.S. 69.

(2) Where evidence did not support municipal court's finding of damages, it was held that new trial should be granted instead of reducing recovery to amount which the court might have awarded.—Rosalisky v. Sacks, 167 N.Y.S. 268.

(3) Although there is nothing in the record to warrant amount of verdict where defendant conceded verdict against it for three hundred fifty-seven dollars would be supported, and the court finds evidence that would support verdict for three hundred fifty dollars, or three hundred seventy-one dollars and twenty-five cents, if plaintiff will file stipulation reducing judgment to three hundred fifty-seven dollars, the judgment will be modified and affirmed.—Davis v. Genuine Panama Hat Works, 181 N.Y.S. 242.

(4) If the inclusion of unproved items in judgment of municipal court were the only appearing error, the appellate court might accept the respondent's offer to reduce by excluding such items, but where there are other errors, this defect merely emphasizes the inaccuracy and infirmity of the judgment.—Richard v. P. Franz & Co., 182 N.Y.S. 882.

(5) In an action on contract to furnish work and materials in alteration of building, with counterclaim for failure to fully perform contract, testimony that it cost defendant "about" forty-eight dollars to do the work which plaintiff failed to do is too indefinite to warrant appellate court in arbitrarily deducting that amount from a judgment of one hundred dollars in favor of plaintiff.—Nelson v. Ritter, 185 N.Y.S. 92.

(6) Where record leaves no doubt that municipal court intended to find judgment for plaintiffs for amount of their claim, subject to certain reduction, and the trial justice erroneously accepted amount set forth by plaintiffs in summons, instead of the amount proved at trial and alleged in plaintiffs' bill of particulars, judgment will be reduced, and, as modified, affirmed.—Cusati v. Matthes, 191 N.Y.S. 311.

Ordering new trial

(1) Where record of the evidence on appeal from the municipal court is in such a confused and undeveloped state that the theory on which the trial court reached a decision as to an amount due cannot be ascertained, except by conjecture, a new trial will be ordered.—Ginsberg v. Nouvelle Dress Co., 167 N.Y.S. 310.

(2) Where action of municipal court in ordering judgment dismissing complaint to be changed to judgment for complainant was unauthorized, on appeal the order would be modified, by allowing vacation of judgment and new trial.—Parker v. Belfm, 169 N.Y.S. 592.

(3) Although essential facts are conceded or undisputed, appellate term, on appeal from municipal court, on reversing judgment, cannot dismiss complaint, where no motion to dismiss was made.—P. & G. Card & Paper Co. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 172 N.Y.S. 638.

(4) Where justice in municipal court by final order dismissed landlord's petition on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction, and on appeal in the appellate term, respondent conceded that the action of the justice was erroneous, the order will be reversed and new trial granted.—Beigelman v. Kennedy, 185 N.Y.S. 830.

(5) Where court dismissed complaint for breach of contract, on construing contract as to price against plaintiff, court on appeal will reverse, and order new trial in the interest of justice, the construction of the contract raising a question whether there had been a meeting of minds, an issue not passed on.—Horn v. Schein, 185 N.Y.S. 851.

(6) In an action for alleged balance due under written contract for installing fixtures and under an oral agreement for additional work, in which action defendant counterclaimed for failure to install fixtures within agreed time, dismissal of both the complaint and the counterclaim was held so inconsistent as to require a new trial.—Krasnove v. Scheff, 199 N.Y.S. 33.

d. Other Courts

Other courts of the state of New York considered.

Other courts which have from time to time existed or still exist in New York, and as to which decisions are found are the court of claims, see the C.J.S. title States § 206 et seq, also 57 C.J. p 289 note 48—p 294 note 87; the superior courts;¹ the courts of common pleas;² the courts of special sessions, see the C.J.S. title Criminal Law § 123, also 16 C.J. p 152 notes 67, 68; the district courts;³ the children's court;⁴ the domestic relations court of the city of New York;⁵ the police courts;⁶ and

(7) Where former decision in municipal court required that verdict should have been directed for plaintiff, and no motion therefor was made, the cause, on appeal from that judgment in favor of defendant dismissing complaint, must be sent back for a new trial, to be properly disposed of by trial judge.—Rose v. Rosalind Realty Co., 164 N.Y.S. 178.

(8) In view of liberal provisions of Municipal Court Code § 93, in order to promote substantial justice, plaintiff should after reversal of judgment for defendant in an action on account stated, be allowed on proper terms to amend his complaint in court below to show his employment by defendant.—Zimet v. Cohen, 175 N.Y.S. 97.

Limited new trial

(1) For assessment of damages only, where only error of court was in failing to instruct on damages.—Kaplan v. Krauss, 271 N.Y.S. 13, 151 Misc. 123.

(2) Where the affidavits for and against motion to vacate default for failure to serve process are sharply conflicting, and truth cannot be determined therefrom, order denying motion will be reversed, and question sent back to be tried orally.—Korn v. Karo, 180 N.Y.S. 644.

Dismissing complaint

On appeal from judgment for plaintiff in action in municipal court for running in plaintiff's directory defendant's full page advertisement, defended on the ground that the advertisement was not published "in opposite last page of directory," as contracted for, where the evidence was uncontradicted that the contract was altered by plaintiff's agent after its receipt from defendant, by inserting after the quoted words the words "if possible," and the action was brought on it in such altered form, the court would not only reverse the cause, but would also dismiss the complaint.—National Garment Retailers' Ass'n v. Seidel, 185 N.Y.S. 865.

Effect of former reversal

Judgment of dismissal, rendered by municipal court will be reversed, where similar judgment was reversed on former appeal, and there was no substantial difference in records on the two appeals.—Rosenbaum v. National Acc. Sec., 167 N.Y.S. 325.

98. N.Y.—People v. McDermott Dairy Co., 153 N.Y.S. 136, 90 Misc. 396.

On affirmance of order opening default

Where appellate term affirmed municipal court's order granting defendant's motion to open up default on terms and denied defendant's motion for resettlement of the order of affirmance so as to grant either leave to renew original motion or an extension of time within which to comply with the terms, municipal court on new facts presented had power to entertain motion to open defendant's default and properly granted an extension of time within which to comply with the terms on which default was opened.—Phoenix Ribbon & Carbon Co. v. Lebovit, 299 N.Y.S. 991, 252 App.Div. 488.

Suit on contract

Provision in contract with city for delivery of ashes that borough president's determination of all questions in relation to quantities or qualities of materials should be conclusive on contractor did not preclude suit on contract after borough president's disallowance of claim, in view of appellate term's decision in former action on contract authorizing commencement of new action after submitting disputed question of delivery to borough president.—Moran Bros. Contracting Co. v. City of New York, 278 N.Y.S. 173, 154 Misc. 802.

99. Timely suit necessary

N.Y.—North Side Hoisting Co. v. Southern Surety Co., 157 N.Y.S. 903, 94 Misc. 167.

On affirmance

Surety on undertaking on appeal from judgment denying enforcement of mechanic's lien, but rendering personal judgment, was liable on affirmance, where the undertaking was conditioned on affirmance or dismissal of appeal, and not on sustaining the lien.—*North Side Hoisting Co. v. (2) The domestic relations court of the city of New York is a statutory court of limited jurisdiction.—Anonymous v. Anonymous, 15 N.Y.S.2d 26, 172 Misc. 349.

Not criminal court

(1) In general.—In re Grenier, 1 N.Y.S.2d 235, 165 Misc. 784—Wignall v. Wignall, 298 N.Y.S. 251, 163 Misc. 910.

(2) Proceedings in the family division of the domestic relations court are not criminal, and the district attorney has no standing in the domestic relations court.—Zy v. Zy, 13 N.Y.S.2d 415.

Territorial limits

Where domestic relations court of New York City has jurisdiction, process of court will reach respondent or petitioner in other counties of state with same effect as mandates of county courts, but court must first have jurisdiction.—Young v. Young, 277 N.Y.S. 821, 154 Misc. 713.

Jurisdiction

(1) The court has no equity jurisdiction except as incident to the jurisdictional powers conferred on it by the legislature under the section of the constitution dealing with inferior local courts.—Kastner v. Kastner, 7 N.Y.S.2d 282, 169 Misc. 259.

(2) The court has no power to inquire into the validity of a divorce decree or a marriage contract excepting as an incident to the power to provide support and maintenance for a spouse.—Carbone v. Carbone, 2 N.Y.S.2d 869, 166 Misc. 924.

§ 280. North Carolina

In North Carolina there are decisions relating to superior courts, county courts, recorders' courts, and municipal courts.

In North Carolina there are decisions relating to the superior courts,⁸ which are courts of general jurisdiction,⁹ and which exercise equity powers.¹⁰ Their jurisdiction is unlimited, except in the sense that it has been narrowed by the carving out of portions thereof which have been given either concurrently or exclusively to other courts.¹¹

There are also decisions relating to such inferior courts as county courts,¹² recorders' courts,¹³ and municipal courts.¹⁴ There have been decisions relating to appeals from inferior courts to the superior court,¹⁵ the jurisdiction of the superior court when such an appeal is taken being derivative only.¹⁶

§ 281. North Dakota

In North Dakota there are decisions relating to district courts, county courts, and tribunals of conciliation.

There have been decisions relating to the district court,¹⁷ which has general jurisdiction, including power to hear and determine all matters which can be made the subject of a civil action or proceed-

Appeal

(1) It has been held that a mayor's court is a court of record and therefore an appeal may be taken directly from such court to the court of appeals.—Heininger v. Davis, 117 N.E. 229, 96 Ohio St. 205.

(2) But, in deciding that a justice of the peace court is not a court of record so as to permit an appeal therefrom directly to the court of appeals, it has been stated that "this conclusion necessarily results in inferentially overruling the case of Heininger v. Davis, Mayor, 117 N.E. 229, 96 Ohio St. 205, because the jurisdiction of a mayor is defined to be that of a justice of the peace, and in all essential respects similar provisions are made for conducting judicial proceedings before a mayor."—

State v. Allen, 159 N.E. 591, 593, 117 Ohio St. 470.

(3) The principle announced in State v. Allen, supra, has been followed with respect to a mayor's court.—Pettiford v. Village of Yellow Springs, 176 N.E. 587, 38 Ohio App. 310.

D. COURTS OF PROBATE JURISDICTION

1. JURISDICTION AND POWERS

§ 298. In General

Probate courts are creatures of the law whose basic jurisdiction is to administer justice in decedents' estates. With respect to matters to which their powers extend, they are usually regarded as courts of general jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of a probate court with respect to the administration of an estate attaches when it takes control of the estate and continues until it is fully administered. Such courts are usually courts of record.

Probate courts are creatures of the law⁸ whose basic jurisdiction is to administer justice in matters relating to decedents' estates.⁹ They have been said to be the offspring of the common law,¹⁰ although it has also been considered that the probate court system is not indebted to the common law for its existence or development.¹¹ The jurisdiction exercised by probate courts is commonly referred to as probate jurisdiction.¹²

While it has been frequently asserted that such courts are courts of special and limited jurisdiction,¹³ they are not courts of inferior, but rather

Location of rem as determining jurisdiction

(1) As to tangible personalty having permanent situs, question of jurisdiction of surrogate's court is determinable on principles of primary power to enforce decrees on rem itself, and as to intangibles owned by decedent jurisdiction is determined on formula of mobilia sequitur personam, by which situs of intangibles is usually attributed to domicile of owner.—In re Bradford's Will, supra.

statutory.²⁰ In cases where it is authorized to act, its powers are not only general²¹ but also plenary.²² Probate powers granted to a court constitute a public trust.²³

When jurisdiction attaches. In general, the jurisdiction of a probate court with respect to the administration of a particular estate attaches when it takes control of the estate in the manner and by the means prescribed by law.²⁴ More particularly, jurisdiction attaches on the filing of a petition for the appointment of a fiduciary to take into possession, marshal, and distribute the assets of the deceased.²⁵

Termination, loss, or divestiture of jurisdiction. It has been held that the jurisdiction of probate courts with respect to the settlement of estates is not lost by mere lapse of time²⁶ or failure to assume jurisdiction.²⁷ Having taken jurisdiction of the administration of a particular estate, the jurisdiction of a probate court continues until the estate is fully administered,²⁸ more particularly, until the decedent's property is distributed to those entitled thereto²⁹ and the estate is closed.³⁰

§ 299. Probate Powers of Courts Not Exclusively of Probate Jurisdiction

In some jurisdictions probate powers are conferred on courts not exclusively of probate jurisdiction. Under these circumstances, the jurisdiction of such a court in probate matters is separate and distinct from its jurisdiction in other matters. When sitting in probate, such a court is usually considered a court of general jurisdiction.

It sometimes happens that probate powers are conferred on courts which have jurisdiction over matters other than those which would fall within the cognizance of a court which is strictly one of probate,³¹ such as chancery,³² circuit,³³ county,³⁴

Controversy as to distributed property

The functions of a surrogate court are primarily limited to the appointment of estate fiduciaries, to the marshalling of the assets of decedents, and to overseeing their distribution, and when those events have occurred, its authority is at an end and if a controversy chances to arise subsequently as to rights of various individuals to property which has passed, the forum for its de-

(2) It has been held that statutes conferring jurisdiction on probate courts, being remedial and for the advancement of justice, should receive a favorable construction, such as will give them the force and efficiency intended by the legislature.—Seaman v. Duryea, 11 N.Y. 334, affirming 10 Barb. 523.

Statutory grant of jurisdiction held valid

Ohio.—Hatch v. Buckeye State Bldg. & Loan Co., 32 Ohio N.P.N.S., 297.

Declaratory Judgment Act did not limit or enlarge district court's jurisdiction over wills, trusts, and administration of estates.—Mulcahy v. Johnson, 252 P. 816, 30 Colo. 499.

Territorial limits of jurisdiction

In Pennsylvania, "the judges of the orphans' courts . . . are officials whose jurisdiction extends over the state."—In re Thompson's Adoption, 139 A. 737, 739, 290 Pa. 586.

Simple law issues

(1) Under a statute conferring jurisdiction on the probate court over all matters pertaining to probate business, that tribunal has jurisdiction in matters pertaining to probate business, where the issue can be settled at law and is simple.—McConnon & Co. v. Kuhlmann, 278 S.W. 822, 220 Mo.App. 821—Davis v. Roberts, 226 S.W. 662, 206 Mo.App. 125—Green v. Strother, 212 S.W. 399, 201 Mo.App. 418.

(2) Court of ordinary is without jurisdiction to decide conflicting claims between heir at law and administratrix of legatee involving intricate questions of law.—Coleman v. Hodges, 142 S.E. 875, 166 Ga. 288.

Terms "actions" and "civil actions," as used in constitutional provisions, providing that county courts shall not have jurisdiction in actions in which title to real estate is sought to be recovered, nor in civil actions where the debt or sum claimed shall exceed a specified amount, do not include matters concerned with settlement of estates such as proceedings to determine heirship.—Fischer v. Sklenar, 163 N.W. 861, 101 Neb. 553.

In Arkansas, the probate courts may determine all issues arising within the sphere of their jurisdiction according to the principles of all involved.—Arkansas Valley Trust Co. v. Young, 195 S.W. 36, 128 Ark. 42.

In New York

(1) Under the Surrogate's Court Act § 40, as amended, that court possesses entirely unlimited jurisdiction over any and every legal and equitable question which may arise in connection with decedents' or jurisdiction as is necessary to an efficient exercise of the jurisdiction conferred on it.

As the powers of these courts vary considerably in different states, no general rule defining precisely their powers can be laid down, but reference is made in the notes to a number of illustrative cases in which the powers of a court of probate have been considered with respect to particular matters and persons,⁵⁶ such as attorneys;⁵⁷ compromiswards' estates, so far as it concerns any person actually or constructively before the court by reason of any right in, claim to, or obligation in connection with, a decedent's or ward's estate.—MacLean v. Hart, 239 N.Y.S. 1, 228 App.Div. 379.—In re Zollikoffer's Will, 3 N.Y.S.2d 305, 166 Misc. 735.—In re Winslow's Estate, 272 N.Y.S. 829, 151 Misc. 298.—In re Enright's Estate, 267 N.Y.S. 483, 149 Misc. 353.—In re Reich's Estate, 262 N.Y.S. 623, 146 Misc. 616.—In re Walsh's Estate, 262 N.Y.S. 498, 146 Misc. 56.—In re Kirkman's Estate, 256 N.Y.S. 495, 143 Misc. 342.—In re Engel's Estate, 250 N.Y.S. 648, 140 Misc. 276.—In re McArdle's Estate, 250 N.Y.S. 276, 140 Misc. 257.—In re McCarthy's Funds, 248 N.Y.S. 335, 139 Misc. 147.—In re Morris, 235 N.Y.S. 461, 134 Misc. 374.—In re Sullard, 186 N.Y.S. 251, 114 Misc. 288.—15 C.J. p 1012 note 89 [a].

(2) The statute is to be construed liberally.—In re Enright's Estate, 267 N.Y.S. 483, 149 Misc. 353.

(3) It must be read in the light of its history and purpose.—In re Morris, supra.

(4) "An amendment in 1921 emphasizes the call for a liberal construction. Till then the general grant of jurisdiction had at times been read as limited by specific grants of jurisdiction as to enumerated subjects."—Raymond v. Davis' Estate, 161 N.E. 421, 423, 248 N.Y. 67.—In re Winslow's Estate, 272 N.Y.S. 829, 837, 151 Misc. 298.

(5) The amendment gives notice that specific powers of surrogate courts shall be read as being in addition to and without limitation or restriction on, the general powers conferred under the Surrogate Ct. Act § 40.—Raymond v. Davis' Estate, supra.—In re Winslow's Estate, supra.—In re Kirkman's Estate, 256 N.Y.S. 495, 143 Misc. 342.—In re Lakner, 255 N.Y.S. 809, 143 Misc. 117.

(6) The court's jurisdiction under the statute, however, relates to matters affecting decedents' estates, but not to matters which are independent thereof.—Isaacs v. Isaacs, 203 N.Y.S. 25, 208 App.Div. 61.—In re Veniero's Estate, 300 N.Y.S. 924, 165 Misc. 293.—In re Ihmsen's Estate, 294 N.Y.S. 120, 161 Misc. 789, reversed on other grounds 3 N.Y.S.2d 125, 253 App.Div. 472.—In re Leblang's Estate, 287 N.Y.S. 910, 159 Misc. 322.

(7) General powers conferred by the statute can be exercised only on return of process in a proceeding properly brought under some statutory provision therefor.—In re Lakner, supra.

(8) It has been said that the surrogate's court's jurisdiction over infant's guardianship and property is as broad and comprehensive as that of the supreme court.—In re Vanderbilt, 276 N.Y.S. 745, 153 Misc. 884.

Probate courts of Ohio are vested with full power to fully adjudicate all questions arising in matters properly before them.—Wilberding v. Miller, 106 N.E. 665, 88 Ohio St. 609, L.R.A.1916A 718.

56. Probate court has power

(1) To determine whether estate has been exhausted by payment of debts.—Moyer v. Bray, 116 N.E. 511, 227 Mass. 303.

(2) To determine whether legacy has lapsed.—Silveus v. Hewins, D.C. Mass., 4 F.Supp. 384, applying Massachusetts law.

(3) To make decree affecting disposition of funds deposited with city chamberlain or state treasury.—In re Bergamini's Estate, 238 N.Y.S. 749, 136 Misc. 118.

(4) To determine validity of antenuptial agreement releasing dower rights in decedent's estate.—In re Bunimowit's Estate, 219 N.Y.S. 763, 128 Misc. 518.

(5) To determine whether general release was obtained by fraud.—In re Ritchie's Estate, 242 N.Y.S. 14, 229 App.Div. 786.

(6) To determine whether there has been an assignment of legacies.—Isaacs v. Isaacs, 203 N.Y.S. 25, 208 App.Div. 61.

(7) To determine various other matters.—In re Ehlers' Estate, 232 N.Y.S. 675, 133 Misc. 424. 15 C.J. p 1012 note 91.

Surrogate's courts have same powers of control over attorneys as other courts of record.—In re Dollar's Estate, 169 N.Y.S. 333, 103 Misc. 137.

Excessive fees

Where all necessary persons were es;⁵³ contracts between legatees or distributees and third persons;⁵⁹ controversies between heirs;⁶⁰ corporations;⁶¹ ordinary claims;⁶² partnerships;⁶³ status of particular persons;⁶⁴ stockholders' disputes;⁶⁵ and tort actions.⁶⁶ In this Title, in dealing with the extent of jurisdiction and powers of probate courts, it is intended to deal with the subject generally leaving the extent of jurisdiction and powers with respect to particular proceedings to be dealt with in other appropriate titles of this work.

§ 302. — Equity Powers

While probate courts are not courts of general equity jurisdiction, yet, in matters falling within their jurisdiction they possess many of the powers usually exercised by courts of equity.

While probate courts are not courts of general equitable jurisdiction,⁶⁷ having only such equity pow-parties to proceeding, surrogate court could determine whether attorney's fees for services to estate were excessive.—In re Duggan's Will, 262 N.Y.S. 512, 146 Misc. 598.

Orphans' court cannot allow counsel fees to an attorney appearing for beneficiaries and not for any fiduciary over which the court has jurisdiction.—In re McGowan's Estate, 13 Pa. Dist. & Co. 156.

Negligence of attorney
N.Y.—In re Albanese, 283 N.Y.S. 691, 245 App.Div. 404, motion denied 2 N.E.2d 677, 271 N.Y. 524, affirmed 4 N.E.2d 732, 272 N.Y. 552.

N.Y.—In re Grube's Will, 294 N.Y.S. 306, 162 Misc. 228, affirmed 298 N.Y.S. 638, 251 App.Div. 894.

58. Surrogate's court has jurisdiction of compromise of testamentary controversy.—In re Kraetzer's Will, 264 N.Y.S. 443, 147 Misc. 609.

59. No jurisdiction

Subject to statutory exceptions surrogate's court has no jurisdiction over contracts between legatees and third persons, even if source of contract payment is to be found in some interest in estate.—In re Leblang's Estate, 287 N.Y.S. 910, 159 Misc. 322.

Beneficiary's assignments and debts

On its probate side, probate court does not ordinarily take cognizance of assignment of interest of beneficiary of trust created by will nor of unsecured debts of such beneficiary.—Madden v. Madden, 181 N.E. 771, 279 Mass. 417.

60. Probate court has no jurisdiction over contests of heirs, after the death of the intestate, not relating to acts of the deceased.—McClure v. Baker, Mo.App., 218 S.W. 1612.

61. Regulating corporate action

(1) The probate court cannot regulate the internal management of a corporation, even though executors within its jurisdiction own a dominant interest in the corporation.—In re Watson's Estate, 170 A. 254, 314 Pa. 178.

(2) It cannot set itself up as a regulatory body over corporate action.—In re Pulitzer's Estate, 248 N.Y.S. 87, 139 Misc. 575, opinion supplemented 251 N.Y.S. 549, 140 Misc. 572, affirmed In re Pulitzer, 260 N.Y.S. 975, 237 App.Div. 808.

(3) Accordingly, it cannot remove from office directors of a charitable corporation organized at the direction of a decedent's will and receiving as bequest decedent's residuary estate.—In re Watson's Estate, 170 A. 254, 314 Pa. 179.

Ordering issuance of new stock certificate

Under governing statutes, the orphans' court has jurisdiction to order the issuance of a new stock certificate where a fiduciary accountable to it shows title to the stock in the fiduciary estate, the loss or destruction of the certificate, and the impossibility of making a complete distribution of the estate for lack of a muniment of title.—In re Hegerman's Estate, 28 Pa. Dist. 384.

62. Probate court has no authority

(1) To pass on an ordinary claim of one person against another for a money judgment.

Kan.—In re Rightmire's Estate, 242 P. 138, 120 Kan. 95.

N.Y.—In re Barthold's Estate, 13 N.Y.S.2d 346, 171 Misc. 625.

(2) To regulate controversy which is merely personal between one individual and another, and which does not have for its object determination of recipients of part of, or interest in, assets of deceased person.—In re Bradford's Will, 288 N.Y.S. 153, 159 Misc. 482.

63. Partnership accounts and disputes

Orphans' court is not the proper forum to settle partnership accounts or try partnership disputes.—In re Cunningham's Estate, 75 Pa.Super. 190.

64. Preliminary determination

Surrogate's court has power to determine preliminarily status of person claiming right to participate in probate proceeding pending before it.—In re Browning's Estate, 276 N.Y.S. 270.

Marriage status

County court sitting in probate could determine whether claimant was deceased woman's common-law husband.—Roe v. Fisher's Estate, Tex.Civ.App., 91 S.W.2d 476, error dismissed.

65. Surrogate's court is not authorized to determine disputes between stockholders where any of such stockholders own their shares by individual title and ownership.—In re Pulitzer's Estate, 249 N.Y.S. 87, 139 Misc. 575, opinion supplemented 251 N.Y.S. 549, 140 Misc. 572, affirmed In re Pulitzer, 260 N.Y.S. 975, 237 App.Div. 808.

66. No jurisdiction

Constitution limiting probate court's jurisdiction to "probate matters" and "settlement of estates of deceased persons" uses such words in their commonly accepted meaning, and does not contemplate jurisdiction over tort actions.—Howard v. Swift, 190 N.E. 102, 356 Ill. 80.

Suits to reach and apply

Equity jurisdiction conferred on probate court by statute, although not authorizing suits to reach and apply equitable assets, gives probate court equity powers such as those exercised in bills to reach and apply, as respects matters named in the statute.—Jones v. Jones, Mass., 7 N. E.2d 1015.

Renunciation beneficial to ward

Under governing statutes the probate court has equitable powers concerning renunciation of wills and questions arising therefrom, and hence, in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction over the estate of an incompetent surviving spouse it may direct the guardian ad litem or next friend to renounce a will, where it finds such renunciation beneficial to the incompetent's estate.—Davis v. Mather, 141 N.E. 209, 309 Ill. 284.

Alternative relief

Where administration of estate is not removed to court of equity, but remains in probate court, circuit court will either declare contract releasing interest valid, and set up an estoppel against party releasing interest, or will declare contract inequitable and refuse relief to complainant.—Collier v. Tatum, 160 So. 530, 230 Ala. 218.

Trusts. Although probate courts in some states have no power over trust estates,⁷⁴ yet, in many states they do possess certain powers with respect to trusts, the nature, extent, and exercise of which depend on, and are limited by, the terms of the constitutional or statutory grant of jurisdiction⁷⁵ which ordinarily does not extend to trusts inter vivos.⁷⁶ The jurisdiction of courts of probate with

Power equivalent to that of chancery court

Surrogate's court has equitable power with respect to decedents' estates equivalent to that of supreme court or court of chancery.—In re Proctor's Will, 284 N.Y.S. 675, 157 Misc. 708.

Matters not included within power

The court's equity powers are powers in respect of decedent's estate, and hence cannot be invoked in controversy relating to contract between life beneficiary and executor individually.—In re Matthewson's Will, 206 N.Y.S. 734, 210 App.Div. 572.

In accounting proceedings the surrogate's court has complete equitable jurisdiction.—In re Burr's Estate, 257 N.Y.S. 654, 143 Misc. 877, affirmed in re Burr's Will, 263 N.Y.S. 945, 239 App.Div. 774—In re Sewell's Estate, 216 N.Y.S. 331, 127 Misc. 202—In re Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 163 N.Y.S. 961, 99 Misc. 420, reversed on other grounds 168 N.Y.S. 952, 181 App.Div. 642, affirmed 122 N.E. 880, 225 N.Y. 666.

More particularly, the court has power, under such statutes

(1) To set aside compromise agreement adjusting contested probate proceeding, procured by fraud.—In re Frame's Estate, 219 N.Y.S. 759, 123 Misc. 788.

(2) To determine and enforce claims made by legatee's assignees and judgment creditors and receiver and bankruptcy trustee.—In re Carman, 12 N.Y.S.2d 162, 170 Misc. 638.

(3) To determine, in accounting proceedings, the validity of, and enforce, a contract to dispose of property by will.—Schley v. Donlin, 225 N.Y.S. 453, 131 Misc. 208.

Enforcement of will

Although deceased was under contractual obligation to make certain will, and afterward changed this will by codicil, the surrogate's court has no equity jurisdiction to enforce the will as originally executed, and the remedy is by suit in equity.—Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Brown, 189 N.Y.S. 678, 116 Misc. 134.

Effect of will creating trust

Although a county court, sitting in probate, has no power to administer trusts, yet, the fact that a will creates a trust does not deprive the court of its power to perform its ordinary probate functions in respect of the testator's estate which after being administered may be ordered into the hands of the trustee in accordance with the will, whereupon the parties may resort to a court of equity to administer the trust.—Park v. Baxter, 64 P.2d 721, 179 Okl. 75.

Limitations on jurisdiction

(1) It is only a trust created by will which vests in the county court any jurisdiction in probate over the trust or the trustee.—In re George's Estate, 274 N.W. 294, vacating mandate 270 N.W. 533, 225 Wis. 251—In re Richardson's Estate, 271 N.W. 56, 223 Wis. 447.

(2) Probate court's jurisdiction under statute defining its equity jurisdiction is confined to trusts created by written instrument.—Coffey v. Rady, 166 N.E. 833, 267 Mass. 301.

Termination of trust

(1) A probate court has been held without power to terminate an express trust before the expiration of the term for which it is created.

(3) But it has been held that the surrogate's court has jurisdiction, in a proper case, to determine validity of a transaction whereunder testator erected trust of preponderant respect to particular proceedings relating to trusts and trustees is considered in other titles of this work, particularly in the title Trusts § 386, also 65 C.J. p 892 note 4-p 894 note 26, the intention being to consider in this section only generally the jurisdiction of probate courts as to trusts.

§ 303. — Over Real and Personal Property and Title Thereto

- a. In general
- b. Determination of question of title

a. In General

Probate courts have only such powers over real and personal property as are conferred by constitutional and statutory provisions.

Probate courts have only such powers over real and personal property as are conferred by constitutional and statutory provisions.⁷⁷ Within the powers conferred their jurisdiction, as a general rule, covers primarily personal estate only and does not technically extend to real estate,⁷⁸ although they do possess certain powers in regard to real estate,⁷⁹ such as the power to order the sale of a decedent's realty in an appropriate case, see the C.J. S. title Executors and Administrators § 560, also 24 C.J. p 576 note 97-p 579 note 11.

In construing the powers of probate courts it has been held that such a court may determine rights to property so far as they depend on devolution, testate or intestate,⁸⁰ but it cannot determine rights to property left by a decedent which depend on contracts;⁸¹ neither can such a court determine adverse claims to property in the administrator's charge;⁸² adjudicate disputed property rights against an estate;⁸³ direct eviction of a defaulting purchaser of a decedent's realty;⁸⁴ compel on sum-proportion of his property within a few weeks of his death.—In re Hearn's Will, 285 N.Y.S. 935, 158 Misc. 370.

In Pennsylvania

(1) Trusts inter vivos were outside the jurisdiction of the orphans' court prior to the enactment of Act June 26, 1931, P.L. p 1384, 20 P.S. §§ 2241-2254, conferring on that court jurisdiction over trusts inter vivos.—In re Douglas' Estate, 154 A. 376, 303 Pa. 227—Kelly's Estate, 24 Pa.Dist. 509—Jones' Estate, 15 Pa.Dist. 30.

(2) This act, however, does not apply to a trust created for a temporary purpose, even though by written instrument, but only to a continuing trust requiring both administration and distribution.—In re Stief, 32 Pa.Dist. & Co. 282.

(3) The jurisdiction conferred by the act does not extend to trusts arising by operation of law.—In re Shaffer's Estate, 21 Pa.Dist. & Co. 90.

Undisputed property of decedents and wards

Probate jurisdiction is limited in subject matter, to the undisputed property of decedents and wards.—

Central Wisconsin Trust Co. v. Schumacher, Wis., 284 N.W. 562.

Effect of describing property in pleadings or orders

The mere inclusion of the description of particular property in pleadings or orders in probate proceedings cannot confer jurisdiction over such property on the probate court.—Spitzer v. Branning, 184 So. 770, 135 Fla. 49.

Homestead rights

(1) The widow's right of homestead, if any, in lands of which her husband died seized vests immediately on his death, and is not subject to an order of the probate court affecting her interest therein other than the mere finding and determination of her status as such widow.—Davis v. Davis, 199 N.W. 113, 112 Neb. 178.

(2) Probate court's jurisdiction as to proceedings for selection, setting apart, and protection of homestead rights see the C.J.S. title Homesteads § 279, also 29 C.J. p 1030 notes 47, 48.

dependent proceeding therefor⁹⁵ unless authorized to do so by statute.

Territorial jurisdiction. General rules as to territorial limits of jurisdiction, see supra § 91, apply to probate courts.⁹⁶ Accordingly, a probate court of a state other than that in which land is situated cannot make a decree directly affecting such land.⁹⁷

b. Determination of Question of Title

Ordinarily a probate court cannot determine a question of title to property unless such question arises collaterally as a necessary incident to the determination of other matters within the court's jurisdiction, although in some jurisdictions it may determine such a question as between a decedent's estate and the personal representative thereof claiming title in his individual capacity.

Ordinarily, a probate court cannot determine a question of title to property,⁹⁸ especially where the Construction of will

(1) A probate court may determine probate powers, possesses general powers sufficient to enable it to determine such a question.² In some,³ but not all,⁴ jurisdictions, however, a probate court may determine a question of title arising between the estate and the personal representative thereof claiming title in his individual capacity; and it has been held that it may determine claims of property as between those interested in the estate, although this authority only goes to the extent of determining their relative interests as derived from the estate, and not to an interest derived adversely thereto;⁵ and under some statutes conferring broad powers on probate courts, such courts may in a proper case determine questions of title to property.⁶

6. Surrogate Court Act § 40

(1) Under Surrogate Court Act § 40, as amended in 1921, authorizing the surrogate's court to administer justice in all matters relating to the affairs of decedents and to determine all questions, legal or equitable, arising between any and all persons properly before the court, as to any and all matters necessary to be determined to make a complete disposition of the matter by such order or decree as justice requires, the power of the surrogate's court to determine questions of title to personal property has been recognized in a number of cases.—In re Buckler, 237 N.Y.S. 242, 227 App.Div. 146.—Van Buren v. § 304. Ancillary or Incidental Jurisdiction

In the absence of statutory restrictions probate courts have such ancillary and incidental powers as are reasonably necessary to an effective exercise of the powers expressly conferred.

In accordance with the general rules as to ancillary and incidental jurisdiction of courts generally, see § 88 supra, probate courts, in the absence of express and specific restrictions to the contrary, have such ancillary and incidental powers as are reasonably necessary to an effective exercise of the powers expressly conferred.⁷ Accordingly, when a probate court has jurisdiction of the subject matter of a case, it has the power to hear and determine all questions of law and fact, the determination of which is ancillary to a proper judgment,⁸ and, while it retains jurisdiction over the subject matter, it has full power, on due notice to all parties, to make such orders as are necessary to the proper administration of the estate before it.⁹ Since the jurisdiction of probate courts is confined to particular subject matters, however, their powers as to ancillary or incidental questions must of necessity be exercised within certain limitations,¹⁰ and, obviously,

Questions as to estate assets and fiduciaries' conduct

In so far as incidental questions arising in an estate relate to the res of the assets or to the conduct of fiduciaries or their representatives in relation thereto, surrogates' courts have plenary authority to enable them completely to perform the func-

according to the decisions of the various courts, powers not of necessity incidental to the exercise of any of the powers specifically granted to probate courts cannot be exercised.¹¹

2. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE

§ 305. In General

While procedure in probate courts must strictly conform to controlling statutes if any, such courts may, in the absence of such controlling statutes, follow chancery, common-law or code practice, as the case may be, not being trammelled by technical forms. Probate proceedings are in the nature of proceedings in rem.

The term "probate proceeding" as used in a probate code is a general designation of the actions and proceedings whereby the law is administered upon the various subjects within probate jurisdiction.¹² Proceedings in a probate court are in the nature of proceedings in rem¹³ and have been said not to be actions at law.¹⁴

The manner of the exercise of their jurisdiction by probate and similar courts may be, and frequently is, controlled by statute, which must be strictly followed;¹⁵ and it has been held that, since probate courts, as shown supra § 298, are wholly creatures of the legislature and tribunals of special and limited jurisdiction only, jurisdiction does not attach unless the preliminary requisites and the course of proceedings prescribed by law are complied with.¹⁶ The proper tribunal to determine its jurisdiction in the first instance is the probate court itself.¹⁷ The court should not decline to take cognizance of a particular matter within its jurisdiction because the tions for which they were instituted, but further accessions to surrogates' jurisdiction are invasions of the natural functions of courts of general jurisdiction.—In re Stemmler's Estate, 12 N.Y.S.2d 478, 171 Misc. 318.

Elements of jurisdiction

Proceedings in probate are statutory, and it is necessary to their validity that the court have jurisdiction of the subject-matter, that is, the estate of deceased, and also of the question which its judgment assumes to decide.—Swinehart v. Turner, 224 P. 74, 38 Idaho 602.

In Pennsylvania, where there arises a substantial dispute of a fact or facts upon which the question of the jurisdiction of the orphans' court depends, an issue becomes a matter of right; but where all the facts upon which the question of jurisdiction depends are not in dispute, the question becomes one of law, solely, to be decided in limine.—In re Welch's Estate, 32 Pa.Dist. & Co. 231.

statute does not provide for the mode of exercising jurisdiction in such cases.¹⁸

In the absence of controlling statute to the contrary, general principles of practice applicable in other civil actions apply in probate proceedings;¹⁹ and in such cases it has been considered proper for courts of probate to proceed according to the practice of chancery²⁰ or ecclesiastical²¹ courts, or according to the course of the common law;²² and it has also been said in practice, when not otherwise provided, that such courts may borrow from the code,²³ and that, where a general power is given, but the mode of its exercise is not prescribed, the procedure is to be regulated by the court in the exercise of its sound discretion.²⁴

Such courts are not trammelled by strict forms of procedure;²⁵ but nevertheless their proceedings should, in a general way, conform to the practice in the other courts of record of the state.²⁶

Where courts having jurisdiction of other matters are vested with probate jurisdiction, they should proceed in probate matters according to the practice of the probate courts.²⁷

Joinder of proceedings. A court of probate jurisdiction has refused to give its sanction to the practice of attempting to combine in one application various proceedings, independent of each other, which are each specifically regulated by statute.²⁸

a. Parties

General equity rules as to parties and intervention obtain in probate courts in some states, but not in others.

According to one view, the rule of equity that all parties having an interest in the subject matter of the litigation must be made parties is inapplicable in a probate proceeding, which is purely statutory.²⁹ So it has been held that statutory provisions as to the introduction of new parties to a pending suit, and proceedings upon the transfer of the interest of a party do not apply to probate courts;³⁰ and that a probate court cannot permit any one to intervene in an issue granted.³¹ On the other hand, it has been held that the rule in equity applying to joinder or nonjoinder of parties obtains in prerogative

b. Process

No notice to parties is necessary unless required by statute, and even when required it may be waived.

Proceedings in a probate court being, as shown supra § 305, in the nature of proceedings in rem, no notice to parties is necessary unless required by statute.³⁵ Notice and opportunity to be heard is a matter of legislative favor and not essential to the jurisdiction of the court.³⁶ Where the giving of notice is directed by statute, however, such notice calls the entire world before the court which thereby gains jurisdiction over the estate and over all persons for the purpose of determining their rights therein.³⁷ The giving of the required statutory notice which serves the purpose of summons in ordinary actions, is waived by the appearance of the parties, and their participation in the proceedings.³⁸ A statute authorizing service by mail in civil actions is inapplicable to proceedings in the probate court,³⁹ but where the probate court requires a written notice and does not prescribe how it shall be served, service by mail is good if the notice is actually received by the addressee.⁴⁰ Where actual service of summons issued from a probate court is made, but the return of service is insufficient and does not show good service, it is proper to allow an amendment.⁴¹ Under statutes vesting the court with discretion as to the manner of service on a nonresident, a service made pursuant to an order in strict accord with the statute confers jurisdiction upon the court.⁴² The proceedings of a probate court are presumed to have been regular, and, where the order shows that due notice was given to interested parties, it will be presumed that infant heirs received proper notice, and that the court had proper jurisdiction.⁴³

a. Pleading

Technical strictness in pleading is not indispensable in probate court although the petition on which jurisdiction is based must show the authority of the court.

While general rules of pleading applicable to other civil actions may be applied in probate proceedings in the absence of statute specifically providing otherwise,⁴⁴ technical strictness in pleading in probate court is not indispensable,⁴⁵ and probate courts will not require the same strictness in pleadings as is required in a court of chancery, unless chancery proceedings are adopted;⁴⁶ nor are the strict rules of common-law pleading governing in other civil courts necessary in probate proceedings.⁴⁷ Nevertheless, a petition to a probate court is the foundation on which to base its jurisdiction, and it must state facts to show authority and power of the court to make the decree prayed for;⁴⁸ and general jurisdiction of the probate court attaches at once upon the presentation to it of a proper petition by some person entitled to take such action.⁴⁹ In some states no formal⁵⁰ or written⁵¹ pleadings are required in such courts, but where defendant does file an answer it should contain all defenses relied upon,⁵² and, where the parties submit a matter on pleadings, the court may properly dispose of the questions thus presented.⁵³ A petitioner desiring to controvert the allegations of an answer to his petition should file a replication thereto,⁵⁴ and should not be deprived of an opportunity to support his petition by evidence nor be bound by the allegations of the answer.⁵⁵

In some states pleadings in probate are subject to motions for more specific statement,⁵⁶ and to demurrer,⁵⁷ but in others there is no such thing as a demurrer in the probate court,⁵⁸ and a pleading in the form of a demurrer may be treated as an answer, or as an objection to the jurisdiction of the court, or as an exception to the sufficiency of the petition.⁵⁹ Although defendant's failure to plead is regarded as a tender of the general issue according to one practice,⁶⁰ on failure to controvert the petition and supporting affidavit by answer or otherwise, the facts therein must be taken as true under some statutes,⁶¹ and, in an accounting, determination of a motion by a respondent to dismiss a defense set up in the answer of an adverse respondent necessarily involves the admission of all the allegations of the original petition as far as not denied by the answer, and all the allegations of the answer.⁶² A general denial does not satisfy the requirements of a probate court equity rule requiring full, direct, and specific answer to every material allegation in the petition.⁶³ Under a statute requiring every proceeding in the surrogate's court to be commenced by the filing of a petition, a provision of an answer seeking affirmative relief cannot be considered for such purpose.⁶⁴ Exercise of the statutory right of petitioner's attorney to verify the petition is not encouraged.⁶⁵

Where jurisdictional allegations are sufficient the court has authority, at any stage to the close of the pleadings, to allow amendment of merely formally incorrect pleading.⁶⁶

In Pennsylvania there is no such thing in the orphans' court as a case stated.⁶⁷

b. Evidence

Rules of evidence applied in other tribunals apply in probate courts where relevant to the proceedings.

The probate court should conform its rules of evidence to those which are applied in other tribunals of the state,⁶⁸ although it has been said that technical common-law rules of evidence have little relation to probate proceedings.⁶⁹ Incompetent evidence should be excluded.⁷⁰ No pleading setting forth any interest in the property being required, if such pleading be filed it in no way fixes the burden of proof upon claimant.⁷¹

§ 308. Trial or Reference, Rehearing and New Trial

- a. Trial
- b. References
- c. Rehearing or new trial

a. Trial

- (1) In general
- (2) Questions of law and fact

(1) In General

Trial procedure in probate court is governed by the requirements of the statutes in the particular jurisdiction.

Compliance with statutes requiring notice of setting of trial is essential to the jurisdiction of the probate court to proceed therewith.⁷² A statute, applicable to probate courts, providing that, unless postponed or transferred to another court the trial of an action in a justice's court must commence at the expiration of one hour from the time specified in the summons for defendant's appearance, and must be continued without adjournment for more than twenty-four hours until all the issues are disposed of, does not ipso facto render a judgment of the probate court void for want of jurisdiction because of the fact that proofs are not made or judgment entered on the return day named in the summons.⁷³ Jurisdiction is not defeated by a hearing subsequent to the day fixed therefor had without an order of adjournment.⁷⁴ A statute requiring testimony to be read to witnesses before signing has been held to relate to testimony taken before examiners in chancery, and to have no application to proceedings in a probate court.⁷⁵ It has been held that a court of probate may dismiss actions;⁷⁶ but it will not grant a motion for summary judgment on the pleadings where there are contested issues of fact, even though that practice may be permissible.⁷⁷ Even though defendant fails to appear at the time fixed for trial, where an issue of fact is tendered it is improper to enter a judgment for plaintiff, without requiring the submission of evidence tending to sustain his complaint.⁷⁸

Where the case is heard by an auditing judge, who is a representative of the court, he should generally pass upon the competency of witnesses and the admissibility of evidence rather than certify such questions to the court,⁷⁹ and his findings of fact will not be disturbed except for manifest error.⁸⁰ The auditing judge will not, however, pass on a plan proposed by the executor and trustee for carrying into effect a charitable bequest.⁸¹ Objections and exceptions cannot be taken in the probate court to the report of an auditor.⁸² When exceptions to the report of a master are filed the master should consider each exception seriatim, group similar ones, and concisely state to the court why he believes each exception is not well founded.⁸³

(2) Questions of Law and Fact

Issues of law are determined by the court, but the practice on determination of fact questions differs in different states, such questions being variously decided by the judge, by a jury in the probate court, or by a jury in a court of law.

In a civil action in the probate court in which defendant appears and presents issues of law, the court must determine the issues so presented.⁸⁴ Ordinarily, all proper issues of fact joined in probate proceedings like any civil action must be determined;⁸⁵ and the court may pass upon evidence, either under the general rules of common law or of those prescribed by statute.⁸⁶

In some states the court of probate may judge the facts as a court,⁸⁷ and pass upon requests to find questions of law or fact,⁸⁸ it being held in some jurisdictions that he may make findings of fact and conclusions of law,⁸⁹ but is not required to do so,⁹⁰ and in others that the court should adopt appropriate findings respecting issues of fact,⁹¹ and where issues of law and of fact are properly presented the judge should pass upon them in the order presented.⁹²

In some jurisdictions provision is made for the disposition of controverted questions of fact by a jury in that court,⁹³ and in some cases the jury, as in equity proceedings, acts merely in an advisory capacity,⁹⁴ the inquisition with a jury not being a trial at law.⁹⁵ The surrogate as a judicial officer possesses the same inherent power as the justices of other courts to comment on the testimony or the conduct of a party, a witness, or an attorney appearing before him.⁹⁶

Under the practice in some states the probate court may direct or award an issue,⁹⁷ and in proper cases may be required to grant relevant, material, and correctly drawn issues when presented.⁹⁸ Statutes authorizing the orphans' court to direct plenary proceedings in all cases of controversy in court and to make up and send to a court of law issues in plenary proceedings are of general application and apply in all cases of controversy in the jurisdiction of the orphans' courts, for which provision has not been otherwise made.⁹⁹ To warrant submission the pleadings must contain allegations which afford a sufficient basis to disclose the affirmation and denial of a material and relevant fact,¹ an "issue" within the rule being a single, certain, and material point issuing out of the allegations of the pleadings between the adverse parties;² and it is only in cases where the probate court has jurisdiction to determine the matter that it is authorized to send issues of fact to a court of law to be tried.³ An issue will not be awarded unless evidence raises a controlling disputable question of fact.⁴ The form of an issue is not required to state all the matters alleged in the pleadings,⁵ but should contain only a clear statement of the question of fact made by the plead-

Framing issues

(1) Under Gen.L. c 215 § 16, power of probate court to frame issues is as broad only as that previously vested in supreme judicial court; and, generally, issues are framed for trial to jury only in such cases in probate court as involve probate of wills.—Fuller v. Sylvia, 133 N.E. 384, 240 Mass. 49.

(2) Furthermore there should be veritable controversy, and facts presented on which to found hope for result favorable to moving party, and unless such condition appears, refusal to frame issues will not be ings,⁶ and objections thereto should be made to the petition for the issue.⁷ The trial court, with respect to trial of issues which have been sent to it, has a limited statutory jurisdiction as a court ancillary to the orphans' court, and can not review the proceedings of that court with respect to the framing of the issues nor consider the propriety or sufficiency of the pleadings upon which the issues were founded,⁸ nor can the trial court disturb or alter the issue framed by the orphans' court;⁹ questions as to the form of issues or to the propriety or regularity of the proceeding in which issues were framed, or the sufficiency of pleadings to support the issues, can be raised only by appealing from the order transmitting the issues.¹⁰ The orphans' court is bound to accept the conclusions of the jury as final,¹¹ and to make them effective by proper orders or decrees.¹²

Separate trial of issues. A statute authorizing courts of record to try some issues separately before the others has been held applicable to courts of probate jurisdiction.¹³

b. References

A reference may be awarded in certain cases, and the referee has the right to correct errors in his report.

A surrogate has been held to have no authority to refer part of an account and objections thereto to a referee.¹⁴ However, on an application by an attorney for an order determining and enforcing his alleged lien, a surrogate has been held authorized to appoint a referee to take testimony and to report as to the value of services rendered by the attorney to a deceased administrator prior to the issuance of letters of administration;¹⁵ and a reference will be ordered where a beneficiary's allegations of fraud in procuring a compromise agreement adjusting claims in a contested probate proceeding are denied.¹⁶ The referee has the right to file an amended report correcting an error in overlooking evidence, his report not being the decision of the court.¹⁷

c. Rehearing or New Trial

On a proper showing there may be a rehearing or new trial when authorized by statute.

Statutes regulating the granting of new trials or rehearings in the court of general jurisdiction are inapplicable to proceedings in probate court,¹⁸ although they may be made applicable by other statutes.¹⁹ The power of the court to grant a rehearing is limited to the causes enumerated in the controlling statute²⁰ and must be exercised within the time prescribed thereby.²¹ Where there is no express statutory limitation as to the time in which a defeated party may ask the court to review its action, the analogous limitation of the right of appeal will govern.²² A statute authorizing a surrogate to grant a new trial or a new hearing for fraud, newly discovered evidence, or other sufficient cause, limits the power to such causes, and the surrogate is without authority to grant a motion ex gratia;²³ and an order granting such new trial cannot be sustained where no case has been made and it does not appear that the motion was heard upon the pleadings and affidavits by consent.²⁴ To warrant a rehearing or new trial because of newly discovered evidence it must appear that the evidence was discovered since the trial, and could not, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, have been obtained and used upon the trial,²⁵ and that its character is such that it would probably have changed the result if submitted upon the trial;²⁶ and an application by the state comptroller for a new trial to contest the matter of decedent's residence must show by affidavits that the individual who was state comptroller at the time of trial did not have knowledge of the alleged newly discovered facts concerning the domicile of deceased.²⁷ An application, based upon an unverified statement of the state comptroller, by his counsel, will not be considered.²⁸ The authority of probate courts to grant rehearings has been held not to extend to the granting of rehearings after decrees in drainage proceedings,²⁹ and it has been decided that a surrogate cannot grant a reargument of questions finally determined and disposed of by his predecessor.³⁰ A judge, after findings of fact have been filed and a final decree entered, is not bound to reopen the hearing for reception of evidence on application of one who did not appear at the hearing, the entry of the final decree ending the jurisdiction of the probate court, except on a bill of review, save in extreme instances.³¹

§ 309. Judgments and Orders

- a. In general
- b. Enforcement
- c. Opening, amendment, or vacation
- d. Review

a. In General

Probate courts are empowered to make orders and judgments necessary to effectuate their jurisdiction. Generally these should be in writing, and mere irregularities will not invalidate them, nor are they subject to collateral attack, although in proper cases they are liable to direct attack.

Generally speaking, the final conclusion of a probate court is a judgment,³² but in some jurisdictions

it is termed a decree, not a judgment.³³ A decree is the judgment of the court.³⁴

Probate and like courts may make the necessary orders to effectuate their jurisdiction.³⁵ An order or decree of a probate court need not recite the existence of the jurisdictional facts,³⁶ nor need it be drawn up at length during the session;³⁷ but it should be in writing³⁸ and signed by the judge,³⁹ although in the absence of statute⁴⁰ a written decision as distinguished from a final order or judgment, is not required.⁴¹ Probate courts can render judgments nunc pro tunc.⁴² Whether an ordinary's judgment is that of a court of ordinary or of the ordinary acting in a ministerial capacity is determinable by the act of the ordinary.⁴³

Mere irregularities or failure in procedural matters will not invalidate judgments in probate matters;⁴⁴ but a judgment is void on its face where the docket of the court shows insufficient notice of setting of case for trial.⁴⁵ So a judgment entered by default after timely oral answers by defendant which the judge failed to enter in his docket, as required by statute, is premature and void;⁴⁶ and an order made without the filing of a petition respecting a matter within the jurisdiction of the court has also been held void.⁴⁷ The court will not be held to have acted in excess of its jurisdiction, however, unless it clearly appears that it entered an unauthorized decree.⁴⁸ A statute providing that, where there is no contest, the hearing in the district court of a matter of probate may be had at any place within the judicial district to which the county in which the business is pending belongs does not render void for want of jurisdiction an order entered by consent within the judicial district, although not within the county, in which the probate proceedings were pending.⁴⁹

Decrees of probate courts in matters of probate, within the authority conferred upon them by law, are, when not appealed from, conclusive,⁵⁰ and entitled to like presumptions as are accorded judgments of a court of general jurisdiction.⁵¹ Such decrees are binding on common-law courts,⁵² and cannot be set aside in equity, even for fraud.⁵³ They import absolute verity;⁵⁴ and in accordance with the rule stated in the C.J.S. title Judgments § 407, also 34 C.J. p. 518 note 14, probate proceedings and the orders and decrees of courts of probate jurisdiction are not subject to collateral attack.⁵⁵ However, orders and decrees made in probate occupy no different status from orders and judgments in civil actions as respects the power of an equity court to set aside a judgment or order.⁵⁶ Where there is any defect in the constructive notice to persons interested in the estate to appear, and parties interested fail to receive such constructive notice, all subsequent action of the court based thereon is subject to attack either in that or in a later equitable proceeding.⁵⁷ It has also been said that, until an estate is completely administered, any previous order entered therein may be directly attacked in the probate court when application is made for another order which involves a further step in the administration;⁵⁸ but this rule has been held inapplicable as to prior intermediary appealable orders which are final unless appealed from.⁵⁹ A proceeding to set aside a voidable final decree on the entire proceedings is a new proceeding by direct attack⁶⁰ whether brought in equity or addressed to the probate court.⁶¹

b. Enforcement

Probate courts may enforce their judgments by appropriate process.

Probate courts may enforce their judgments by execution or other appropriate process;⁶² but it has been held that they have no power to inflict a fine and then commit under a statute giving power to enforce all lawful orders, processes, etc., by attachment of the person.⁶³ A statute authorizing an execution to enforce a judgment should be confined to formal trials where issues are joined.⁶⁴

c. Opening, Amendment, or Vacation

On proper notice and for good cause a court of probate may amend, correct, open or vacate its orders or judgments, provided the proceeding is timely taken.

or correct,⁶⁵ or open or vacate,⁶⁶ its judgments or orders. If any time is prescribed therefor by statute, this power must be exercised within that time;⁶⁷ and the power does not as a rule exist after the expiration of the term at which the judgment or order was rendered or made,⁶⁸ except with respect to the correction of purely clerical errors,⁶⁹ or in cases of fraud⁷⁰ or accident or mistake,⁷¹ nor, in the absence of fraud or mistake, after expiration of the time for appeal.⁷² However, a probate court has authority, at a subsequent term to which a matter has been continued, to enter an order modifying its original order entered at the prior term.⁷³ Even though terms of the probate court have been abolished by statute, an application to set aside an order of such court must be made within a reasonable time,⁷⁴ which it has been considered should not exceed six months.⁷⁵ In proceedings involving the estate of a minor, the court may, upon proper notice and for good cause, modify or vacate any order at any time prior to the majority of the minor.⁷⁶

Independent remedy

The statute authorizing a claimant whose claim against an estate is disallowed to sue in the circuit court is an independent remedy, and does not affect the right to apply to the county court to have an order disallowing his claim set aside.—In re Stroup's Estate, 166 N.W. 155, 40 S.D. 37.

Validity and construction of statute

Statute authorizing surrogates to open, vacate, or modify decree or order made in their court or grant new trial was held not unconstitutional and not to conflict with statute providing that only orphans' court shall hear and decide disputes respecting existence of will; nor was such statute repealed by subsequent enactment.—In re Kellner's Estate, 165 A. 585, 11 N.J.Misc. 201.

The authority of the court rests on clear proof that the decree was procured by accident or mistake or by fraud.⁷⁷ A statute authorizing the surrogate to open, vacate, modify, or set aside a decree for fraud, newly discovered evidence, clerical error, or other sufficient cause inferentially denies such power in other cases,⁷⁸ and the surrogate has no power to vacate or modify the decree for judicial error or error of law,⁷⁹ the words "other sufficient cause" meaning cause ejusdem generis,⁸⁰ but the power exists in the specified cases⁸¹ or where jurisdiction has been mistakenly assumed,⁸² and the surrogate has jurisdiction to reopen or modify in the interests of justice.⁸³ The fraud or newly discovered evidence must, however, relate to the act of probate and not the existence of the will.⁸⁴ Statutes relating to relief from default judgments do not apply where defendant resists claims based thereon on the ground that such judgments were prematurely entered.⁸⁵

The power of the probate court to vacate or modify a decree must be exercised in the same manner as a court of record and of general jurisdiction exercises the same power.⁸⁶ A party interested in having the decree stand should have the right to contest allegations of grounds for revoking it,⁸⁷ and the court has no authority to vacate the order or decree without notice to the interested parties,⁸⁸ but such notice need not be served upon persons who will be affected by the order but who have not appeared in the probate proceeding.⁸⁹ In order to be entitled to the relief, it has been held that applicant must demonstrate the merits of his cause.⁹⁰ A petition to open the decree is addressed to the sound discretion of the court,⁹¹ and decrees should not be vacated without careful consideration,⁹² but in vacating a decree the judge can draw on his personal knowledge⁹³ or obtain information from any source in ascertaining the facts on which to base his action.⁹⁴

The court has power to allow a review of its decree.

The probate court being, as shown supra § 302, within its jurisdiction, a court of equity, it has inherent power to allow a bill of review.⁹⁵ The

§ 310. Records

The probate court should keep proper records of the disposition of matters by it, correcting them if incorrect.

The probate court speaks only by record,¹ and an order of the court in a guardianship matter has been held to be void unless entered on the minutes.² The court should keep clear and accurate records of the disposition of matters by it,³ it being the duty of the clerk to record the orders and decrees as of the date that they are made.⁴ A proper record in a probate proceeding should show that witnesses were sworn, and their names,⁵ but the use of a seal by a probate court in entering of record its orders and decrees is not essential to their validity.⁶ Where orders and proceedings of a probate court were omitted from the minutes, the court has power to order that they be entered nunc pro tunc with the same effect as though entered in the first place,⁷ and other records, if incorrect, may be corrected by the court.⁸ For this purpose a bill of review may be allowed,⁹ but only in accordance with the general principles governing such bills in ordinary equity practice.¹⁰ On an application to the surrogate to sign the record of business left incomplete by his predecessor, it is proper to require proof by affidavit or otherwise of the facts, and to recite in the record the mode in which the record was completed.¹¹

IX. COURTS OF APPELLATE JURISDICTION

A. IN GENERAL

§ 311. Nature and Source of Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of particular appellate courts depends upon the applicable constitutional or statutory provisions, and their principal functions include the exercise of supervision over subordinate courts and the settlement of the law, carefully abstaining from exercising nonjudicial powers.

Nature and grounds of appellate jurisdiction generally see Appeal and Error §§ 39-45.

The jurisdiction of particular appellate courts depends upon the terms of the constitutional or statutory provisions applicable thereto;¹² but, in accordance with the general principles stated supra §§ 127, 129, the legislature can neither confer on an appellate court jurisdiction which is not authorized, either expressly or impliedly, by the constitution,¹³ nor, on the other hand, deprive an appellate court of jurisdiction which is given to it by the constitution.¹⁴ It follows that, even though a statute confers jurisdiction over an appeal, such jurisdiction cannot be taken if the statute is unconstitutional.¹⁵ In some cases appellate jurisdiction may depend upon the nature of the cause of action,¹⁶ or of the question as to which a determination is sought.¹⁷ Although, as shown infra §§ 314-485, appellate courts are very generally invested with original jurisdiction in certain matters, and have certain jurisdiction incidental or ancillary to their appellate powers, the principal functions of such courts include the exercise of supervision over the subordinate courts, and the correction of errors which the latter courts have committed,¹⁸ and the duty uniformly to settle the law for the entire state and finally to determine its principles.¹⁹ They should carefully abstain from exercising any power that is not strictly judicial in its character,²⁰ and constitutional language conferring powers on an appellate court should be construed as intended to include only those powers consistent with the discharge of the inherent judicial functions of the court.²¹ When a litigant does not by appeal proceedings complain of an adjudication by the lower court, an appellate court cannot, on its own motion, create an appeal, divesting the lower court of power to act or destroying the effect of its adjudication.²² Where a constitutional amendment divides the supreme court of a state into two divisions with concurrent jurisdiction in civil cases, and gives one of such divisions exclusive jurisdiction in criminal cases, the supreme court has no superintending control over a division, as such division cannot be said to be inferior to the court within the meaning of a constitutional provision, giving the supreme court superintending control over all inferior courts.²³ As stated in Appeal and Error § 45, where an appellate court is one of last resort, it is the exclusive judge of its own jurisdiction. The supreme court of a state may properly take jurisdiction of a collateral attack of the constitutionality of a statute pursuant to which some²⁴ or all²⁵ of its members hold office.

§ 312. Manner of Exercise of Jurisdiction

Appellate courts must exercise their power in a constitutional manner.

The supreme court must exercise directly conferred power in a constitutional manner,²⁶ even though no rule of procedure applicable to the particular case is prescribed by statute.²⁷ While the supervisory powers of an appellate court are usually called into exercise by an appeal or writ of error, bill of review, or writ of certiorari, it has been held that a general supervisory control conferred by the constitution is a distinct power, and may be exercised to control an inferior court with respect to an act from which no appeal would lie, and for which the writs appertaining to the appellate jurisdiction furnish no remedy,²⁸ although it will not be exercised when other and ordinary remedies are sufficient, or except in case of an exigency of such an extreme nature as obviously should justify the interposition of the power.²⁹ Thus, even in cases in which an appellate court has original but concurrent jurisdiction with an inferior court, it is only in cases of more than ordinary magnitude or importance,³⁰ or when some good reason is shown for not making the application to the inferior court for the writ,³¹ that application for mandamus may be made to the appellate court; and, although the appellate court has original jurisdiction, it will not entertain an application for mandamus where there is an adequate remedy by application for the writ,³² or for other relief,³³ to a court of inferior jurisdiction, especially in case of private rights where there is an accumulation of work in the appellate court,³⁴ or where there are questions of fact to be tried.³⁵

§ 313. Ancillary or Incidental Jurisdiction

An appellate court has such ancillary or incidental powers as are necessary to the proper exercise of its jurisdiction.

As a general rule an appellate court has such ancillary or incidental powers as are necessary to the proper exercise of its appellate jurisdiction;³⁶ and where such court exercises original jurisdiction it has the same ancillary or incidental powers as would be possessed by a court which was exclusively or primarily one of original jurisdiction.³⁷

However, a court which would not have original jurisdiction of the subject matter of a cross petition or answer, if it were contained in a petition, does not have such jurisdiction because contained in an answer or cross petition filed in response to a petition containing a cause of action the subject matter of which is within the court's original jurisdiction.³⁸

B. APPELLATE COURTS OF PARTICULAR STATES

§ 314. Alabama

Appellate jurisdiction in the state of Alabama is vested in the supreme court, court of appeals, and circuit courts, whose respective powers are considered in detail infra §§ 315-317.

§ 315. — Supreme Court

The supreme court of Alabama has appellate jurisdiction and supervisory control over inferior courts which will be exercised in case of usurpation or abuse of jurisdiction; and the justices may also be called upon for advisory opinions on important constitutional questions.

The jurisdiction and powers of the supreme court of Alabama are defined in the constitution. Except in cases otherwise directed, the court has appellate jurisdiction only,³⁹ under such restrictions and regulations not repugnant to the constitution, as may from time to time be prescribed by law.⁴⁰ The supreme court has also power to issue such remedial and original writs as may be necessary to give it a general superintendence and control of inferior jurisdictions;⁴¹ and it is the clear duty of the court to exercise its supervisory

(1) Appellate courts are impliedly prohibited from exercising original jurisdiction of mandamus proceedings with relation to matters of power whenever it appears that an inferior court is guilty of usurpation or abuse of jurisdiction.⁴² The supreme court is not authorized to direct, originally, a transfer from the law to the equity docket of the circuit court of a case in which only equity may afford appropriate relief, under a statute contemplating original action in the trial court, subject to review.⁴³ On appeal from a judgment at law the supreme court may not try the matter de novo but may only affirm or reverse the judgment.⁴⁴

Advisory opinions. The statute providing for advisory opinions on important constitutional questions, which itself is not invalid as an encroachment of one department upon the powers of another, contemplates merely advisory opinions of the individual justices, not of the court, binding neither the justices nor the department or officer requesting the opinion,⁴⁵ and the propriety of answering requests for advisory opinions is for the determination of the justices, each for himself.⁴⁶ The justices will decline to answer a legislative inquiry whether a proposed act conflicts with any constitutional provision, such inquiry being too broad and indefinite.⁴⁷ which any other court has jurisdiction.—Lewis v. Gerald, 181 So. 306, 236 Ala. 91, followed in Gerald v. Lewis, 181 So. 309, 236 Ala. 103—15 C.J. p 1026 note 48 [c], [d]—38 C.J. p 827 note 1.

(2) Supreme court exercises limited review by mandamus of interlocutory rulings of inferior courts, when no other review is available, but otherwise applicant for mandamus must show clear legal right to performance of specific duty it is imperative upon respondent to perform; hence mandamus does not lie to require court of appeals to pronounce judgment and opinion upon all assignments of error argued and urged upon court of appeals in original submission of case.—Blackwood v. Maryland Casualty Co., 150 So. 180, 227 Ala. 343, denying certiorari 150 So. 179, 25 Ala.App. 308.

(3) Supreme court could entertain motion for mandamus for the annulment of unappealable judgment or decree on an appeal from the judgment or decree, where motion was timely made and the court had an authentic transcript of the record of the proceedings.—Castleberry v. Castleberry, 176 So. 87, 235 Ala. 266.—Ex parte McDermott, 141 So. 659, 224 Ala. 684.

(4) But the court will not consider petition for mandamus where full record acted on by trial court was not before it.—Ex parte Moore, 164 So. 210, 281 Ala. 209.

(5) Nor will a writ be granted when motion is not presented on transcript paper in suitable form for binding as required by Supreme Court Rules, rule 36.—Ex parte Wood, 110 So. 409, 215 Ala. 280.—Aust v. Sumter Farm & Stock Co., 96 So. 872, 209 Ala. 669.

(6) Court might not consider purported copy of pleadings, decree of reference, testimony, and report of register without certificate of register that it is copy in absence of agreement, and the fact that parties admit that exceptions were filed and overruled is insufficient, where record does not show them or show reference to evidence.—Ex parte Wood, supra.

Prohibition

The state, with the attorney general as relator, may by petition for prohibition invoke the supervisory powers of the supreme court over inferior courts; and such inferior courts need not be first moved to avoid the subject of complaint.—Ex parte State, 75 So. 327, 200 Ala. 15.

§ 316. — Court of Appeals

The court of appeals in Alabama has final appellate jurisdiction in certain cases enumerated in the governing statute and supervisory control over inferior courts, but it has no power to declare a statute unconstitutional, and is controlled by answers to questions certified by it to the supreme court.

The jurisdiction of the court of appeals is defined in the statute creating and establishing the court. Its prerogative is appellate only,⁴⁸ but, except as to actions involving the title to or possession of land,⁴⁹ it has final appellate jurisdiction, coextensive with the state, of all suits at law, where the amount involved, exclusive of interest and costs, does not exceed one thousand dollars; and the "amount involved" in actions other than detinue is deemed to be the amount recovered other than costs where there is a recovery, but the amount claimed where there is no recovery.⁵⁰ Furthermore the court has final appellate jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings,⁵¹ and is also given original jurisdiction in the issuance of writs of quo warranto and mandamus with relation to matters in which it has appellate jurisdiction, and may issue such remedial and original writs as are necessary to give it a general superintendence and control of jurisdiction

47. Ala.—In re Opinions of the Justices, 145 So. 481—In re Opinion of the Justices, 113 So. 584, 216 Ala. 469.

48. Ala.—Yielding v. State, 125 So. 203, 23 Ala.App. 335.

49. Appeal in will contest proceeding involving, incidentally, title to land, is not within jurisdiction of court of appeals, and hence automatically transferable to supreme court, under statute.—Gilliland v. Dobbs, 174 So. 784, 234 Ala. 364.

Suit for statutory penalty for cutting trees and for damages for trespass quare clausum, fregit involved the title to or possession of land, and the court of appeals had no jurisdiction, so that its judgment was coram non iudice.—Holloway v. Henderson Lumber Co., 82 So. 344, 203 Ala. 246, quashing 81 So. 867, 17 Ala. App. 89.

50. Effect of set-off

Court of appeals had jurisdiction of appeal from judgment for six hundred thirty-six dollars and ninety-five cents in action to recover license tax which had been improperly collected, notwithstanding amount involved including defendant's plea of set-off would have been over one thousand dollars.—City of Prichard v. Harold, 186 So. 504, 237 Ala. 277, denying certiorari 186 So. 499, 28 Ala.App. 235.

51. Ala.—Cross v. Willis, 182 So. 480, 28 Ala.App. 271.

inferior to it and in matters over which it has final appellate jurisdiction.⁵² Its jurisdiction in cases of felony, where the punishment has been fixed at twenty years or under, does not authorize it to pass on a motion to affirm on a certificate of appeal showing that defendant was convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.⁵³ Under the express requirement that, before striking down any statute not previously nullified by the supreme court, the question as to its validity must be submitted to the supreme court, the court of appeals is without power to declare a statute unconstitutional,⁵⁴ but it is only where the court of appeals considers a statute unconstitutional, and not when it holds the statute constitutional, that it is required to certify the question for determination by the supreme court.⁵⁵ When the supreme court decides the question and certifies its response thereto to the court of appeals, it is within the jurisdiction of the latter to proceed to final judgment in the cause under the statute as construed by the supreme court.⁵⁶ The supreme court's response to any question certified to it by the court of appeals is controlling and conclusive on the latter court,⁵⁷ and becomes the decision of the court on such question.⁵⁸ Where there is a supreme court decision on a certain point, the court of appeals should follow it, in accordance with the rule stated supra § 197, and should not certify the case to the supreme court so as to give it an opportunity to change its decision.⁵⁹

§ 317. — Circuit Courts

Circuit courts in Alabama have appellate jurisdiction of civil actions cognizable before a justice of the peace, and, subject to some limitations, general superintendence over all inferior jurisdictions.

The circuit courts have been given appellate jurisdiction of all civil actions cognizable before a justice of the peace, and in such other cases as may be provided by law, and may exercise a general superintendence over all inferior jurisdictions.⁶⁰ It has no power, however, to mandamus a probate judge of a county in another judicial district,⁶¹ and cannot issue a supersedeas to an execution of the probate court although it has power to issue a mandamus to it.⁶²

§ 318. Arizona

Under the Arizona constitution, the supreme court has certain original jurisdiction as well as appellate and revisory powers.

The jurisdiction and powers of the supreme court of Arizona are defined in the state constitution. The court has original jurisdiction to issue writs of habeas corpus and of quo warranto and mandamus as to all state officers;⁶³ but it has no original jurisdiction to fix the statutory attorney's fees of the industrial commission when recovering an insurance premium from an employer.⁶⁴ It has appellate jurisdiction in all actions and proceedings,⁶⁵ except that its appellate jurisdiction does not extend to civil actions at law for the recovery of money or personal property, where the original amount in controversy, or the value of the property, does not exceed the sum of two hundred dollars,⁶⁶ unless the action involves the validity of a tax, impost, assessment, toll, municipal fine, or

52. Mandamus

(1) Court of appeals had jurisdiction to issue writ of mandamus compelling judge to set aside an order directing prisoner's return from county jail located in another division, although prisoner was charged with murder in first degree, court's jurisdiction in felony cases being fixed by "punishment fixed," and not by charge made.—Ex parte State ex rel. Shirley, 103 So. 68, 20 Ala.App. 473.

(2) Mandamus to compel trial court to vacate order might be made on motion docket, where cause was pending in reviewing tribunal, and adverse party was given due notice.—Ex parte Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., 194 So. 899, 30 Ala.App. 531, certiorari denied Ex parte Gay, 204 So. 900, 213 Ala. 411.

statute.⁶⁷ It has power to issue all writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of its appellate and revisory jurisdiction,⁶⁸ and accordingly may issue writs of mandamus,⁶⁹ prohibition,⁷⁰ and certiorari,⁷¹ provided the case is within its appellate jurisdiction and the issuance of the writ is necessary for the complete exercise of its appellate and revisory jurisdiction.⁷²

§ 319. Arkansas

Appellate jurisdiction in the state of Arkansas is vested in the supreme court and circuit courts, whose respective powers are considered in detail infra §§ 320-321.

§ 320. — Supreme Court

Except for a limited original jurisdiction in the issuance of writs of quo warranto, the supreme court of Arkansas has appellate and supervisory jurisdiction only.

The jurisdiction and powers of the supreme court of Arkansas are defined by the constitution. Except in cases otherwise provided by the constitution, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction only.⁷³ It has also a general superintending control over all inferior courts of law and equity,⁷⁴ that is, over the circuit and chancery courts;⁷⁵ it has no power to supervise or control the action of courts inferior to the circuit court except by reaching back through the decisions of that court.⁷⁶ In aid of its appellate and supervisory jurisdiction,⁷⁷ the supreme court has power to issue writs of certiorari,⁷⁸ habeas corpus,⁷⁹ prohibition,⁸⁰ mandamus,⁸¹ quo warranto,⁸² and other remedial writs;⁸³ and its judges severally have power to issue any of the aforesaid writs to preserve the status sought to recover aggregate amount of two hundred thirty-nine dollars and ninety-nine cents, and complaint having been amended, after consolidation of cases in superior court, to reduce amount to two hundred dollars, plaintiff would not have been allowed recovery in any greater sum, so that "original amount in controversy," within Const. art 6 § 4, conferring appellate jurisdiction on supreme court, does not exceed two hundred dollars, and appeal must be dismissed.—Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. Hinton, 179 P. 963, 20 Ark. 266.

Reduction of assessment

On a county's appeal from a judgment of the county superior court reducing an assessment so as to reduce a tax levy of four hundred and eighty-four dollars by one hundred and fifty-seven dollars, where the whole assessment was questioned, the amount in dispute is within the supreme court's jurisdiction.—Mohave County v. Stephens, 149 P. 670, 17 Ark. 165.

15 C.J. p 1027 note 79.

70. Application of strangers to proceeding

Supreme court has jurisdiction to issue writ against further action by judge of superior court in cause of which supreme court has appellate jurisdiction, on application of persons beneficially interested in subject matter, although they are strangers to proceeding.—Conkling v. Crosby, 239 P. 506, 29 Ark. 60.

Discretion of court

Even though superior court is acting without jurisdiction, it is discretionary with supreme court as to whether a writ of prohibition shall be granted, particularly where it appears that the complaining parties have an adequate remedy by appeal, and that the equities are such that an injustice will be done by granting it. That municipal officials summarily abated nuisance without notice and hearing did not indicate that officials acted so arbitrarily as to justify the court in exercising its discretion by refusing to issue writ of prohibition restraining superior court from granting an injunction.—Hislop v. Rodgers, Ariz., 92 P.2d 527.

78. Application treated as for certiorari

Application for prohibition to restrain chancellor from enforcing order, made without jurisdiction but already entered, was not technically proper, but supreme court treated application as one for writ of certiorari and granted writ quashing order.—Wasson v. Dodge, 94 S.W.2d 720, 192 Ark. 728.

quo pending appeal.⁸⁴ A provision of the constitution gives the court power, in the exercise of original jurisdiction, to issue writs of quo warranto to the circuit judges and chancellors, and to officers of political corporations, when the question involved is the legal existence of such corporations; but the original jurisdiction of the court is confined strictly to the issuance of writs of quo warranto in the two classes of cases just named.⁸⁵

§ 321. — Circuit Courts

The circuit courts of Arkansas exercise superintending control and appellate jurisdiction over inferior courts.

The appellate jurisdiction and powers of the circuit courts of Arkansas are defined in the constitution. Such courts exercise superintending control⁸⁶ and absolute appellate jurisdiction over certain inferior courts,⁸⁷ but acquire only such jurisdiction as the inferior court had.⁸⁸ The statute authorizing transfers of causes from the circuit to the chancery court, or vice versa, apply only to actions which originate in one or the other of those courts, and confer no authority for the transfer of a case appealed to the circuit court from one of the inferior courts.⁸⁹

§ 322. California

Appellate jurisdiction in the state of California is vested in the supreme court, the district courts of appeal, and the superior courts, whose respective powers are considered in detail infra §§ 323-325.

§ 323. — Supreme Court

The supreme court of California has such jurisdiction and powers as are conferred upon it by the constitution, including appellate jurisdiction in certain cases, power to issue writs necessary to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, and power to transfer and hear causes pending in the district courts of appeal.

The jurisdiction and powers of the supreme court of California are exclusively conferred by the state constitution.⁹⁰ The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity,⁹¹ except such as

Exceptions and qualifications

(1) Although the constitution does not enumerate special proceedings, such proceedings are appealable to the supreme court where statutes so provide.—Morton v. Broderick, 50 P. 644, 118 Cal. 474—Risdon v. Prewett, 97 P. 73, 8 Cal.App. 434—15 C.J. p 1028 note 16 [c], [d].

(2) Appellate jurisdiction in cases of mandamus exists, even though the constitution contained no provision therefor.—Palache v. Hunt, 2 P. 245, 64 Cal. 473.

(3) The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction over an election contest.—Lord v. Dunster, 21 P. 865, 79 Cal. 82—Knowles v. Yates, 31 Cal. 82.

(4) But it has been held that appellate jurisdiction of supreme court over election contests arises only after transfer to supreme court in manner provided by law.—McClinck v. Abel, 68 P.2d 273, 21 Cal.App. 2d 11.

91. Cal.—In re Sutter-Butte By-Pass Assessment No. 6 of Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist., 213 P. 974, 190 Cal. 532—Gunder v. Superior Court in and for Riverside County, 279 P. 822, 100 Cal.App. 334—Koch v. Speedwell Motor Car Co., 140 P. 598, 600, 24 Cal.App. 133.

Proceeding equitable in nature

A third party claimant's appeal from adverse judgment, in proceeding to recover personalty allegedly unlawfully seized upon writ of execution, was properly taken to the supreme court, since proceeding was equitable in nature.—Fulton v. Webb, 72 P.2d 744, 9 Cal.2d 726.

Proceeding to validate assessment by a drainage district, being one to establish the validity of an assessment, is a "case" and not a "special proceeding," and the supreme court has jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment therein by Const. art 6 § 4, conferring on the supreme court appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity and in all cases at law, which involve the legality of any tax, assessment, etc., notwithstanding the statute forbids an appeal.—In re Sutter-Butte By-Pass Assessment No. 6 of Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist., 213 P. 974, 190 Cal. 532.

Civil cases only.

A fine for wrongfully collecting toll is not within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, the constitutional provision referring only to civil cases, as distinguished from criminal cases.—People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98.

Constitutionality of act denying appeal

Act of 1868, as amended by Act of 1870 relating to modification of the grades of certain streets of San Francisco, so far as providing that the judgment of the circuit court on the report of commissioners shall be final and conclusive and thus prohibiting an appeal, is not unconstitutional as violating the constitutional provision conferring appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court, such proceeding being a special proceeding and not a case at law.—Houghton's Appeal, 42 Cal. 35.

Under the original constitutional provision, the court also had jurisdiction in all cases at law in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars.—Aronson v. Levison, 83 P. 154, 148 Cal. 364—15 C.J. p 1029 note 21.

Mandamus held to lie

(1) From supreme court to court of appeal.—Stout v. Farwell, 295 P. 47, 111 Cal.App. 31, denying motion 285 P. 836, 103 Cal.App. 471, rehearing denied 286 P. 471, 103 Cal.App. 471.

(2) To determine whether superior court had jurisdiction to remove a trustee.—Middlecoff v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 31 P.2d 200, 220 Cal. 410.

Other constitutional provisions

The supreme court is not deprived of jurisdiction to entertain a petition for mandamus to compel the secretary of state to refrain from submitting a purported initiative measure to the electors, by constitutional provisions reserving to the people the power to propose laws and amend the constitution by initiative process, or by provision relating to the separation of powers.—Epperson v. Writ of error

(1) A writ of error lies to bring a case to the supreme court only where no appeal or other reviewing remedy has been provided.—Sacramento, etc., R. Co. v. Harlan, 24 Cal. 334—Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297, 68 Am.D. 323—Middleton v. Gould, 5 Cal. 190.

(2) Where the state constitution conferred appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court, and the legislature authorized the court to issue all writs necessary to the exercise of its powers, but provided no remedy by appeal, the case could be brought to the court by writ of error.—Ex parte Thistleton, 52 Cal. 220—Adams & Co. v. Town, 3 Cal. 247.

(3) Likewise, where the supreme court was by the constitution invested with appellate jurisdiction in all cases where the matter in dispute exceeded a specified sum, and was authorized to issue process necessary to the exercise of this jurisdiction, a writ of error was a proper and necessary writ where no other reviewing process had been authorized by statute to carry out the constitutional provision.—Adams & Co. v. Denial of similar application below

Application to supreme court would be denied, where it appeared that petitioner's similar application to district court of appeal theretofore had been denied, petitioner's remedy being by application for a

Cases which must be decided by the supreme court because no other court has jurisdiction are so numerous that it cannot ordinarily take up original proceedings of which there is concurrent jurisdiction with another court,⁶ hence application for writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, or procedendo should ordinarily be made first to superior court, unless directed to the court itself,⁷ although the supreme court will exercise jurisdiction where some emergency exists or public welfare is involved.⁸ The court has no jurisdiction of a motion whose object is to obtain advice as to whether a proposed act would constitute a violation of an injunction issued pending an appeal;⁹ and the court will not entertain originally a motion to recall a remittitur issued in due course by the district court of appeal.¹⁰

Transfer from district court of appeal. The supreme court has power to order any cause pending before a district court of appeal to be heard and determined by itself,¹¹ it being within the discretion of the supreme court whether a case shall be removed.¹² It has been said that the provisions of the constitution giving the supreme court in banc power to rehear any "cause" decided in department¹³ and authorizing the supreme court to transfer any "cause" to or from the district court of appeal,¹⁴ have always been understood as applying to any matter, regardless of its character; but the supreme court has no power thereunder to transfer to it a proceeding in habeas corpus initiated in a district court of appeal after decision thereof,¹⁵ and a statute authorizing a hearing in the supreme court of habeas corpus proceedings in criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information is inapplicable where the charge was prosecuted by complaint.¹⁶

While a petition for transfer will be granted for good cause,¹⁷ the supreme court will not necessarily exercise its power to order a transfer to it in the absence of an emergency requiring an immediate decision by the highest court;¹⁸ nor will it order the transfer of a case solely for the purpose of reviewing the exercise of a discretionary power of a district court of appeal where the matter was never in any way suggested to that court,¹⁹ or to transfer and hearing in supreme court on such petition, and not by an original application.—*Linstead v. Reason for rule

When the subject matter of a motion is peculiarly within the province of the district court of appeal finally to decide and it appears that that court has regularly pursued its authority, its action should be deemed final by supreme court. Also the district court of appeal has control of its own process and is in better position than supreme court to determine whether a motion to recall remittitur on grounds that it has been subjected to fraudulent imposition, has acted improvidently and by mistake, should be granted.—*Heroux v. correct an error by the lower court which did not affect the result,²⁰ or where in substance and effect the views expressed by the district court of appeal in its written opinion correctly declared the conclusions with regard to the question at issue that were reached by the supreme court.²¹ It has been held that a transfer will not be granted to the supreme court unless an error appears upon the face of the opinion of the court of appeal,²² or a doubtful or important question is presented upon the face of the opinion,²³ but this practice is confined to appeals and does not extend to original proceedings instituted in such courts.²⁴

§ 324. — District Courts of Appeal

The district courts of appeal in California have such appellate jurisdiction as is conferred upon them by the constitution, including the power to issue all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of their appellate jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of the district courts of appeal is defined in the state constitution. Such courts have appellate jurisdiction on appeal from the superior courts, except in cases in which appellate jurisdiction is given to the supreme court,²⁵ in all cases at law²⁶ in which the superior courts are given original jurisdiction;²⁷ also in proceedings of mandamus,²⁸ certiorari,²⁹ contesting elections,³⁰ and in such other special proceedings as may be provided by law;³¹ also on questions of law alone in all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information, except where judgment of death has been rendered.³² Such courts also have power to issue writs of mandamus,³³ prohibition,³⁴ and habeas corpus,³⁵ and all other writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of their appellate jurisdiction.³⁶ An ap-

Action within jurisdiction of municipal court

A statute amending the municipal court act so as to deprive the district court of appeals of jurisdiction over appeals from the superior courts in any action within the jurisdiction of the municipal courts was not intended to apply retroactively and, hence, does not take from such appellate courts jurisdiction of appeals perfected at the time the amendment became effective.—D. Concurrent jurisdiction

The appellate court and the superior court have concurrent jurisdiction to grant an original application for mandate.—Cohn v. Isensee, 188 P. 278, 45 Cal.App. 509.

Showing insufficient for relief

Assigning another superior court judge to department in which probate matter was pending instead of allowing judge who had conducted hearing thereon and who was assigned to another department to complete hearing and determination was within discretion of court and presiding judge, and party was not entitled to issuance of writ of mandate commanding original judge to proceed with hearing and determination.—Cohn v. Superior Court in and for Kern County, 57 P.2d 186, 13 Cal. App.2d 565.

34. Cal.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Ash, 208 P. 394, 58 Cal.App. 238.

Alternative writ

The district court of appeal, in original proceeding for writ of prohibition, can issue an alternative writ, thus preserving the status of the controversy until the final adjudication on the merits.—Wood v. Board of Fire Com'rs of City of Los Angeles, 195 P. 739, 50 Cal.App. 593, first case.

Not applicable on appeal

The original jurisdiction of the appellate court to issue writs of prohibition does not apply to cases originating in the superior court, and brought up on appeal only.—Lickley v. Board of Education of Los Angeles County, 217 P. 133, 62 Cal. App. 527.

35. Cal.—In re Mulholland, 110 P. 585, 13 Cal.App. 734.

Requisites of memorandum

Counsel must assist court in ascertaining points to be considered in original habeas corpus proceeding by discussing each point separately under appropriate heading in any memorandum filed in such proceeding.—Ex parte Ellery, 70 P.2d 690, 22 Cal. App.2d 274.

36. Supersedeas

(1) Writs of supersedeas and probable cause are included in "other writs."—Martin v. Rosen, Cal. App., 38 P.2d 855.

(2) Court has no jurisdiction, however, to grant writ of supersedeas except in aid of its appellate juris-plication for a writ of mandamus, certiorari, or prohibition will ordinarily be denied, however, where petitioner had not applied to the superior court for such writ,³⁷ unless his application furnishes a proper reason for not making the application to the lower court;³⁸ and the appellate court will not ordinarily entertain a petition for a writ affecting a pending proceeding which is appealable directly to the supreme court,³⁹ although it has jurisdiction to do so.⁴⁰ Where the relief which should be afforded the petitioner may not be granted under the writ sought, the court, with the facts before it, may give such relief as is warranted by the premises.⁴¹ The court has no absolute appellate jurisdiction in equity cases,⁴² but can gain jurisdiction of such cases only through the discretionary action of the supreme court.⁴³ The court has full authority to affirm, reverse, or modify the judgment or order of the trial court in any case properly before it;⁴⁴ and finality is intended to accompany the judgments of the court.⁴⁵ Where an appeal is taken to a district court of appeal in a case in which appellate jurisdiction belongs not to that court but to the supreme court, the proper practice is to transfer the appeal to the supreme court.⁴⁶

§ 325. — Superior Courts

The superior courts in California have appellate juisdiction; and where petition to appellate court for writ of supersedeas was with relation to proceeding wherein self-executing judgment had been appealed to appellate court, petitioner was not entitled to writ, since there was no process to restrain.—Norton v. Municipal Court of Los Angeles, 48 P.2d 124, 8 Cal.App.2d 368.

Injunction

Writ of injunction is included in "other writs."—Martin v. Rosen, 38 P.2d 855, 2 Cal.App.2d 450.

Power to issue

Court of appeal has power to issue prohibition to restrain superior court from proceeding with action, although preliminary objection has not been made in superior court, but will hesitate to do so.—MacFarland v. Superior Court in and for Orange County, 38 P.2d 800, 3 Cal.App.2d 173.

38. Cal.—Wilshire - Commonwealth Corporation v. State Corporation Department, 297 P. 121, 112 Cal. App. 732.

Sufficient reason not shown

Cal.—Jones v. Keyes, 219 P. 464, 63 Cal.App. 649.

Possibility of adverse decision in superior court on application for a writ of prohibition would not be sufficient cause for applying to the district court of appeal in the first instance.—Wood v. Board of Fire Com'rs of City of Los Angeles, 195 P. 739, 50 Cal.App. 594.

Cessation of emergency

Where emergency which led district court of appeal to assume jurisdiction of proceeding had ceased to exist at time of filing and hearing of amended petition, and questions involved could best be first heard and determined in superior court where facts might more readily be ascertained and accounting had if necessary, district court of appeal would not continue its jurisdiction.—Noble v. Provident Irr. Dist., 51 P.2d 896, 10 Cal.App.2d 284.

Retention of jurisdiction

The court, having issued an alternative writ and signified its willingness to entertain the proceeding, will not dismiss it merely because the subject to which the writ pertains is, unless transferred, in the exclusive appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Ash, 208 P. 394, 58 Cal.App. 233. Contra: Tannahill v. Superior Court of Orange County, 209 P. 77, 58 Cal.App. 623.

Different questions involved

Where sole issue on appeal to supreme court was whether superior court abused its discretion in dismissing action for lack of prosecution, and the only question involved in proceeding for writ of mandate before district court of appeal was plaintiff's right to compel a defendant to give her deposition while case was on appeal to supreme court during time the deposition proceeding was pending in the superior court, district court of appeal was not thereby deprived of jurisdiction to issue writ of mandate.—Hays v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, Cal.App., 92 P.2d 665.

Matters determined

In action to have rights in decedent's estate determined, appellate court was held to have jurisdiction to determine whether lapsed share of one of two daughters predeceasing testator vests in widow's estate, and amount of advances deductible from share of widow's surviving son and retained in residuary estate, but jurisdiction to determine whether any provisions of will have been impliedly revoked is advisory on probate court and confined to matters incidentally necessary to determine question properly before court.—O'Neil v. Ross, 277 P. 123, 93 Cal. App. 306.

isdiction in certain cases, as well as jurisdiction in certiorari and prohibition.

The superior courts have appellate jurisdiction in such cases as may be provided by law, and they are limited in the exercise of their jurisdiction to the extent and mode which the legislature validly prescribes.⁴⁷ The appellate department of the superior court is a court of last resort to certain kinds of cases.⁴⁸ The superior courts also have constitutional jurisdiction in certiorari;⁴⁹ and three judges of the court could hear and determine issues raised by an alternative writ of prohibition and demurrer or answer thereto, notwithstanding the writ was returnable in the department of the superior court presided over by the three judges of the appellate department of such court, and the appellate department as such was without jurisdiction to issue the alternative writ.⁵⁰ As a court of general jurisdiction, the superior court may properly interpret and give effect to any legislative, executive, or judicial document or order.⁵¹

§ 326. Colorado

Appellate jurisdiction in the state of Colorado, as shown infra §§ 327, 329, is vested in the supreme court, the district court, and the county courts, in addition to which, as shown infra § 328, there have been, at various times, courts of appeals which, during their existence also had some appellate jurisdiction.

§ 327. — Supreme Court

Besides its appellate jurisdiction, the supreme court of Colorado has power to issue original and remedial writs and is required to give its opinion upon important questions when properly required by the governor, senate, or house of representatives.

The jurisdiction of the supreme court is conferred by the state constitution. Except as otherwise provided therein, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction only,⁵² which is coextensive with the state,⁵³ and a general superintending control over all inferior courts,⁵⁴ under such regulations and limitations as may be prescribed by law.⁵⁵

The court also has power to issue writs of habeas corpus,⁵⁶ mandamus,⁵⁷ quo warranto,⁵⁸ certiorari,⁵⁹ injunction,⁶⁰ and other original and remedial writs.⁶¹ The supreme court is primarily and essentially a court of appellate jurisdiction, however,⁶² and will take jurisdiction under its limited original power only in questions *publici juris*⁶³ in which the sovereign state as a whole is concerned,⁶⁴ and where adequate relief may not be afforded by the inferior courts of original jurisdiction;⁶⁵ and such writs in general in this court should be put only to prerogative uses.⁶⁶ The issuance of the writ is always discretionary and not as of right.⁶⁷

Opinions on important questions. The supreme court is required to give its opinion upon important questions upon solemn occasions when required by the governor, the senate, or the house of representatives,⁶⁸ it being for the court to determine that the questions are important⁶⁹ and the occasion solemn.⁷⁰ The questions must relate to purely public rights.⁷¹ An inquiry by the house or senate is authorized only when a bill involving a constitutional or publici juris question is before that body;⁷² and by the governor only when such a bill has been passed by both house and senate and is before him for signature.⁷³ Constitutional questions by the governor will be answered only when he expresses doubt as to the constitutionality of the measure.⁷⁴ If the court declares a statute unconstitutional on one of the grounds submitted, it need not pass on questions as to whether it violates any other constitutional provisions.⁷⁵ Moreover, the court need not answer questions when properly to do so would require a wholesale exposition of all constitutional provisions relating to a given general subject.⁷⁶

§ 328. — Court of Appeals

At various times there have been courts of appeals in Colorado endowed by the constitution or legislature with certain jurisdiction and powers; but none exists at present.

A court of appeals was established in 1891, but as it went out of existence in April, 1905, by virtue of a constitutional amendment, it is deemed sufficient to refer in the notes to the numerous decisions relating to the jurisdiction and powers of such court.⁷⁷ In 1911 the legislature established a new court of appeals to exist for a period of four years, and, since this court also has ceased to exist, mere reference to the decisions relating to its jurisdiction and powers is likewise deemed sufficient here.⁷⁸

§ 329. — Other Courts

District and county courts in Colorado have such appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred by law.

District courts have such appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred by law,⁷⁹ and they acquire only such jurisdiction as the inferior court had.⁸⁰ Appellate jurisdiction may also be conferred on the county courts.⁸¹

Perfection of appeal

To authorize the court of appeals to determine an appeal originally taken to the supreme court, the appeal must have been perfected by the filing and approval of an appeal bond, and docketed in the supreme court, and the case must have been transferred to the court of appeals, so that an appeal in a case transferred to it would be dismissed by the court of appeals where the transcript was not filed with, and the case docketed in, the supreme court within the time provided by statute.—Archuleta Mercantile Co. v. § 330. Connecticut

Appellate jurisdiction in the state of Connecticut is vested in the supreme court of errors, and the superior court, whose respective powers are considered infra §§ 331-332.

§ 331. — Supreme Court of Errors

The supreme court of errors in Connecticut has final jurisdiction in cases brought before it on appeal or writ of error.

Under the constitution the powers of the supreme court of errors and its jurisdiction are such as shall be defined by law. This court has a supreme and final jurisdiction in determining in the last resort the principles of law in the trial of causes, and therefore has the right to review the rulings and decisions of a court of common pleas in all matters of law not committed to its sole discretion or jurisdiction;⁸² and it is expressly empowered by statute to carry into execution all its judgments and decrees. In order that an appeal may lie under the statutory provisions to the supreme court of errors from decisions of the superior court, the court of common pleas, or any city court, or from decisions of a judge of any of these courts, or on questions of law by the state with the permission of the presiding judge, the cause must have come regularly before such lower court by appeal, writ of error, or original process or the supreme court will not take cognizance of it.⁸³ Writs of error, for errors in matters of law only, may be brought to the supreme court of errors from the judgments of the superior court, the court of common pleas, or any city court.⁸⁴ This court is without power to issue a writ of mandamus, neither statute nor custom conferring such authority.⁸⁵ An appeal taken to a term of the court held in the judicial district in which the judgment was rendered but not in a city named, is properly taken under a general statute requiring appeals to be thus taken notwithstanding a proviso that certain appeals may be taken to the court sitting in named cities.⁸⁶ By authority of statute, the chief justice or presiding judge may by a written order direct judgment to be entered in accordance with an agreement of the parties filed with the clerk.

§ 332. — Other Courts

The superior court in Connecticut has such appellate jurisdiction as is conferred by statute.

An appeal lies to the superior court where statutory authority therefor exists.⁸⁷ Appeals from the probate courts go to the superior court.⁸⁸

§ 333. Delaware

Appellate jurisdiction in the state of Delaware is vested in the supreme court, the superior courts and the court of general sessions, whose respective powers are considered infra §§ 334-335.

§ 334. — Supreme Court

The powers conferred by the constitution upon the supreme court of Delaware should be liberally construed; and when written opinions of the judges are required, they need only answer the inquiry submitted.

The jurisdiction and powers of the supreme court as set forth in the constitution should be liberally construed so as to permit contested questions to be passed upon.⁸⁹

Under a statute authorizing the governor to require written opinions of the chancellor and judges upon constitutional questions, the only thing they are called upon to do when replying to an inquiry as to the constitutionality of a statute is to express their opinion upon the constitutionality of the statute.⁹⁰

§ 335. — Other Courts

In certain cases the superior courts and the court of general sessions have appellate jurisdiction.

A superior court has been held to have power to issue the common-law writ of certiorari in any case in which it was proper at common law,⁹¹ but the superior court of one county cannot exercise supervisory or appellate powers over the superior courts of other counties.⁹² The writ of mandamus is issued exclusively by the superior court;⁹³ and the court has inherent power to issue a writ of prohibition, notwithstanding the constitution gives that power to the supreme court.⁹⁴ The court in banc is a separate tribunal from the superior court, and in a sense an appellate court to which questions of law are sent by the superior court on its own motion; it is not the final court of review.⁹⁵

§ 336. Florida

Appellate jurisdiction in the state of Florida is vested in the supreme court, the circuit courts, and the county courts whose respective powers are considered infra §§ 337-338.

§ 337. — Supreme Court

Although the supreme court of Florida is primarily a court of appeals, having such appellate jurisdiction as is conferred by the constitution, it also has power to issue writs of certiorari, prohibition, mandamus, quo warranto, etc., and is under a duty to render advisory opinions to the governor under certain circumstances.

The supreme court is primarily a court of appeals.⁹⁶ In determining questions relating to its appellate jurisdiction, consideration must be given to all the provisions of the constitution on the subject.⁹⁷ The constitution does not expressly or by clear implication forbid a statutory appeal from the circuit court to the supreme court in cases appealed to the circuit court from awards or orders of administrative boards, and where such administrative proceedings are appealed to the circuit court they may fairly be regarded as a case originating in the circuit court within the constitutional provision heretofore adverted to.⁹⁸ The constitutional jurisdiction of the supreme court to ultimately review a judgment at law after rendition thereof by the circuit court attaches at the time of the commencement of the action,⁹⁹ although in the great majority of cases it is only by an appeal or a writ of error which challenges the final decision in the case, that any of the proceedings of the circuit court in it may be actually reviewed.¹

Issuance of writs. The supreme court also has power to issue writs of certiorari,² prohibition,³ and all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its jurisdiction;⁴ and under this power

1. Fla.—Wolfe v. City of Miami, 154 So. 196, 114 Fla. 238.

2. Nature of writ

Judgments affirmed by circuit court

The supreme court may issue writs of certiorari appropriately to review judgments of the civil court of record that have been affirmed by the circuit court.—American Ry. Express Co. v. Weatherford, 98 So. 820, 86 Fla. 626.

4. Fla.—Davidson v. Stringer, 147 So. 228, 109 Fla. 238. 15 C.J. p 1037 note 99.

Injunctive writs

(1) Where supreme court, on original hearing, had decided to grant prohibition against circuit judge in case involving custody of insane person, supreme court, on suggestion that effectiveness of court's jurisdiction would be impaired by interference with such custody during pending of rehearing petition, granted temporary restraining order.—State ex rel. Deeb v. Fabisinski, 152 So. 207, 111 Fla. 454, rehearing denied 156 So. 261, 111 Fla. 454.

(2) However, the supreme court is not clothed with original jurisdiction of the writ of injunction; in equity cases it has appellate jurisdiction only, and although by virtue of the constitution it is empowered to and may issue injunctive or any other writs essential to the complete exercise of its jurisdiction, it will not invoke the power so granted except in cases carefully investigated and on a showing made that the writ sought is indispensable to protect the rights of the party seeking it, or that the law affords no other remedy, or that some constitutional or statutory provision is about to be violated, or that the rights in litigation are of such peculiar or intrinsic value or nature that the facts of the case make it imperative that they be held in status quo pending the adjudication of the cause on appeal.—Paramount Enterprises v. Mitchell, 140 So. 328, 104 Fla. 407—Wheeler v. Meggs, 78 So. 685, 75 Fla. 687.

it may exercise supervisory jurisdiction over other courts.⁵ So, where the situation demands, an appropriate original writ from the supreme court may be issued before or during a criminal trial to secure the protection of defendant's fundamental rights.⁶ The court, should not, however, exercise its supervisory power merely to satisfy a litigant desiring to bring his case before a certain judge.⁷ The court is without jurisdiction to cancel a purported writ of error attempting to bring up for review by the circuit court a judgment of the civil court of record.⁸ Where the court has not acquired jurisdiction of a circuit court order it is without jurisdiction to issue a rule for contempt based on noncompliance with such order.⁹ The opinion and judgment of the supreme court filed in a case of original jurisdiction remains under the control of the court subject to being vacated, modified, or overruled during the same term of court, while such case remains pending and undisposed of.¹⁰

The supreme court has power to issue writs of mandamus,¹¹ but this power has been habitually exercised only in cases involving some grave question of general law necessitating an early decision in the public interest.¹² Accordingly the court will decline to take jurisdiction where it does not appear that a novel question was presented¹³ or that such question of public interest was involved as would warrant its assumption of original jurisdiction respecting a matter which could be as well adjudicated in the circuit court.¹⁴ It will not pass upon whether a chancellor has jurisdiction of the subject matter of a bill before the chancellor has had an opportunity to rule on such question¹⁵ or in collateral proceedings against the clerk of the circuit court to compel performance of a minis-

Rehearing

Where petition for rehearing was filed at following term, but within fifteen days after judgment, in original quo warrant proceeding in supreme court, and petition was denied, supreme court could, during term at which petition was denied, vacate order denying rehearing.—State ex rel. Davis v. City of Avon Park, 151 So. 701, 117 Fla. 556, denying rehearing State ex rel. Attorney General v. City of Avon Park, 149 So. 409, 108 Fla. 641 and modified on other grounds State ex rel. Davis v. City of Avon Park, 153 So. 159, 117 Fla. 565, 98 A.L.R. 230.

Concurrent jurisdiction

The supreme court has jurisdiction of mandamus proceedings concurrent with the circuit court's jurisdiction.

—State ex rel. Patterson v. Lee, 164 So. 188, 121 Fla. 541—State ex rel. Harris v. Gautier, 147 So. 846, 108 Fla. 390.

Validity of tax

Constitutional provision giving circuit court exclusive original jurisdiction in cases involving legality of tax, assessment, or toll, does not limit jurisdiction of supreme court to issue mandamus and other writs necessary or proper to complete exercise of its jurisdiction; and it has original jurisdiction in mandamus proceeding by operator of chain stores to compel county tax collector to accept tendered fees and issue licenses, although proceeding involved validity of statute imposing taxes additional to those tendered.—State ex rel. Lane Drug Stores v. Simpson, 166 So. 227, 122 Fla. 582, affirming 166 So. 262, 122 Fla. 670, following State ex rel. Lane Drug Stores v. Carswell, 166 So. 249, 122 Fla. 639, rehearing denied 166 So. 574, 122 Fla. 700, rehearing denied State ex rel. Lane Drug Stores v. Simpson, 166 So. 574, 122 Fla. 700, certiorari denied Simpson v. State of Florida ex rel. Lane Drug Stores, 57 S.Ct. 15, 299 U.S. 543, 81 L.Ed. 399.

Pendency of equity suit in circuit court to enjoin county commissioners from unlawfully expending taxes collected does not preclude proceeding for writ of mandamus in supreme court to compel disposition of same fund in accordance with law. Jurisdiction of supreme court in original mandamus proceeding is not concurrent with equity jurisdiction of circuit court so as to preclude supreme court, under rule that between courts of concurrent jurisdiction, court which first acquires jurisdiction and has power to afford complete relief, will be allowed to retain jurisdiction and determine the controversy.—State ex rel. City of St. Petersburg v. Pinellas County, 161 So. 66, 119 Fla. 539.

12. Avoiding unnecessary litigation

The power has been habitually exercised where some grave question of general law, possibly controlling in other cases of like character was involved, and an early decision in the interest of avoiding unnecessary litigation, was thereby necessitated.—Newberry v. Harris, 153 So. 901, 114 Fla. 379—Humphreys v. State ex rel. Palm Beach Co., 145 So. 858, 108 Fla. 92.

Decision required by federal government

The supreme court would take original jurisdiction of a proceeding testing the constitutionality of an act where the federal government required a decision by the court as to the validity of the act as a condition precedent to the making of a federal loan.—State ex rel. Weigel v. Spangler, Fla., 190 So. 425.

Enforcement of private rights

The supreme court will not entertain original jurisdiction of writs of mandamus requiring the court to act for the enforcement of strictly private rights as distinguished from acting judicially to settle legal questions of public interest.—State ex rel. Carter v. City of St. Petersburg, 150 So. 584, 112 Fla. 395.

terial duty resting upon him.¹⁶ The power to review a judgment of the circuit court extends to the right to issue a writ of mandamus in aid of the appellate jurisdiction whenever it potentially exists, whether or not the appellate jurisdiction has been actually invoked.¹⁷ Accordingly the supreme court may, by mandamus, correct any inaction by the circuit court which forestalls entry of appropriate rulings, orders, or final judgment, where the matters presented are within the supreme court's power to ultimately review and correct the circuit court's judgment on writ of error, the writ of mandamus in such cases being in the nature of a procedendo.¹⁸ Collateral controversies which are incident to the form or substance of the record in the inferior court may be examined, reviewed, and settled on such a proceeding in mandamus, but such proceeding must be predicated on the same theory and tested by the same legal considerations as a writ of error,¹⁹ and all matters in pais relating to rulings complained of must be brought to the court by a special bill of exceptions.²⁰ The court has inherent power, as an incident to its appellate jurisdiction, by mandamus to control the proceedings of an inferior court in order that appealable rulings may be put in the prescribed form essential to the making up of an appellate record.²¹ Mandamus proceedings should be dismissed where the circuit court had previously acquired and retained jurisdiction of the subject matter and parties,²² but a writ will be awarded to compel a state officer to perform certain duties notwithstanding a circuit court which had no jurisdiction had issued an order restraining him from performing them.²³ Where material issues of fact arise, the court may appoint a special commissioner to take testimony²⁴ or dismiss the proceeding without prejudice to the relators' right to pursue the remedy in the circuit court.²⁵

The supreme court has concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts to issue writs of quo warranto,²⁶ but it has consistently declined to do so except in cases where the public interest demanded, and then on an agreed statement of facts.²⁷ So in an original quo warranto case where there are issues of fact to be tried, the supreme court may decline to take jurisdiction of the case without prejudice to the right of relator to institute proceedings in the circuit court, or the cause may be dismissed without prejudice to the relator's right to commence new proceedings in the circuit court, or the supreme court may try all issues of law and fact and proceed to final judgment although it has to do so without intervention of jury, or a commissioner may be appointed to take testimony and refer it back to supreme court together with his findings,²⁸ which findings are advisory only;²⁹ but the court has no authority to send the case to a circuit

Chillingworth, supra.

Extent of power

The court has power to require an inferior court to rule on a proposition presented to it in proper form when it unlawfully or unreasonably refuses to do so, and also, has power to compel the inferior tribunal to make a sufficient record of its rulings, so as to enable an aggrieved party to have them reviewed in due course of appellate procedure.—Bishop v. Chillingworth, supra.

court for trial by jury or otherwise and for certification of the record with the verdict.³⁰

Advisory opinions. It is the duty of the justices of the supreme court, when required by the governor, to render an opinion in writing as to the interpretation of any portion of the constitution upon any question affecting the governor's executive powers and duties;³¹ but such justices are not authorized to render advisory opinions on the construction of statutes,³² nor will they render such opinions on the constitutionality of statutes.³³

§ 338. — Other Courts

The circuit courts in Florida have such appellate powers as are conferred by the constitution.

The appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts is conferred by the constitution, the manifest purpose of which is to give such courts final appellate jurisdiction by writ of error or appeal of all causes originating in all courts of the state that are inferior to the circuit court except convictions of felonies in the criminal courts of record, and except in probate and administrative matters.³⁴ Thus such courts have final appellate jurisdiction of all misdemeanors tried in criminal courts;³⁵ and they may also issue writs of certiorari to inferior boards or tribunals exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions.³⁶ Since the constitution also gives circuit courts jurisdiction of such other matters as the legislature may provide, their jurisdiction in statutory appeals from awards or orders of statutory administrative tribunals cannot be questioned;³⁷ but the constitution does not give them final appellate jurisdiction thereof.³⁸

§ 339. Georgia

Constitutional provisions control as to the jurisdiction of appellate courts.

The provisions of the state constitution and not the certificate of the trial judge to the bill of exceptions determines which reviewing court has jurisdiction of a case.³⁹

§ 340. — Supreme Court in General

a. Jurisdiction

b. Transfer of Causes

a. Jurisdiction

The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court is defined by the constitution, as amended, and it has no other jurisdiction.

Under the constitution, the supreme court has no original jurisdiction, but is a court alone for the trial and correction of errors.⁴⁰ Its jurisdiction formerly extended to the correction of errors in law and equity from the superior courts in all civil cases, whether legal or equitable, originating therein,⁴¹ or carried thereto from the court of ordinary,⁴² and in all cases of conviction of a capital felony.⁴³ The jurisdiction of the court was limited by constitutional amendment in 1916. By this

Restricted power

Advisory opinion of supreme court to governor is restricted to interpretation of constitution on question affecting executive powers and duties of governor.—In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 111 So. 252, 92 Fla. 939.

"Executive powers and duties" means duty pertaining to execution of laws as they exist.—In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 111 So. 252, 92 Fla. 939.

Exercise of jurisdiction

Under former constitutional provisions which gave to the circuit court only appellate jurisdiction as to forcible entry and detainer cases, and cases from a justice of the peace court, such court could not exercise original jurisdiction in those causes, and a statute authorizing a trial de novo in the circuit court was violative of the constitution and invalid.—State v. King, 20 Fla. 399.—State v. Vann, 19 Fla. 29.—State v. Baker, 19 Fla. 19. Original jurisdiction see supra § 257.

amendment the supreme court is a court alone for the trial and correction of errors at law from the superior courts and from the city courts and other like courts in specified cases.⁴⁴ Its jurisdiction extends and is limited to cases that involve the construction of the constitution of the state or of the United States, or of treaties between the United States and foreign governments, and to cases in which the constitutionality of any law of the state, or of the United States is drawn in question, which matters are considered infra § 344; cases respecting titles to land, see infra § 345; equity cases, see infra § 347; cases involving the validity and construction of wills, see infra § 346; habeas corpus cases; divorce and alimony cases, cases of conviction of a capital felony;⁴⁵ and cases involving extraordinary remedies.⁴⁶ It is also competent for the supreme court to require by certiorari or otherwise any case to be certified to it from the court of appeals for review and determination, with the same power and authority as if the case had been carried to the supreme court by writ of error,⁴⁷ and, as seen infra § 348, it has jurisdiction to determine questions certified to it by the court of appeals. By the constitutional amendment of 1927 the supreme court may be given appellate jurisdiction over certain courts established in lieu of justices courts as the general assembly may provide. The supreme court has jurisdiction to issue mandamus to require a trial judge to certify a bill of exceptions only in a case of which the supreme court would have jurisdiction under the constitution.⁴⁸

Obviously the supreme court will not interfere with the proper enforcement of the criminal law.⁴⁹

b. Transfer of Causes

Any case carried to either the supreme court or the court of appeals which should have been brought to the other will be transferred to the proper court.

The constitution provides that any case carried to the supreme court or to the court of appeals which belongs to the class of which the other court has jurisdiction, shall, until otherwise provided by law, be transferred to the other court under such rules as the supreme court may prescribe, and that the cases so transferred shall be heard and determined by the court which has jurisdiction thereof.⁵⁰

§ 341. — Court of Appeals in General

The court of appeals is a court for the correction of errors of law from the superior courts, and certain city courts, in all cases in which the supreme court is without jurisdiction.

The court of appeals was created by constitutional amendment in 1906.⁵¹ It has no original jurisdiction, but is a court for the correction of errors of law only⁵² from the superior courts in all cases in which such jurisdiction is not conferred by the constitution on the supreme court,⁵³ and from the Provisions construed

(1) Under the constitutional provision that "any case" carried to the supreme court may, under the described circumstances, be transferred to the court of appeals, a petition to mandamus a judge to certify a bill of exceptions is not a "case" and hence it cannot be transferred to court of appeals.—Brown v. Hutcheson, 144 S.E. 17, 166 Ga. 644.

(2) A case improperly taken to the supreme court is not "brought" to the court of appeals, within the meaning of Const. art 6 § 2 par 6, Civ.Code 1910 § 6503, relative to the time of disposing of cases, until transferred by the supreme court to the court of appeals, although so brought through the fault of plaintiff in error, and not transferred until after the close of the term of the court of appeals.—Howell v. State, 114 S.E. 427, 154 Ga. 424, answers to certified questions conformed to 114 S.E. 717, 29 Ga.App. 174.

Effect of retransfer

Where a case was transmitted by court of appeals to the supreme court, that court's retransfer of the case is equivalent to a holding that the constitutional question raised in the affidavit of illegality was not properly made and was not actually raised for review.—Felker v. City of Monroe, 95 S.E. 1023, 22 Ga.App. 301.

Constitutional language construed

The constitutional amendment defining the jurisdiction of the court of appeals and providing that it shall have jurisdiction in all cases in which such jurisdiction has not been conferred . . . upon the Supreme Court, clearly does not intend to confer jurisdiction in cases which could not be brought by writ of error to the supreme court at the creation of the court of appeals.—Ash v. People's Bank of Oliver, 101 S.E. 912, 914, 149 Ga. 713, answers to certified questions conformed to 102 S.E. 134, 24 Ga.App. 767—Tillman v. Groover, 102 S.E. 879, 25 Ga.App. 118.

Mandamus

In a case which is reviewable by the court of appeals, an application for mandamus should be made to that court.—Brown v. Hutcheson, 144 S.E. 17, 166 Ga. 644.

city courts, see supra § 258, and in such other cases as may be prescribed by law.⁵⁴ Under the express provisions of a constitutional amendment of 1927, the court of appeals is also authorized to review cases from certain other courts as the general assembly may provide.⁵⁵

§ 342. — Superior Courts

The appellate jurisdiction of the superior court is specifically defined by both constitutional and statutory provisions.

By virtue of statutory authority, the Georgia superior courts exercise a general supervision over all inferior tribunals, and have jurisdiction to review and correct errors committed therein in the manner prescribed by law.⁵⁶ Thus, under a statute so providing, the writ of certiorari will issue from the superior court for the correction of errors committed by any inferior judicatory, except in cases touching the probate of wills, granting letters testamentary and of administration.⁵⁷

Question raised in cross bill

Where defendant in error files a cross bill of exceptions, in which are raised constitutional questions of which the supreme court alone has jurisdiction, rendering it necessary that the cross bill be transmitted to the supreme court, the main bill of exceptions should also be transmitted to such court, which will retain the entire case.—*Oliver-McDonald Co. v. § 343. — City Courts

The legislature cannot give city courts appellate jurisdiction in violation of constitutional limitations.

The legislature cannot, in violation of the provisions of the state constitution, vest appellate jurisdiction in the superior courts.⁵⁸

§ 344. — Cases Involving Construction of Constitutions or Validity and Construction of Statutes

The supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction over appeals of cases involving the constitutionality of statutes and treaties or the construction of doubtful constitutional provisions directly in question.

Under the express provisions of the state constitution, the supreme court is a court for the correction of errors of law from the superior courts and certain specified city and like courts in all cases that involve the construction of the state constitution⁵⁹ or of the constitution of the United States,⁶⁰ or of treaties between the United States and foreign governments,⁶¹ and in all cases in which the constitutionality of any state or federal law is drawn into question.⁶² Thus, the court of appeals has no

Clause construed

(1) The term any "law of the state of Georgia" as used in the constitutional provision defining the jurisdiction of the supreme court means an enactment of the general assembly.—Maner v. Dykes, 187 S.E. 699, 183 Ga. 118, transferred, see 184 S.E. 438, 52 Ga. App. 715, transferred, see 190 S.E. 189, 55 Ga. App. 436.

(2) A rule promulgated by the public service commission pursuant to a statute authorizing it to make rules for safety is not a "law of the state of Georgia."—Maner v. Dykes, supra.

Where question of constitutionality of law of sister state is not properly raised, the supreme court will not decide whether it or court of appeals had jurisdiction of a case involving an attack on the constitutionality of a law of a sister state.—Jollie v. Hughes, 193 S.E. 769, 184 Ga. 860.

Question must be raised below

The supreme court will not pass jurisdiction over constitutional questions reserved for the supreme court by the constitution.⁶³ Nevertheless, the words "construction of the constitution" within the above provision contemplates a construction where the meaning of the constitution is directly in question and is doubtful by force of its own terms or under the decisions of the state or federal supreme courts.⁶⁴ Therefore, this constitutional provision does not deny to the court of appeals jurisdiction of cases involving the mere application of unquestioned and unambiguous provisions of the constitution to a given state of facts.⁶⁵

Furthermore, the court of appeals, and not the supreme court, has jurisdiction of a case at law raising only the question of the constitutionality of a municipal ordinance.⁶⁶

It was formerly required that, where in a case pending in the court of appeals a question was raised as to the construction of a provision of the constitution of the state or the United States,⁶⁷ or as to the constitutionality of an act of the general assembly of the state,⁶⁸ and a decision of the question was necessary to the determination of the case,⁶⁹ the court of appeals should certify such question to the supreme court and was bound by the construction thereon given by the latter court;⁷⁰ but since the constitutional amendment of 1916, this duty to certify does not exist, as the supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction of cases involving such questions.⁷¹

§ 345. — Cases Involving Title to Land

Unless such matter is only incidentally involved, the supreme court has exclusive appellate jurisdiction in all cases respecting title to land.

By express provision of the constitution, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction, "until otherwise provided by law," in all cases respecting title to land.⁷² Under this provision, the supreme court is without jurisdiction to review cases wherein the title to land is not directly, but only incidentally, involved,⁷³ the court of appeals having jurisdiction under such circumstances in an otherwise proper case.⁷⁴

§ 346. — Cases Involving Validity or Construction of Wills

Appellate jurisdiction in all cases involving the validity or the construction of wills reposes in the supreme court.

Under an appropriate constitutional provision, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases which involve the validity or the construction of wills.⁷⁵ However, a case which only inci-

Necessary elements

In order to make a case in equity, the allegations of the petition must be applicable to the equitable relief prayed for, and there must be a prayer for specific equitable relief or for general relief, and even though the allegations are such as to authorize the granting of equitable relief under suitable prayers therefor, if there be no prayer for specific equitable relief or for general relief, the case presented is not an "equity case" within supreme court's exclusive jurisdiction.—*Jasper School Dist. v. Designation immaterial

(1) Case is not to be treated as "equity case" within constitutional provision governing supreme court's jurisdiction, merely because it is so termed by its pleadings.—*Dobbs v. Federal Deposit Ins. Court of appeals can propound any question of law to supreme court deemed to be presented by record and necessary. In doing so, the court of appeals may limit the inquiry of supreme court to questions, answers to which would not exhaust all questions in record, and it may base question on only part of evidence.—Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Blount, 142 S.E. 183, 37 Ga.App. 756, conforming to answer to certified questions 140 S.E. 496, 165 Ga. 193.

Certification not required

(1) Where there were no sufficient pleadings to require court of appeals to certify the case to the supreme court as involving constitutionality of act, certification will be denied.—Harte v. Sturtevant, 93 S.E. 530, 20 Ga.App. 822.

(2) Where an opportunity is afforded plaintiff in error to obtain a review of rulings complained of by applying to supreme court for writ of certiorari as authorized by constitutional amendment of 1916, court of appeals will decline to certify questions to supreme court.—Sikes v. State, 92 S.E. 553, 20 Ga.App. 80.

82. Ga.—Metropolitan Life Ins. Co.

question certified must be a distinct question or proposition of law complete within itself,⁸³ it must not involve mixed questions of law and fact,⁸⁴ it must not contain inferences drawn either from the pleadings or the evidence,⁸⁵ and it must be capable of a definite answer without regard to other issues of law or fact.⁸⁶ The whole case, even when its decision turns on a matter of law alone, cannot be certified.⁸⁷ The court of appeals will not certify a case to the supreme court merely to give that court an opportunity to reverse itself where there is no conflict in its decisions.⁸⁸ Where the justices of the supreme court are equally divided as to the proper answer to a question certified by the court of appeals, the question will be returned without an answer.⁸⁹

Dependent on other question

Questions, certified to supreme court by court of appeals, which are similar to, and dependent on a previous question are not framed in accordance with governing rules, and will not be answered.—Gormley v. Slicer, 170 S.E. 224, 177 Ga. 430.

General or contingent questions

The supreme court will not answer a certified question where the question is of objectionable generality, or contains a number of contingencies dependent on the evidence, or is so broad and indefinite as to admit of varying answers, since each question certified must be a direct question or proposition of law clearly stated, definitely answerable without regard to other issues of law or fact in the case.—Willis v. § 349. Idaho

The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme and district courts of Idaho will be considered in the sections immediately following.

§ 350. — Supreme Court

The supreme court reviews on appeal decisions of the district courts and orders of the public utilities commission. It may issue necessary writs and hear claims against the state and make recommendatory decisions.

The constitution confers on the supreme court jurisdiction to review, on appeal, any decision of the district courts, or the judges thereof, and any order of the public utilities commission.⁹⁰ It also has original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus,⁹¹ certiorari,⁹² prohibition,⁹³ and habeas corpus,⁹⁴ and all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.⁹⁵ The supreme court is also given original jurisdiction to hear claims against the state, but its decision thereon is merely recommendatory to the legislature.⁹⁶ The supreme court has original jurisdiction in the matter of a contest of the election of a district judge,⁹⁷ and power to appoint a receiver pending litigation.⁹⁸ It has no original jurisdiction to try any issues involved in an action to quiet title.⁹⁹

§ 351. — District Courts

District courts have such appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred by law.

As provided by the constitution, district courts have such appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred by law.¹

2. Common law must be looked to in order to determine extent of judicial power conferred by constitution on supreme court.—People v. Callopy, 192 N.E. 634, 358 Ill. 11.

3. Not subject to alteration

Original jurisdiction of supreme court is fixed by constitution and can neither be enlarged nor limited by statute or by the court.—Ell Bates House v. Board of Appeals of Cook County, 193 N.E. 526, 358 Ill. 596—15 C.J. p 1041 notes 12, 13.

When jurisdiction assumed

(1) Supreme court has power in its discretion to determine in what matters it will exercise its original jurisdiction. It will be exercised to protect rights, interests, and franchises of state, or rights and interests of whole people, and to enforce performance of official duties which affect public at large and in emergency, existence of which court determines, to protect local public interests or private rights where there is no other adequate remedy or where it is necessary to prevent failure of justice; court will not consider matters which would ultimately lead to congestion of docket and cause serious interference with court's appellate duties.—North Chicago Hebrew Congregation v. Board of Appeals of Cook County, 193 N.E. 519, 358 Ill. 549.

(2) Court will not assume original jurisdiction of question not of interest to public generally.—Ell Bates House v. Board of Appeals of Cook County, 193 N.E. 526, 358 Ill. 596.

Advisory opinions

It has been intimated that the supreme court may render advisory opinions.—People v. Bissell, 19 Ill. 229, 68 Am.D. 591.

Original jurisdiction to issue a writ of prohibition is not conferred on the supreme court by the constitution.—People ex rel. Sokoll v. Municipal Court of Chicago, 194 N.E. 242, 359 Ill. 102, affirming 276 Ill.App. 102—15 C.J. p 1041 note 13 [c].

Action to recover taxes

Supreme court has original jurisdiction of state's action for taxes due on gasoline sold to city, and allegations of declaration as to number of gallons of gasoline sold to city, and amount of tax due thereon being admitted by demurrer, no question of accounting defeated such jurisdiction.—People v. Deep Rock Oil Corporation, supra.

§ 352. Illinois

The particular courts of Illinois exercising appellate jurisdiction and the nature and extent of their jurisdiction will be considered in the following sections.

§ 353. — Supreme Court in General

The supreme court has original jurisdiction in cases relating to the revenue, in mandamus, and in habeas corpus, and appellate jurisdiction in all other cases as fixed by law, with power to issue writs in aid thereof.

Under the provisions of the constitution vesting judicial powers in the supreme court,² such court has original jurisdiction³ in cases relating to the revenue,⁴ in mandamus,⁵ and in habeas corpus,⁶ and such court has appellate jurisdiction⁷ in all oth-

Expunging judgment or decree

Supreme court may award writ of mandamus, requiring nisi prius court to expunge from its records an order, judgment, or decree entered without jurisdiction.—People ex rel. Barrett v. Shurtleff, 187 N.E. 271, 353 Ill. 248.

Matter of discretion

Supreme court assumes jurisdiction in original mandamus in cases only in exercise of its discretion where there is special reason, and remedy in trial court is ineffective, but may take jurisdiction on that ground, although proceeding in mandamus was pending in local court.—People v. Lueders, 122 N.E. 374, 287 Ill. 107.

Statute regulating practice in mandamus cases is inapplicable to such practice in Supreme court, but practice therein will be made to conform to that in trial courts as nearly as possible.—People ex rel. Huff v. Palmer, 191 N.E. 199, 356 Ill. 563.

Assignment of error

Jurisdiction cannot be conferred on supreme court by erroneous state-er cases.⁸ As the constitution provides for inferior appellate courts, appellate jurisdiction of supreme court is subject to exceptions and limitations resulting from the establishment of such inferior appellate courts;⁹ and except in cases specified by the statute, direct appeals cannot be taken to the supreme court in cases for which an appeal to such other courts is provided.¹⁰ So, under the statute, appeal to the supreme court does not lie from interlocutory orders with respect to the granting of an injunction or appointment of a receiver,¹¹ even where the appellate court attempted to authorize the appeal by granting a certificate of importance.¹²

The statute provides that the supreme court shall be vested with all powers and authority to carry into complete execution all its judgments, decrees, and determinations, in all matters within its jurisdiction, and may issue writs of mandamus, habeas corpus, certiorari,¹³ error,¹⁴ and supersedeas; it may also issue all other writs, not prohibited by law, which may be necessary to enforce the due administration of justice in all matters within its jurisdiction.¹⁵ Statutory provisions concerning ment in assignment of error, nor by assignment of error which has been waived.—Coal Creek Drainage and Levee Dist. v. Sanitary Dist. of Chicago, 159 N.E. 805, 328 Ill. 360.

Former decision

Supreme court will not assume jurisdiction on direct appeal merely to refer to former decision.—Pennsylvania Tank Line v. Jordan, 173 N.E. 181, 341 Ill. 94, transferred, see 260 Ill.App. 397.

Appeals from inferior courts in certain classes of cases may, by virtue of express statutory provision, be taken directly to the supreme court.¹⁷ Where there is no ground for a direct appeal from such a court to the supreme court, the latter court will decline jurisdiction, although the parties do not raise the question.¹⁸

§ 354. — Appellate Courts in General

The appellate courts have jurisdiction to hear appeals from the final judgments, orders, or decrees of the circuit, county, or city courts in any proceeding at law or in chancery other than those required to be appealed directly to the supreme court, and finally to determine appeals from interlocutory orders with respect to injunctions or the appointment of receivers.

The constitution authorizes the legislature to create inferior appellate courts, and pursuant thereto four appellate courts have been created and given appellate jurisdiction¹⁹ only,²⁰ and jurisdiction of all matters of appeals, or writs of error, from the final judgments, orders, or decrees, of any of the circuit courts,²¹ or the superior court of Cook County, or county courts,²² or from the city courts,²³ in any suit or proceeding²⁴ at law²⁵ or in chancery²⁶ other than a criminal case not a misdemeanor, or a case involving a franchise, or freehold, or the validity of a statute.²⁷ Appeals also lie to the ap-

Issuance of writs

(1) In aid of its appellate jurisdiction, the appellate court may issue all writs not prohibited by law, such as certiorari, which may be necessary to enforce the administration of justice in matters before it.—People v. Pam, 114 N.E. 504, 276 Ill. 181.

(2) The appellate court has power to award a writ of mandamus only in furtherance of its appellate jurisdiction.—People v. Haas, 183 N.E. 813, 351 Ill. 68—Hooper v. Rooney, 127 N.E. 711, 293 Ill. 370—Phillips v. Ford, 31 N.E.2d 8, 299 Ill.App. 628—15 C.J. p 1045 note 56 [a].

(3) So, also, although the appellate court does not have original jurisdiction to issue writs of prohibition, it may issue such writs in aid of or to protect its appellate jurisdiction.—People ex rel. Sokoll v. Municipal Court of Chicago, 194 N.E.

242, 359 Ill. 102, affirming 276 Ill.App. 102—15 C.J. p 1045 note 56 [b].

21. Allowance of claim against decedent's estate

An appeal from the circuit court on the allowance of a claim against the estate of a deceased person is properly taken first to the appellate court.—Kolb v. Stephens, 176 Ill.App. 391.

22. Release from capias

Appeal from county court's order, dismissing petition of judgment debtor to be released from capias ad satisfaciendum, is properly taken to appellate court.—Abbrassart v. Bouchard, 241 Ill.App. 484—15 C.J. p 1045 note 64 [a].

23. Municipal court of Chicago

The jurisdiction of the appellate court to review cases from the municipal court of Chicago is not dependent upon the Municipal Court Act, but exists by reason of the act establishing appellate courts, which gives them jurisdiction to review judgments of city courts.—Williams v. Webster Hotel Co., 145 N.E. 622, 315 Ill. 64—Hosking v. Southern Pac. Co., 90 N.E. 669, 243 Ill. 320. Review of proceedings of inferior courts of Illinois see supra § 260.

26. III.—McMahan v. Trautvetter, 137 N.E. 230, 305 Ill. 395. 15 C.J. p 1045 note 68.

Nature of actions included

Within statute, suit or proceeding in chancery is one instituted or carried on in substantial conformity with the forms and modes prescribed by the rules in chancery.—Sebree v. Sebree, 127 N.E. 392, 193 Ill. 228.

No jurisdiction of appeal since proceeding not one in chancery

(1) Proceeding for the appointment of a guardian.—McMahan v. Trautvetter, 137 N.E. 230, 305 Ill. 395.

(2) Under Administration Act §§ 123, 126, proceeding for authority to convey land pursuant to decedent's contract.—Nadig v. Turner, 126 N.E. 101, 291 Ill. 513.

(3) A proceeding under Administration Act §§ 81, 82, for discovery of assets in hands of a third person and to establish a fiduciary relation between him and decedent and require him to turn the assets to the personal representative.—In re Chalfoux's Estate, 230 Ill.App. 199, reversed on other grounds *Runyan v. Jurisdiction not conferred by statute

Jurisdiction of appeals and writs of error in classes of cases which go directly to the supreme court, although not withheld from appellate court by Const. art 6 § 11, providing for creation of such courts, cannot be exercised by appellate courts, because not conferred on them by Appellate Court Act § 8, as amended by L.1887 p 156, specifying jurisdiction of such appellate courts.—Murray v. Hagmann, 146 N.E. 472, 315 Ill. 437—15 C.J. p 1045 note 72 [a].

pellate courts from the final judgments, orders, or decrees of county courts in proceedings for the confirmation of special assessments, for the sale of lands for taxes and special assessments, and in all common-law and attachment cases and cases of forcible entry and detainer.²⁸

The appellate courts have the same authority as was conferred on the supreme court to continue in force injunctions issued by the lower courts;²⁹ and an appeal from an interlocutory order or decree granting an injunction, or overruling a motion to dissolve the same, or enlarging the scope of an injunction order, or appointing a receiver, or giving other or further powers or property to a receiver already appointed, goes to the appellate court, from whose order therein no appeal or writ of error lies to the supreme court.³⁰ The appellate courts have been held to possess the same power as the supreme court to compel a party prosecuting an appeal for delay to pay the damages provided for in the statute.³¹

§ 355. — Other Courts

Circuit courts have such appellate jurisdiction as is or may be provided by law.

Circuit courts have such appellate jurisdiction as is or may be provided by law,³² and in their respective counties, except where appeals lie to other courts, they have jurisdiction of appeals in all matters from the final orders, judgments, and decrees of the county courts.³³

The appellate courts have appellate jurisdiction of

(1) Appeal from judgment under provisions for initiative and referendum involving right to hold office and maintain commission form of government.—In re Smith, 256 Ill. App. 147.

(2) A bill for an injunction involving the construction of a public contract and the law governing such contract.—Penniman v. Bennett, 129 N.E. 741, 296 Ill. 312.

(3) Determination whether statute providing method for obtaining constructive service in chancery cases was complied with.—Illinois Valley Bank v. Newman, 187 N.E. 810, 354 Ill. 38.

(4) Adjudication whether ordinance entitling city to compensation for use of streets, alleys, and sidewalks for posts, poles, wires, etc., was applicable to telephone company.—City of Edwardsville v. Central Union Telephone Co., 134 N.E. 716, 302 Ill. 362.

(5) Appeal from the finding of the court in a suit to recover costs, attorney's fees, and expenses after voluntary dismissal of a proceeding for the condemnation of land.—Valley Terminal Ry. v. Eggman, 222 Ill. App. 457.

§ 356. — Cases Involving Construction of Constitution or Validity of Statute or Ordinance

An appeal goes directly to the supreme court where the case involves a fairly debatable question as to the validity of a statute or ordinance, or construction of the constitution, and is properly presented for review; the appellate court ordinarily may not pass on such issues and an appeal to such court operates as a waiver of the constitutional question.

Under the provisions of the statute, an appeal goes directly to the supreme court where the case involves a construction of the constitution³⁴ or the validity of a statute,³⁵ and also where the case involves the validity of a municipal ordinance, and the trial judge certifies that in his opinion the public interest requires an appeal directly to the supreme court,³⁶ although such certification alone is not sufficient to give jurisdiction if the validity of the ordinance is not in fact involved.³⁷ It follows, as a general rule, that in all of such cases the appellate courts are without jurisdiction;³⁸ and the

To what constitution applicable

(1) Act providing for direct appeals where "construction of Constitution" is involved includes constitutions of United States and of state.—Van Dyke v. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n, 193 N.E. 490, 358 Ill. 458.

(2) It does not include the constitution of another state.—Roberts v. Sauerman Bros., 18 N.E.2d 853, 370 Ill. 344, transferred, see 20 N.E.2d 849, 300 Ill.App. 213.

Question not passed on

Where a full review of the case involves a consideration of constitutional questions, the supreme court may hear the appeal, even though it determines the case on other grounds and hence finds it unnecessary to pass on the constitutional question.—People ex rel. Farwell v. Kelly, 12 N.E.2d 614, 367 Ill. 631—People ex rel. Farwell v. Kelly, 12 N.E.2d 612, 367 Ill. 616—Brown v. Federal Life Ins. Co., 187 N.E. 484, 353 Ill. 541—*People v. Constitutional authority

The jurisdiction of the supreme court to review judgments of the appellate court in cases where the validity of a statute is involved is conferred by Const. art 6 § 11, and not by the Practice Act.—Bagdonas v. Liberty Land & Investment Co., 140 N.E. 49, 309 Ill. 103.

Certificate of trial judge

Supreme court's determination that validity of statute is involved and not trial judge's certificate to that effect determines whether court may hear case on direct appeal.—Brown v. Federal Life Ins. Co., 187 N.E. 484, 353 Ill. 541.

Necessity of certification

(1) Supreme court may hear appeal involving validity of municipal ordinance only where judge certifies that appeal is required or where construction of constitution is involved, and, in absence of certification or raising of constitutional question in trial court, it has no jurisdiction of appeal.—City of Greenville v. Nowlan, 279 Ill.App. 311.

right to raise such questions is waived by taking an appeal to an appellate court and assigning errors of which that court has jurisdiction.³⁹ However, it has been held that questions as to the validity of municipal ordinances may be heard by the appellate court where assumption of jurisdiction by the supreme court is precluded because the trial judge did not certify the appeal thereto, and construction of the constitution is not involved.⁴⁰

In order to authorize a direct appeal to the supreme court some constitutional question must be fairly presented⁴¹ and such constitutional question

Validity partly involved

(1) Where a party by appealing to the appellate court has waived his right to have constitutional issues decided, the appellate court may pass on other issues in the case, within its jurisdiction.—People v. Eaton, 233 Ill.App. 504.

Municipal ordinance

Ill.—Schoellkopf v. City of Chicago, 120 N.E. 778, 285 Ill. 453.

Necessity of determination

To give court jurisdiction on ground that validity of statute is involved, statute must be foundation of asserted right or defense, so that determination of its validity is necessary to decision.—Hawthorne Kennel Club v. Swanson, 171 N.E. 140, 329 Ill. 220, transferred, see 237 Ill. App. 499—People v. Massieon, 204 Ill.App. 70, affirmed 116 N.E. 639, 279 Ill. 312.

Constitutional question held not presented

(1) Where constitutionality of statute is not expressly challenged by allegation in the petition or assignment of error.—People v. Davies, 183 N.E. 11, 350 Ill. 48, transferred, see 269 Ill.App. 306, and affirmed 188 N.E. 337, 354 Ill. 163—People ex rel. Poage v. Walsh, 174 N.E. 881, 343 Ill. 136, transferred, see 264 Ill.App. 273.

(2) By merely alleging that trial court's construction of act rendered it unconstitutional, without particularizing the provisions violated.—McIlvaine v. City Nat. Bank & Trust Co., 21 N.E.2d 737, 371 Ill. 565—Economy Dairy Co. v. Kerner, 20 N.E.2d 568, 371 Ill. 261—People v. Spencer, 15 N.E.2d 703, 369 Ill. 57, transferred, see 16 N.E.2d 925, 296 Ill.App. 444.
15 C.J. p 1047 note 83 [b], [d] (4).

(3) Contention that court misapplied law to facts of case or misconstrued law.—Wilson v. P. ochnow, 187 N.E. 914, 354 Ill. 98—Standard Motors Securities Corporation v. Yates Co., 169 N.E. 164, 337 Ill. 250, transferred, see 257 Ill.App. 394—15 C.J. p 1047 note 83 [d] (4).

(4) Contentions that search warrant was improperly issued or did not authorize search in particular instance, raising only questions of law and procedure.—People v. Martens, 179 N.E. 275, 338 Ill. 170—People v. Bird, 187 N.E. 28, 335 Ill. 447.

(5) Contention that trial court erred in exercise of its discretion and hence denied "due process"—Benton v. Marr, 5 N.E.2d 466, 364 Ill. 628, transferred, see 10 N.E.2d 864, 291 Ill.App. 619.

(6) Where only the validity of judgment or decree is involved.—E. L. Mansure Co. v. City of Chicago, 23 N.E.2d 32, 372 Ill. 156—Dillenburg v. Heilgren, 21 N.E.2d 393, 371 Ill. 452, remanding 10 N.E.2d 44, 291 Ill. App. 448—Kellogg v. Kellogg, 20 N.E.2d 555, 371 Ill. 241—Economy Dairy Co. v. Kerner, 20 N.E.2d 568, 371 Ill. 261—Rau v. Hubbell Fertilizer Co., 117 N.E. 1001, 281 Ill. 288.

(7) Where determination of constitutional question is immaterial and not necessary to determination of case.—Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Richman, 4 N.E.2d 76, 364 Ill. 234, transferred, see 11 N.E.2d 126, 292 Ill.App. 261, and 11 N.E.2d 132—Comstock v. (8) Contention as to unconstitutionality of provision of statute not injuriously affecting the complaining party, where invalidity of such provision would not render whole act unconstitutional.—People v. Day, 145 N.E. 160, 313 Ill. 531.

(9) Where evidence shows waiver of any violation of constitutional rights by unlawful search.—People v. Akers, 158 N.E. 410, 327 Ill. 137.

Judgment by court of foreign state

(1) Ordinarily no constitutional question for determination of supreme court is raised by question as to rendition of judgment by, and jurisdiction of, court of another state under constitution of that state.—Roberts v. Sauerman Bros., 18 N.E.2d 883, 370 Ill. 344, transferred, see 20 N.E.2d 849, 300 Ill.App. 213.

(2) Only where facts recited in record of such judgment show either lack of jurisdiction of subject matter or of parties may direct appeal be taken to supreme court.—Borman v. Borman, 5 N.E.2d 225, 364 Ill. 601, transferred, see 9 N.E.2d 667, 291 Ill. App. 135—Van Dyke v. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n, 193 N.E. 490, 353 Ill. 458.

Criminal cases generally

(1) The text rule has in many cases been applied to criminal prosecutions.—People v. Fuller, 17 N.E.2d 18, 369 Ill. 492—People v. Pointer, 180 N.E. 796, 348 Ill. 277, transferred, thereon,⁴³ and must be shown by the record;⁴⁴ but a failure to raise such question in the trial court does not preclude consideration by the supreme court where the question did not arise until after the judgment complained of was entered.⁴⁵ The mere assertion that the validity of a statute is involved is not sufficient to confer on the supreme court jurisdiction on direct appeal,⁴⁶ nor can such jurisdiction be conferred by a mere denial in a pleading of the validity of the statute,⁴⁷ although it has been held that the issue is sufficiently raised where the bill avers and the answer denies that a statute is unconstitutional.⁴⁸ The question must also be fairly debatable;⁴⁹ and so, where see People v. Tidrick, 269 Ill.App. 191—People v. Maffei, 146 N.E. 131, 315 Ill. 226—People v. Fensky, 125 N.E. 292, 290 Ill. 612—People v. Grady, 217 Ill.App. 490.

(2) It has been held, however, that the supreme court has jurisdiction of a writ of error to review a conviction under an allegedly unconstitutional statute notwithstanding the constitutional question was not raised at trial.—People v. Clardy, 165 N.E. 638, 334 Ill. 160.

Necessity of ruling

Record must affirmatively disclose that constitutional question was not only presented for decision but was passed on by trial court.—Holsman v. Campbell Realty Co., 21 N.E.2d 744, 371 Ill. 614—Kellogg v. Kellogg, 20 N.E.2d 585, 371 Ill. 241—Pollack v. Du Page County, 20 N.E.2d 273, 371 Ill. 199—Ryan v. City of Chicago, 2 N.E.2d 913, 363 Ill. 607, transferred, see 8 N.E.2d 369, 290 Ill.App. 604.

Primary inquiry

(1) It must appear that constitutional question was primary inquiry in trial court, and, even though question was there raised but final decree was entered on other issues, no constitutional question is presented to supreme court.—Ryan v. City of Chicago, 2 N.E.2d 913, 363 Ill. 607, transferred, see 8 N.E.2d 369, 290 Ill.App. 604.

(2) Question generally held sufficiently raised.—Burket v. Reliance Bank & Trust Co., 11 N.E.2d 6, 367 Ill. 196—15 C.J. p 1047 note 34 [b].

(3) Oral motion to quash amounted to general demurrer sufficient to raise question of constitutionality of statute on which prosecution was based, although no specific constitutional provisions were called to trial court's attention.—People v. Eisen, 191 N.E. 219, 357 Ill. 105.

(4) It has been held, however, that motions to quash and in arrest were insufficient to raise question where court was not apprised that constitutionality of statute was in issue.—People v. Ugo, 145 N.E. 633, 315 Ill. 74.

(5) So the mere fact that constitution guarantees immunity from unreasonable search and seizure does not show that constitutional question is raised by motion to quash search warrant issued under statute not claimed to violate such provision.—

People v. Blenz, 148 N.E. 249, 317 Ill. 639.

Deschauer, 141 N.E. 761, 310 Ill. 209.

Statute admittedly valid

An appeal calling for construction of a statute, which is enacted to give effect to constitutional provisions, does not involve a constitutional question, where validity of statute is admitted, and no claim is made that adoption of any particular construction of constitutional is that certain parts of a statute have been repealed.⁵⁴ So, also, where a claim or defense is based on statute, the appellate court has jurisdiction to determine whether such statute exists.⁵⁵

Interlocutory orders

As indicated in § 354 supra, appeals from interlocutory orders with respect to injunctions lie only to the appellate court, whose order therein is final, and accordingly, where the appeal from such order involves a constitutional question, it has been held that no provision exists for entertaining it in either the supreme court or the appellate court.⁵⁶ Other cases, however, hold that the appellate court may pass on a constitutional question raised in such an appeal.⁵⁷

§ 357. — Cases Involving Freeholds

An appeal lies only to the supreme court in cases in which a freehold is directly involved, and such is the case where title is so put in issue by the pleadings as necessarily to require a decision thereon, even though the judgment does not result in one party's gaining, and the other's losing, the estate, but not where the appeal relates to other matters.

Under the provisions of the statute, an appeal lies direct to the supreme court in cases in which a freehold is involved.⁵⁸ The appellate court generally has no jurisdiction of an appeal in such case;⁵⁹ and an appellant who takes his case to the appellate court, or an appellee who submits his case for a hearing on the merits therein, waives the right to have any question involving a freehold considered, or to take a further appeal on the ground that such a question is involved.⁶⁰

A freehold is involved, within the meaning of the rule stated, where the whole merits of the cause cannot be adjudicated without determining the question of freehold, or where the necessary result of the judgment is that one party will lose, and the other gain, a freehold estate, or where the title is so put in issue by the pleadings that a decision of such issue is necessarily required;⁶¹ and where provision will affect decision of question raised.—People v. Cermak, 148 N.E. 382, 317 Ill. 590.

15 C.J. p 1048 note 97.

Successive appeals

The supreme court has jurisdiction of an action involving a freehold even though the case is improperly presented to it by successive appeals, rather than by direct appeal as provided in the statute.—Anderson v. Anderson, 170 N.E. 212, 338 Ill. 309.

What constitutes "freehold"

(1) Life estate is a freehold.—Town of Kingston v. Anderson, 220 Ill.App. 604—15 C.J. p 1048 note 97 [b].

(2) A conveyance or restriction for any term of years does not constitute a freehold interest in real estate.—Deegan v. Heckard, 145 N.E. 160, 313 Ill. 359—Zimmerman v. Dawson, 222 Ill.App. 212.

(3) The term "freehold" does not include a mere right to do that which in equity will entitle a party to a freehold.—Callner v. Greenberg, 23 N.E.2d 29, 372 Ill. 176—Davis v. Oliver, 20 N.E.2d 532, 371 Ill. 287—Taylorville Savings, Loan & Building Ass'n v. McBride, 17 N.E.2d 221, 369 Ill. 544—*Johnson v. 15 C.J. p 1048 note 97 [a].

Freehold in another state

Supreme court had jurisdiction of appeal from court which had jurisdiction over the parties, where freehold was put in issue, notwithstanding freehold was located in another state.—Sewell v. Sewell, 1 N.E.2d 492, 363 Ill. 166—White Star Min. Co. v. Hultberg, 77 N.E. 327, 220 Ill. 578.

77. See Kleinschmidt v. Kleinschmidt, 209 Ill.App. 139.

15 C.J. p 1048 note 98.

The rule has two exceptions: One is where the suit is commenced before a justice of the peace or in the county court; the other is where a freehold is involved in the original judgment or decree, but not in the points assigned for error.—Ward v. Mississippi River Power Co., 188 Ill. App. 305, transferred, see 107 N.E. 115, 265 Ill. 486.

Determination as to whether freehold involved

In all cases where an appeal is taken to the appellate court, it has jurisdiction to investigate the question whether a freehold is in fact involved, although, if it finds that such is the case, it has no further jurisdiction.—Ward v. Mississippi River Power Co., 188 Ill.App. 305—15 C.J. p 1055 note 28.

Interlocutory injunctions

As indicated in § 354 supra, appeals from interlocutory orders with respect to injunctions lie only to the appellate court and it has accordingly been held that it may exercise such jurisdiction notwithstanding a freehold is involved.—Koelling v. Foster, 150 Ill.App. 130—Carterville Min. Co. v. Coal Belt R. Co., 116 Ill.App. 158—New Ohio Washed Coal Co. v. Coal Belt R. Co., 116 Ill.App. 153—15 C.J. p 1050 note 3 [a].

Flea of liberum tenementum

(1) Such plea is ordinarily sufficient to raise issue as to the ownership of the freehold.—Tomhave v. Vortman, 113 N.E. 46, 274 Ill. 28.

(2) But the fact that appeal is from judgment in suit for damages to land in which the plea of liberum tenementum was set up does not confer appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court where no evidence is offered in support of the plea and there is no assignment of error involving ownership.—Coal Creek Drainage and Levee Dist. v. Sanitary Dist. of Chicago, 159 N.E. 805, 328 Ill. 360.

Decision of trial court

In determining whether a freehold is involved, it is immaterial which way trial court decided the issue.—Swinson v. Sodaman, 17 N.E. 2d 40, 369 Ill. 442, transferred, see 20 N.E.2d 623, 300 Ill.App. 31.

Freehold involved

(1) In action against city for damages to property resulting from change of street grade, sidewalks, and alley adjacent to the property.—Grunevald v. City of Chicago, Ill. App., 18 N.E.2d 708.

(2) In action for damages to land where defendant denied plaintiff's title and plaintiff introduced title deeds, which was only evidence of title.—Brand v. Union Elevated R. Co., 115 N.E. 532, 277 Ill. 356.

(3) Where bill for injunction, together with cross bill and answer, puts in issue existence of freehold, which must be decided.—Sanitary Dist. of Chicago v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 116 N.E. 161, 278 Ill. 529.

(4) Where it is the purpose of the suit to set aside a sale of real estate.—Rabblitt v. Frank C. Weber & Co., 130 N.E. 787, 297 Ill. 491.

(5) Where pleadings in judgment creditor's action to have condemnation judgment applied on judgment on theory that debtor was owner of land condemned put in issue ownership of land condemned.—Paxton v. Gubbins, 21 N.E.2d 300, 371 Ill. 435.

(6) Where suit to recover penalty for failure to rebuild dock was based on proof that public owned freehold of land underlying water in slip.—City of Chicago v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 150 N.E. 250, 319 Ill. 351.

Freehold not involved

(1) Appeal from order appointing a guardian for an infant, although latter possessed real property.—McMahan v. Trautvetter, 131 N.E. 127, 297 Ill. 604.

(2) Appeal from order determining heirs of deceased person, neither investing nor divesting title to real estate.—Saunders v. Saunders, 153 N.E. 593, 323 Ill. 43—Worsley v. Welch, 147 N.E. 279, 317 Ill. 90.

(3) Application for a writ of assistance which involves only the question of petitioner's right to the possession.—McDonnell v. Hartnett, 153 N.E. 666, 323 Ill. 87—Kerr v. Brawley, 61 N.E. 1057, 193 Ill. 205.

(4) Bill by owner of interest in land to redeem from sheriff's sale.—

Parsell v. Parsell, 190 N.E. 360, 356 Ill. 183.

(5) In action to compel removal of encroaching projections from building.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Queen City Bldg. Corporation, 145 N.E. 184, 313 Ill. 539.

(6) In probate case involving sole question of administration of estate.—Healea v. Verne, 175 N.E. 562, 343 Ill. 325.

(7) If defendant can do some act to defeat the suit and prevent disturbance of title, as by making payment, even though the litigation may result in a loss of a freehold.—Christie v. Brouillette, 182 N.E. 746, 350 Ill. 60—Home Building & Loan Ass'n of Paris v. Gaumer, 181 N.E. 644, 349 Ill. 226, transferred, see 269 Ill.App. 196—Blodgett v. Luke, 192 N.E. 559, 357 Ill. 512.

(8) In appeal from decree enjoining forfeiture of lease with provision for ultimate conveyance of title, involving only construction of contract.—United Electric Coal Cos. v. Keefer Coal Co. of Illinois, 170 N.E. 193, 338 Ill. 238.

(9) In bill for accounting of proceeds of leasehold, not seeking to enforce sale of leasehold interest.—Stathopoulos v. Korson, 168 N.E. 877, 336 Ill. 205.

(10) In bill for dissolution of partnership and an accounting which did not pray that complainant be decreed to have an interest in real estate.—Parish v. Bainum, 126 N.E. 129, 291 Ill. 374.

(11) Question as to deduction of taxes and costs from award in condemnation proceedings.—City of Chicago v. McDonough, 184 N.E. 322, 351 Ill. 200, transferred, see 273 Ill.App. 392.

(12) Suit to cancel an agreement by which beneficiary in estate consisting of realty and personality had agreed to pay another a portion of his distributive share and assigned an undivided interest therein.—Wylie v. O'Connor, 2 N.E.2d 919, 363 Ill. 615.

(13) Suit to restrain violation of building regulation.—Brown v. Piereson, 161 N.E. 87, 330 Ill. 92, transferred, see 250 Ill.App. 214.

(14) When the litigation, under a certain contingency, may result in the loss of a freehold but does not necessarily do so.—Wylie v. O'Connor, 2 N.E.2d 919, 363 Ill. 615—Home Building & Loan Ass'n of Paris v. Gaumer, 181 N.E. 644, 349 Ill. 226, transferred, see 269 Ill.App. 196.

the title is thus in issue an appeal goes direct to the supreme court even though the judgment or decree does not result in one party's gaining, and the other's losing, the estate;⁶² but if a freehold is only incidentally or collaterally involved, an appeal cannot be taken directly to the supreme court, but must go to the appellate court.⁶³

The fact that an action as originally brought involved a freehold does not authorize an appeal direct to the supreme court where no objection is made to the judgment or decree in so far as it affects the freehold, and the appeal relates solely to matters in which the freehold is not involved.⁶⁴

Particular matters. The foregoing principles with respect to the conditions under which a freehold is involved so as to permit direct appeal to the supreme court have been applied in actions involving title, or the transfer of title, to land;⁶⁵ and suits to quiet title.⁶⁶ The foregoing principles

(15) Where determination appealed from concerns only procedure and affirmance or reversal would not affect issue of freehold.—Carney v. Quinn, 193 N.E. 455, 358 Ill. 446—Anderson v. Anderson, 181 N.E. 693, 349 Ill. 40—Rode v. Eftimoff, 179 N.E. 853, 347 Ill. 430, transferred, see 267 Ill.App. 466—Rubin v. Midlinsky, 158 N.E. 395, 327 Ill. 89—Smith v. Johnson, 144 N.E. 318, 313 Ill. 17.

(16) Where main relief sought was right to redeem shares of stock and for an accounting, and reconveyance of real estate was incidental thereto.—Schmitt v. Wright, 192 N.E. 562, 357 Ill. 509.

(17) Where on record no ruling was asked for or made by the trial court upon the question of title.—Christie v. Sanitary Dist. of Chicago, 162 N.E. 126, 330 Ill. 558.

(18) Where plea putting freehold in issue is waived or abandoned as by failing to present evidence under the plea.—Christie v. Sanitary Dist. of Chicago, supra.

(19) "Where the right to do certain things which in equity would entitle the party to a freehold might or might not be exercised, or where the conveyance in question depends upon subsequent acts which might not be required or performed."—Wyllie v. O'Connor, 2 N.E.2d 919, 920, 363 Ill. 615—Long v. Wilson Stove & Mfg. Co., 188 N.E. 411, 412, 354 Ill. 465.

(20) Where title is not put in issue by pleadings and there are no assignments of error respecting question.—Lederer v. Rosenston, 160 N.E. 154, 329 Ill. 89—Gits v. Ullrich, 123 N.E. 528, 288 Ill. 527.

Not object of recovery

Freehold is involved if title is directly put in issue by pleadings, even though it is not the subject sought to be recovered.—City of Chicago v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 150 N.E. 250, 319 Ill. 351.

Probate proceedings to sell land

(1) A freehold has been held involved in probate proceedings to sell realty.—Chapin v. Treasurer of State of Illinois, 198 N.E. 668, 361 Ill. 645.

(2) It has been similarly held of an order approving sale of testator's real estate to pay debts, where approval of sale would divest appelings to set aside fraudulent conveyances;⁸³ suits to set aside judgments;⁸⁴ suits to enforce liens on land;⁸⁵ proceedings relating to foreclosure of mortgages on real estate;⁸⁶ bills to redeem mortgaged property, or to have a deed declared a mortgage;⁸⁷

lants of title to property devised to them by will.—Retzinger v. Retzinger, 169 N.E. 176, 337 Ill. 378.

(3) So also, where on petition to sell land to pay debts, heirs denied that deceased owned it at time of death.—Howe v. Brown, 123 N.E. 46, 287 Ill. 532.

(4) However, it is ordinarily held that a freehold is not involved in proceeding of an administrator to sell land of deceased to pay debts since payment could avoid disturbance of title.—Brayshaw v. Trisler, 118 N.E. 771, 282 Ill. 405.—Retzinger v. Retzinger, 239 Ill.App. 127, reversed on other grounds 162 N.E. 155, 331 Ill. 102.

§ 358. — Cases Involving Franchises

An appeal lies only to the supreme court in cases in which a franchise is involved and any such question is waived by submitting the merits of the case to the appellate court.

Under the provisions of the statute, an appeal lies direct to the supreme court in cases in which a franchise is involved;⁸⁹ and the appellate court is without jurisdiction in such a case,⁹⁰ although its jurisdiction does extend to determining whether a franchise is really involved.⁹¹ A party who takes an appeal to, or on appeal by the adverse party submits his case to, the appellate court on the merits waives his right to insist upon any question involving a franchise, or to claim a further appeal upon the ground that such franchise is involved.⁹²

§ 359. — Cases Relating to Revenue

Generally an appeal goes directly to the supreme court in cases in which the revenue is directly involved.

As is provided by the statute, in cases relating to revenues, an appeal goes directly to the supreme court,⁹³ and the appellate court has no jurisdiction of appeals in such case,⁹⁴ except where the appeal

Meaning of term

"Franchise" as used in text rule, is a special privilege conferred by grant from the sovereign power of the government, and which does not belong to the citizen of common right.—People v. Continental Beneficial Ass'n, 117 N.E. 482, 280 Ill. 113—15 C.J. p 1055 note 30 [a].

Validity or existence of franchise

In order to authorize an appeal direct to the supreme court there must be a question as to the validity or existence of the corporation or of the franchise, or of the right to exercise the privileges granted by the franchise; a mere question as to the construction to be placed on the powers granted by a franchise is not sufficient.—Wennersten v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., 113 N.E. 148, 274 Ill. 189—15 C.J. p 1056 note 33.

Franchise involved in

(1) Proceeding for mandamus to require county supervisors to act on petition for new township and to create the township.—People v. Board of Sup'rs of Logan County, 139 N.E. 898, 308 Ill. 543.

(2) Other cases see 15 C.J. p 1055 note 30 [b].

Franchise not involved in

(1) Actions involving company's right to locate poles, etc., in streets.—City of Sullivan v. Central Illinois Public Service Co., 122 N.E. 58, 287 Ill. 19.

(2) Mandamus proceeding by corporation to compel village to issue and deliver bonds to corporation in payment of a judgment.—People ex rel. Charles De Leuw & Co. v. Village of Midlothian, 18 N.E.2d 233, 370 Ill. 223.

(3) Suit to enjoin foreign corporation from further transacting business in state, since it affects only its license to do business.—People v. Continental Beneficial Ass'n, 117 N.E. 482, 280 Ill. 113.

15 C.J. p 1055 note 30 [c].

A public office is not a franchise, and hence a franchise is not ordinarily involved in proceedings with respect to the title or right to a public office.—People ex rel. Hyatt v. § 361. — Amount in Controversy

Except where the appeal is required to be allowed by the constitution, the supreme court may permit an appeal from the appellate court in actions ex contractu and in cases sounding in damages only if the judgment exclusive of costs is for more than the amount fixed by the statute.

In a case in which an appeal from the appellate court to the supreme court is not specifically required by the constitution to be allowed, the statute provides that the supreme court may require the case to be certified to it for review, as appears in § 362 infra; however, Civil Practice Act § 75, Smith-Hurd Ann.St. c 110 § 199, expressly states that such review is to be permitted in actions ex contractu, exclusive of actions involving a penalty, and in all cases sounding in damages, only if the judgment exclusive of costs is for more than fifteen hundred dollars.³

Former statutory provisions

(1) The statute formerly provided that appeals or writs of error should lie to the supreme court from the final judgments, orders, or decrees of the appellate courts in all cases except where the amount involved in an action ex contractu, or the judgment in the trial court in an action sounding in damages, was less than one thousand dollars, exclusive of costs; and that appeals or writs of error

§ 362. — Appeals from Appellate Courts

Except where allowance of the appeal is required by the constitution, the judgment or decree of the appellate court is final unless such court certifies the case for appeal or unless, in a limited class of cases, the supreme court grants leave to appeal.

As is provided by the constitution, appeals and writs of error lie to the supreme court from inferior appellate courts in all criminal cases, and cases in which a franchise or freehold or the validity of a statute is involved, and in such other cases as may be provided by law.⁴ Except for the foregoing cases in which appeals from the appellate courts are specifically required to be allowed, it is provided by the statute that the judgment or decrees of the appellate court shall be final in all cases,⁵ unless should lie to the supreme court where the amount claimed in the pleadings exceeded one thousand dollars and there was no trial of an issue of fact in the lower court.—Schulman v. Moser, 119 N.E. 936, 284 Ill. 134.

(2) For adjudications under this statute with respect to actions included and amount in controversy see 15 C.J. p 1042 notes 39-41, p 1044 note 43.

(3) A later statute contained provisions similar to those of the statute contained in the text rule, except that the amount of the judgment required to confer jurisdiction was one thousand dollars.—Dime Savings & Trust Co. v. Watson, 119 N.E. 285, 283 Ill. 276—15 C.J. p 1044 note 47.

(4) Decisions construing such later statute see infra this note.

To what actions applicable

(1) The limitation as to amount is applicable to actions at law and suits in equity where the object of the suit is the recovery of money only and no other independent relief is sought, the words "in actions ex contractu . . . and in cases sounding in damages" referring to the nature of the cause of action, and not to the form of proceeding by which a cause of action may be enforced.—Lansing v. Dempster, 99 N.E. 254, 255 Ill. 161, dismissing certiorari 166 Ill.App. 261.

(2) Proceeding to establish claim against estate is action ex contractu within text rule.—Dime Savings & Trust Co. v. Watson, 119 N.E. 285, 283 Ill. 276.

(4) Purpose of bill to remove a cloud from title to land, to cancel a contract of sale and to enjoin any further act by defendant purchaser to enforce contract, was not to recover money or property, so that right of review was not determined by amount involved.—Lang v. Hedenberg, 115 N.E. 566, 277 Ill. 368, affirming 198 Ill.App. 470, and Summers v. Hedenberg, 198 Ill.App. 460.

(5) Right to writ to review judgment in action of forcible entry and detainer is not controlled by amount of money judgment, it not being an action ex contractu or a case sounding in damages.—Shulman v. Moser, 119 N.E. 936, 284 Ill. 134.

Amount of judgment

(1) Whether supreme court has jurisdiction on account of amount involved depends upon judgment in trial court and not in appellate court.—Coppola v. Washington Safety Deposit Co., 117 N.E. 781, 281 Ill. 43, Ann.Cas. 1918C 906, reversing 203 Ill.App. 221.

(2) If claim in suit is for costs and attorney's fees, which are allowed as part of costs, supreme court has jurisdiction, if amount involved is more than that required by statute, since allowance of such costs may be basis of action ex contractu.—Dime Savings & Trust Co. v. Watson, 119 N.E. 285, 283 Ill. 276.

§ 364. Indiana

The jurisdiction and powers of the supreme court and of other courts having appellate jurisdiction in Indiana are discussed infra §§ 365–368.

§ 365. — Supreme Court in General

The Indiana supreme court is the highest judicial tribunal having appellate jurisdiction within the state. The authority of the supreme court to consider cases on appeal is defined by statute.

The supreme court is the highest judicial tribunal having appellate jurisdiction within the state,¹⁰ and it may determine the jurisdiction of all courts within the state,¹¹ including the appellate court.¹² Within the proper exercise of its constitutional powers the court is supreme over the other two departments of the state government,¹³ and the legislature cannot deprive the court of final jurisdiction of appeals.¹⁴ The authority of the supreme court, however, to consider cases on appeal is defined by statute enacted pursuant to the constitutional provision vesting in the legislature the power to regulate the jurisdiction of the several courts of the state.¹⁵

Under statutes so providing, appeals in certain classes of appealable cases may be taken directly to the supreme court.¹⁶ Among such classes of cases are cases in which there is a question duly pre-

Transfer from supreme court

(1) Where direct appeal is taken to supreme court in case involving no question authorizing such appeal, supreme court may transfer the cause to the appellate court.—Dillenburgh v. Hellgren, 21 N.E.2d 393, 371 Ill. 452, remanding 10 N.E.2d 44, 291 Ill.App. 448.—Davis v. Oliver, 20 N.E.2d 582, 371 Ill. 287.—Continental Casualty Co. v. Armour, 89 N.E. 356, 241 Ill. 145.

(2) However, where the only objection raised on direct appeal is a constitutional one which the supreme court holds not presented, it may dismiss the appeal rather than transfer it to the appellate court.—De La Cour v. De La Cour, 2 N.E.2d 896, 363 Ill. 545.

Transfer from appellate court

(1) Litant in appellate court may by motion suggest transfer of cause for any good reason.—Genslinger v. New Illinois Athletic Club of Chicago, 252 Ill.App. 298, transferred, see 163 N.E. 707, 332 Ill. 316, reversed on other grounds 171 N.E. 514, 339 Ill. 426.

(2) Where an appeal is submitted to the appellate court on a question of which it has no jurisdiction, such appeal may be transferred by the appellate court to the supreme court.—Kowalczyk v. Swift & Co., 148 N.E. 59, 317 Ill. 312, reversing 233 Ill.App. 337.—Jackson v. Winans, 122 N.E. 611, 287 Ill. 382.—People v. Eitel, 83 N.E. 86, 231 Ill. 38.—*Mason v. (3) However, the cause need not be so transferred where the pleadings and record are insufficient to preserve the objection which would entitle the case to be directly appealed to the supreme court.—School Directors of District No. 184 v. Briggs, 266 Ill.App. 263.—Hardy v. Dobler, 248 Ill.App. 361.

Where the amount in controversy is under fifty dollars, and an appeal is taken under Burns' St.Annot.1914 § 1391, which allows appeals in such cases where the question involved relates to the validity of a franchise or an ordinance, etc., the supreme court has no power to determine whether the trial court reached a proper conclusion on the merits, the appeal being permitted for the sole purpose of presenting the question involved in the exception.—Essington v. Bowman, 121 N.E. 548, 69 Ind. App. 184.

mandate to particular inferior courts to compel the performance by the latter of their legal duties,³⁶ and to issue writs of prohibition to such courts to restrict them to their lawful jurisdictions.³⁷

The supreme court has no power to grant stays of execution except in aid of its appellate jurisdiction over cases pending on appeal.³⁸

§ 366. — Appellate Court in General

The appellate court of Indiana has jurisdiction of appeals other than those directed by statute to be taken directly to the supreme court.

Under the Indiana statutes, all appealable cases, other than those in which it is specified that an appeal shall be taken directly to the supreme court, are to be taken to the appellate court.³⁹ The appellate court has no jurisdiction to determine a constitutional question,⁴⁰ although it may give an opinion as to the constitutionality of a statute in answer to a certified question.⁴¹ Except under certain conditions, the appellate court's jurisdiction is final.⁴²

The appellate court has power to issue writs of mandamus only in aid of its appellate powers and functions.⁴³

§ 367. — Other Courts

The circuit court of Indiana has such appellate jurisdiction as is provided by law, with which, in general, the superior court's appellate jurisdiction is concurrent.

The circuit court has such appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred by law.⁴⁴ The superior court has, in general, concurrent appellate jurisdiction with the circuit court.⁴⁵

§ 368. — Transfer of Causes

If a case is erroneously appealed to the wrong court, that court should make an order for its transfer to the proper court. There are various statutory grounds for transfer of a case from the appellate to the supreme court.

36. Petition for writ held insufficient
Ind.—State v. Cox, 141 N.E. 225, 227, 193 Ind. 519.

"Complaint for mandamus" held improper procedure.—State v. Cox, supra.

Where allegation that defendants controlled inferior courts and had seized records in supreme court does not authorize the latter to assume jurisdiction to give original mandatory and injunctive relief where remedy by appeal was available.—Stephenson v. Daly, 186 N.E. 300, 205 Ind. 372.

Under former statute, writ did not issue to probate court.—State v. Chambers, 181 N.E. 282, 203 Ind. 523.

37. Ind.—State ex rel. Youngblood v. Warrick Circuit Court of Warrick County, 196 N.E. 254, 208 Ind. 594—Murphy v. Daly, 188 N.E. 769, 206 Ind. 179.

Interference with discretion

Supreme court will not issue writ of prohibition to interfere with exercise of trial court's discretion.—State ex rel. American Trust & Savings Bank v. Superior Court of Vanderburgh County, 188 N.E. 203, 206 Ind. 1—State ex rel. Weatherholt v. Perry Circuit Court, 185 N.E. 510, 204 Ind. 673.

Scope of writs held not extended

Statutory jurisdiction of supreme court to issue writs of prohibition to particular inferior courts does not extend or enlarge scope of such writs as recognized at common law.—State v. Gleason, 119 N.E. 9, 187 Ind. 297.

Executive officer

Supreme court has no original jurisdiction to control by writ of prohibition acts of executive officer on theory either that he is exceeding his own official authority or is co-operating with judge who is exceeding his power.—State v. Cameron, 181 N.E. 160, 203 Ind. 526.

Under former statute, writ did not issue to municipal court.—State ex rel. Castle v. Cameron, 4 N.E.2d 533, 210 Ind. 599—State v. Cameron, 181 N.E. 160, 203 Ind. 526.

39. Ind.—Purcell v. Woodward, 130 N.E. 404, 190 Ind. 372.

Amount in controversy

With certain exceptions, no appeal may be taken to the appellate court in any civil case where the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest and costs, does not exceed fifty dollars.—Jerzakowski v. City of South Bend, 145 N.E. 520, 82 Ind.App. 132.

Appeal from judgment of juvenile court must be taken to appellate court.—Taughinbaugh v. State, 163 N.E. 598, 200 Ind. 334.

Appellate court held to have jurisdiction

(1) Of appeal from superior court sitting as court of claims.—State v. Wright, 162 N.E. 695, 89 Ind.App. 244, denying rehearing 161 N.E. 839, 89 Ind.App. 244.

(2) Of appeal from final order appointing receiver for bank.—Farmers' Deposit Bank v. State, 166 N.E. 285, 201 Ind. 117, transferred 166 N.E. 287, 89 Ind.App. 302.

(3) Of appeal from judgment relieving party from judgment taken through mistake.—General Outdoor Advertising Co. v. City of Indianapolis, Department of Public Parks, 172 N.E. 309, 202 Ind. 85, 72 A.L.R. 453.

By transfer from the supreme court, the appellate court may obtain jurisdiction of an appeal the subject matter of which is within the supreme court's jurisdiction.—Piereson v. Republic Casualty Co., 160 N.E. 43, 200 Ind. 350.

Under the statute so providing, if any case is erroneously appealed to the wrong court, that court should make an order for its transfer to the proper court; and the appeal stands as if originally filed in the right court.⁴⁶ Under the statute, where two of the judges of either division are of the opinion that a ruling precedent of the supreme court is erroneous, the cause must be transferred to the supreme court⁴⁷ with a written statement of the reasons for such opinion.⁴⁸ Also, where a petition for a rehearing is overruled, the losing party may file in the supreme court an application for the transfer of the case to the supreme court,⁴⁹ on the ground that the opinion of the appellate court contravenes a ruling precedent of the supreme court,⁵⁰ or that a new question of law is directly involved and was decided erroneously.⁵¹ A case will also be transferred to the supreme court where the latter's decisions

(2) When once transferred, the supreme court has no authority to re-transfer the case back to the appellate court.—Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Peck, 88 N.E. 627, 44 Ind. App. 62.

(3) Where no constitutional question is presented by the record, however, the appellate court is not required to transfer the case to the supreme court.—Dick v. Dick, 134 N.E. 206, 77 Ind.App. 570.

(4) And where the constitutionality of a statute has been settled by the supreme court there is no constitutional question to be decided, and a case purporting to raise such issue may properly be transferred to the appellate court by the supreme court.—Bobruk v. State, 181 N.E. 157, 203 Ind. 516, dismissing petitions 167 N.E. 548, 90 Ind.App. 97, Georgades v. State, 168 N.E. 192, 90 Ind.App. 503, which is followed in 168 N.E. 194, 90 Ind.App. 713, and Miskovich v. State, 168 N.E. 715, 90 Ind.App. 677.

Appeal from interlocutory order in receivership will be transferred from the appellate court to the supreme court.—Kallares v. Glover, Ind.App., 178 N.E. 178.

Where question of jurisdiction is doubtful, a case may be transferred to the supreme court from the appellate court, particularly in the presence of other circumstances rendering such transfer advisable.—Nation v. Green, 116 N.E. 840, 65 Ind. App. 136, for opinion in supreme court see 123 N.E. 163, 188 Ind. 697.

Under a former statute a losing party might take an appeal from the appellate court to the supreme court when the amount in controversy, exclusive of costs and interest on the judgment in the trial court, exceeded six thousand dollars.—Rupel v. A successful appellant, dissatisfied with the declaration of the law by the appellate court in reversing a judgment, may petition for the modification of its opinion, and, upon the overruling of such petition, may then petition the supreme court to transfer the cause.—Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Friend, 143 N.E. 879, 194 Ind. 579, overruling rehearing 142 N.E. 709, 194 Ind. 579.

Petition held insufficient

(1) Where it failed to disclose that petition for rehearing was filed or ruled on by appellate court.—Steel Const. Co. v. Rossville Alcohol & Chemical Corporation, 16 N.E.2d 698, 105 Ind.App. 520, dismissing petition 12 N.E.2d 987, 105 Ind.App. 520.

(2) Where transfer was requested merely "on account of error in the decision of the cause in the appellate court."—American Quarries Co. v. Lay, 76 N.E. 517, 166 Ind. 234, 235, denying transfer 73 N.E. 608, 37 Ind. App. 386—15 C.J. p 1061 note 8 [h].

Purpose of transfer

(1) The primary purpose of transferring a cause from the appellate court to the supreme court is to correct erroneous declarations of law apparent on the face of the opinion, and not to give the parties another hearing on the merits, and oral arguments are not granted after transfer at the request of the litigants.—Modern Woodmen of America v. Craiger, 93 N.E. 209, 175 Ind. 30.

(2) Other statements as to purpose of statute see 15 C.J. p 1061 notes 6 [a], 8 [a].

Where appellate court purports to decide case without written opinion a petition to transfer the case to the supreme court will be dismissed.—Sluss v. Thermoid Rubber Co., 174 N.E. 291, 202 Ind. 338—Myers v. Newcomer, 174 N.E. 290, 202 Ind. 335, denying transfer, App., 172 N.E. 927—Hunter v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 174 N.E. 287, 202 Ind. 328—15 C.J. p 1061 note 8 [c].

Appeals from awards under the workmen's compensation act, however, are not transferable to the supreme court where the act itself limits appeal to the appellate court.—Kingan & Co. v. Ossam, 131 N.E. 81, 190 Ind. 554, dismissing petition 121 N.E. 289, 75 Ind.App. 548.

Order refusing mandamus, by appellate court in original proceeding, is interlocutory and not a final determination; and the supreme court has no jurisdiction thereof on transfer from the appellate court.—State ex rel. Mechanics & Traders Ins. Co. v. Bunte, 3 N.E.2d 977, 210 Ind. 432—15 C.J. p 1061 note 8 [e].

§ 369. Iowa

Under the Iowa constitution the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction only in cases in chancery, and constitutes a court for the correction of errors of law; it may issue all writs necessary to secure justice to parties.

Under the constitution the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction only in cases in chancery,⁵⁵ and constitutes a court for the correction of errors at law,⁵⁶ under such restrictions as the general assembly may by law prescribe,⁵⁷ and has power to issue all writs⁵⁸ and all process⁵⁹ necessary to secure justice to parties, and exercise a supervisory control over all inferior judicial tribunals throughout the state.⁶⁰

§ 370. Kansas

The appellate, jurisdiction and powers of the courts of Kansas are discussed infra §§ 371-373.

§ 371. — Supreme Court

The supreme court of Kansas has original jurisdiction in quo warranto, mandamus, and habeas corpus, and such appellate jurisdiction as may be provided by law.

Supreme court does not have original jurisdiction in actions for certiorari.—Lockie v. Rice, Iowa, 250 N.W. 381.

Injunction of unlicensed law practice

A statute vesting supreme court with exclusive power to admit persons to practice as attorneys does not give the court the implied power to enjoin unlicensed practitioners, since the supreme court does not have original jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief and such suit brought by members of the bar is not related to admission or disbarment of an unlicensed practitioner.—

Johnson v. Purcell, 282 N.W. 741, 225 Iowa 1265.

In mandamus action to compel appointment to office, the supreme court has no power to disturb findings of appointing power as to qualifications of candidates appointed to office, unless there is a clear, arbitrary abuse of discretion.—Bender v. Iowa City, 269 N.W. 779, 222 Iowa 739.

56. Iowa.—Independent School Dist. of Town of Ogden v. Samuelson, 262 N.W. 169, 220 Iowa 170—Harvey v. Miller, 25 Iowa 219.

Certiorari to review orders of superior courts

The supreme court has the general power to review the proceedings and orders of the superior courts of the state under writs of certiorari.—Collins v. Powell, 277 N.W. 477, 224 Iowa 1015.

Mandamus

(1) May issue from the supreme court to a district court, if necessary, and in any other case where it is found necessary to enable it to exercise its legitimate power.—Westbrook v. Wicks, 36 Iowa 382.

(2) May be issued by the supreme court, under an old decision, only where it becomes necessary for the due administration of right and justice; but it will not be issued where the district court may properly issue the writ.—U. S. v. Dubuque County, Morr., Iowa 31.

59. Iowa.—Independent School Dist. of Town of Ogden v. Samuelson, 262 N.W. 169, 220 Iowa 170.

60. Iowa.—Hoskins v. Hotel Randolph Co., 221 N.W. 442, 206 Iowa 932.

15 C.J. p 1063 note 28.

Prohibition

Supreme court has power to issue writs of prohibition under constitutional provision authorizing issuance of writs necessary to secure justice and exercise of supervisory control over inferior tribunals.—State ex rel. O'Connor v. District Court in and for Shelby County, 260 N.W. 73, 219 Iowa 1165, 99 A.L.R. 967.

Limitation of issuance of certiorari

The supreme court's authority to issue writs of certiorari is limited to those addressed to an inferior judicial tribunal. They cannot be issued to state executive officers.—Independent School Dist. of Town of Ogden v. Samuelson, 262 N.W. 169, 220 Iowa 170.

61. Kan.—Champlin Refining Co. v. Ryan, 75 P.2d 245, 147 Kan. 160, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 1056, 304 U.S. 549, 82 L.Ed. 1521.

It is beyond power of legislature to enlarge original jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Public Service Commission of Kansas v. Kansas Gas & Electric Co., 246 P. 178, 121 Kan. 14—In re Burnette, 85 P. 575, 73 Kan. 609—15 C.J. p 1063 note 29 [el.]

Correction of judgment

It is competent for the supreme court to vacate or modify a judgment in an original proceeding at or after the term of rendition, where it appears that it was rendered under a misapprehension of facts essential to the support of the judgment.—State v. Citizens' Light, Heat & Power Co., 212 P. 86, 112 Kan. 482.

Superintending control over lower courts

The grant of original jurisdiction to the supreme court in quo warranto, mandamus, and habeas corpus to,⁶² mandamus,⁶³ and habeas corpus,⁶⁴ and such appellate jurisdiction as may be provided by law.⁶⁵ The statute gives the supreme court jurisdiction in all cases of appeals and proceedings in error from the district and other courts in such manner as may be provided by law.⁶⁶ Its appellate jurisdiction is limited to expounding the law and correcting the errors on the record⁶⁷ in proceedings in inferior courts, whether such proceedings be presented for review by proceedings in error or by appeal.⁶⁸ It may vacate or modify judgments and certain final and other orders of district or other courts of record, except a probate court,⁶⁹ but has no jurisdiction, unless the amount or value in controversy, exclusive of costs, in civil actions exceeds one hundred dollars,⁷⁰ except in certain cases specified by statute, as, for example, in cases involving the federal or state constitutions⁷¹ or federal laws or treaties.⁷² Where a constitutional question is presented, only such question will be reviewed.⁷³

§ 372. — Court of Appeals

In Kansas a court of appeals existed for a limited period.

A court of appeals was established in 1895, but ceased to exist by statutory limitation in 1901.⁷⁴ carries with it authority to exercise superintending control over inferior courts to the extent that it may be exerted by those writs and proceedings.—In re Pettitt, 114 P. 1071, 84 Kan. 637.

Proceeding under declaratory judgment act can be originally brought in the supreme court only where consequential relief to be had, if controversy had reached that stage, could be obtained through quo warranto, mandamus, or habeas corpus.—Public Service Commission of Kansas v. Kansas Gas & Electric Co., 246 P. 178, 121 Kan. 14.

Assumption of jurisdiction discretionary

Original jurisdiction of supreme court in quo warranto is not always invocable as matter of strict right, but is sometimes discretionary and controlled by considerations of broad public policy; hence, the court will not assume jurisdiction in quo warranto merely involving series of private controversies between a corporation and its members.—State v. Kansas Wheat Growers' Ass'n, 274 P. 731, 127 Kan. 669.

Findings of commissioner, appointed to hear evidence in original quo warranto proceeding, are advisory only, and court may or must examine record and reach its own conclusions.—State ex rel. Beck v. Harvey, 80 P.2d 1095, 148 Kan. 166.—State ex rel. Boynton v. Buchanan, 51 P.2d 5, 142 Kan. 515.—State v. Anderson, 230 P. 315, 117 Kan. 117, affirmed 232 P. 238, 117 Kan. 540.

Necessity of showing reason for not applying to district court

While the power of the supreme court is unquestioned, it will generally refuse an application for mandamus without a showing of satisfactory reasons for not first applying to the district court.—State v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 221 P. 259, 115 Kan. 3.—State v. Breese, 15 Kan. 123.

Prohibition

Mandamus to compel trial court to refrain from passing on motions is essentially prohibition over which supreme court has no original jurisdiction.—Jones v. Roberds, 256 P. 152, 123 Kan. 396.

Injunction

The term "mandamus" applies only to a proceeding to compel the performance of an act, and not one to restrain action; a proceeding for the latter purpose is essentially one for injunction, not mandamus, and is not within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Public Service Commission of Kansas v. Kansas Gas & Electric Co., 246 P. 178, 121 Kan. 14.—15 C.J. p 1063 note 29 [c].

65. Kan.—Public Service Commission of Kansas v. Kansas Gas & Electric Co., 246 P. 178, 121 Kan. 14.

General appellate jurisdiction

The supreme court has general appellate jurisdiction even if distinct mention thereof in some particular line of procedure is omitted from statute dealing with such line of procedure.—Champlin Refining Co. v. Ryan, 75 P.2d 245, 147 Kan. 160, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 1056, 304 U.S. 549, 82 L.Ed. 1521.

Trial de novo

The supreme court has no authority to try controverted issues de novo, since, except as to proceedings in quo warranto, mandamus, and habeas corpus, its jurisdiction is appellate.—Brown v. Brown, 68 P.2d 1105, 146 Kan. 7.

66. Kan.—Champlin Refining Co. v. Ryan, 75 P.2d 245, 147 Kan. 160, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 1056, 304 U.S. 549, 82 L.Ed. 1521.

§ 373. — District Courts

District courts in Kansas have jurisdiction of appeals from, as well as supervision of, inferior tribunals.

District courts have jurisdiction in cases of appeal and error from all inferior courts and tribunals,⁷⁶ and general supervision and control of inferior courts and tribunals to prevent and correct error and abuses.⁷⁷ Trials on such appeals are

de novo.⁷⁸

§ 374. Kentucky

The jurisdiction and powers of the appellate courts of Kentucky are discussed infra §§ 375, 376.

§ 375. — Court of Appeals

The court of appeals in Kentucky is a court of appellate jurisdiction, also possessing power to issue writs necessary to give it a general control of inferior jurisdictions. Its appellate jurisdiction is regulated by statute.

The constitution gives to the court of appeals appellate jurisdiction only,⁷⁹ and also power to issue such writs⁸⁰ as may be necessary to give it a

Case certified from justice of the peace

Where a case is certified by a justice of the peace to the district court on the ground that the boundaries of land are in dispute, the case will be proceeded with in the district court as though originally commenced therein.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Atchison, 23 P. 610, 43 Kan. 529.

15 C.J. p 1064 notes 50, 51.

Appeal from order or judgment out of court

Jurisdiction of court of appeals extends only to final orders and judgments of inferior court and not to orders or judgments which judicial officers are authorized to make out of court.—Proffer v. Stewart, 82 S.W.2d 468, 259 Ky. 445.

Power to control procedure

In passing on questions affecting the public interest, the court of appeals has power to control procedure to the end that cases before it shall be adequately, efficiently, and in good faith presented.—Jefferson County Fiscal Court v. Thomas, 130 S.W.2d 30, 279 Ky. 458.

Court of appeals cannot institute an original inquiry as to the existence or validity of an alleged contract of compromise of the subject matter of litigation.—Parks v. Doty, 13 Bush, Ky., 727.—Winbourn v. Winbourn, 7 Ky.L. 216.—Newport v. Woods, 5 Ky.L. 926.

Injunction

Neither the court of appeals nor one of its judges has original jurisdiction to grant an injunction.—Allensworth v. Allensworth's Ex'x, 42 S.W.2d 329, 240 Ky. 333.—Thompson v. Haden, 198 S.W. 231, 177 Ky. 841.—Bennett v. Blankenship, 197 S.W. 967, 177 Ky. 499.

Transfer of appeal

Where an appeal of which the court of appeals has sole jurisdiction is erroneously taken to another court, it must be transferred to the court of appeals.—Stone v. Cromie, 7 S.W. 920, 87 Ky. 173, 10 Ky.L. 19.

80. Ky.—Department of Public Welfare of Kentucky v. Polsgrove, 53 S.W.2d 341, 245 Ky. 159.

15 C.J. p 1064 note 54.

Where another and adequate remedy is available, either by appeal or otherwise, original jurisdiction to issue writs is not necessary and does not exist.—Maynard v. Workmen's Compensation Board, 276 S.W. 812, 210 Ky. 708.

Facts authorizing exercise by the court of appeals of its original jurisdiction must clearly appear.—Commonwealth ex rel. Cooper v. Howard, 124 S.W.2d 86, 276 Ky. 299.

Discretion to deny writs

Courts may deny extraordinary writs when in its discretion to grant them would be harmful.—Gosney v. Butler Graded School, 292 S.W. 781, 219 Ky. 242.

As substitute for appeal

The court of appeals' original jurisdiction will not be exercised in favor of granting relief so as to supply absence of a right of appeal to such court and thereby nullify the statute limiting such right.—McFarland v. Gilbert, 124 S.W.2d 473, 276 Ky. 423.

Mandamus

(1) The court of appeals has authority to issue writs of mandamus.—Payne v. Kentucky R. Commission, 287 S.W. 560, 216 Ky. 188.—McDonald v. De Haven, 234 S.W. 277, 192 Ky. 679—15 C.J. p 1064 note 54 [a].

(2) However, the court will not exercise its limited original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus where another and adequate remedy is available, as, for example, where the writ may be issued, or the question involved settled, by a lower court.—Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Gardner, 3 S.W.2d 219, 223 Ky. 196.—Henry v. Harris, 298 S.W. 690, 221 Ky. 238.—Maynard v. Workmen's Compensation Board, 276 S.W. 812, 210 Ky. 708.—Shipp v. Stoll, 255 S.W. 75, 200 Ky. 646.—McDonald v. De Haven, supra.—Commonwealth v. Peter, 124 S.W. 896, 136 Ky. 689.

Prohibition

(1) The court of appeals has original jurisdiction to issue writs of prohibition.—Thomas v. Newell, 127 S.W.2d 610, 277 Ky. 712.—Partin v. Gilbert, 120 S.W.2d 667, 275 Ky. 19.—Smith v. Ward, 75 S.W.2d 538, 256 Ky. 13.—Greene v. Wolf, 193 S.W. 1048, 175 Ky. 58—15 C.J. p 1064 note 54 [b] (1).

(2) The court's power to issue the writ is more or less discretionary.—Meredith v. Sampson, 126 S.W.2d 124, 277 Ky. 263.

(3) The court's jurisdiction to issue prohibition is not dependent upon the amount in controversy when general control of inferior jurisdictions.⁸¹ The court of appeals has jurisdiction over appeals from the circuit courts, where the title to land, the right to an easement therein, or the right to enforce a statutory lien thereon is directly involved,⁸²

regardless of the amount in controversy.⁸³ No appeal can be taken directly to the court of appeals as a matter of right from a judgment for the recovery of money or personal property, or any interest therein, or to enforce any lien thereon, if the public funds are involved.—Meredith v. Sampson, supra.

(4) Jurisdiction to issue a writ must be determined on the basis of the allegations of the petition.—Old Blue Ribbon Distillers v. Holbert, 125 S.W.2d 253, 276 Ky. 687.—Pinkleton v. Lueke, 95 S.W.2d 1103, 265 Ky. 84.

(5) The court will not issue the writ unless the inferior court is acting or threatening to act outside its jurisdiction, unless there is no other remedy available, and unless great and irreparable injury will result if the writ does not issue.—Auto Finance & Sales Co. v. Northcutt, 126 S.W.2d 455, 277 Ky. 274.—Old Blue Ribbon Distillers v. Holbert, 125 S.W.2d 253, 276 Ky. 687.—Partin v. Gilbert, 120 S.W.2d 667, 275 Ky. 19.—Lincoln Building & Loan Ass'n v. Humphreys, 118 S.W.2d 736, 274 Ky. 359.—Old Blue Ribbon Distillers v. Caldwell, 116 S.W.2d 653, 273 Ky. 378.—Northern States Contracting Co. v. Swope, 111 S.W.2d 610, 271 Ky. 140, appeal dismissed Anderson v. Northern States Contracting Co., 59 S.Ct. 143, 305 U.S. 566, 83 L.Ed. 357, Brown v. Swords-McDougal Co., 59 S.Ct. 144, 305 U.S. 566, 83 L.Ed. 357, and Knox v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., 59 S.Ct. 144, 305 U.S. 566, 83 L.Ed. 357.—Pinkleton v. Lueke, 95 S.W.2d 1103, 265 Ky. 84.—Perry v. Bingham, 95 S.W.2d 1099, 265 Ky. 133.—Goodenough v. Kentucky Purchasing Co., 45 S.W.2d 451, 241 Ky. 744.—Allon v. Bach, 26 S.W.2d 43, 233 Ky. 501.—Clapp v. Sandidge, 20 S.W.2d 449, 230 Ky. 594.—Potter v. Gardner, 1 S.W.2d 537, 222 Ky. 487.—Henry v. Harris, 298 S.W. 690, 221 Ky. 238.—Tompkins v. Manning, 265 S.W. 830, 205 Ky. 327.—Natural Gas Products Co. v. Thurman, 265 S.W. 475, 205 Ky. 100.—Scott v. Mounts, 243 S.W. 878, 195 Ky. 678.—Lakes v. Goodloe, 242 S.W. 632, 195 Ky. 240.—Commonwealth v. Carmack, 232 S.W. 644, 192 Ky. 171.—Western Oil Refining Co. v. Wells, 201 S.W. 473, 180 Ky. 32.—15 C.J. p. 1064 notes 54 [b] (2)—(4).

(6) The court of appeals will issue prohibition against a court inferior to the circuit court only where the inferior court is proceeding erroneously within its jurisdiction, followed by irreparable injury for which there is no adequate remedy at law, by appeal, or otherwise.—Elliott v. Hamilton, 124 S.W.2d 501, 276 Ky. 343.—Wilson v. Cooper, 60 S.W.2d 359, 249 Ky. 132.

(7) Where the circuit court has exclusive jurisdiction to issue prohibition to a court inferior to it, the court of appeals has no power to do so.—Elliott v. Hamilton, supra.

(8) Jurisdiction of circuit court to issue prohibition against courts inferior to it, see infra § 376.

Declaratory judgment action

Under its original jurisdiction conferred by the constitution, the court of appeals has no right to entertain declaratory judgment actions, as by treating a response, filed by a judge of the circuit court opposing dismissal of prohibition proceedings against him, as an original petition for a declaratory judgment.—Walz v. Northcutt, 129 S.W.2d 124, 278 Ky. 616.

81. Ky.—Union Trust Co. v. Garnett, 72 S.W.2d 27, 254 Ky. 573.—Department of Public Welfare of Kentucky v. Polsgrove, 53 S.W.2d 341, 245 Ky. 159.—Clapp v. Sandidge, 20 S.W.2d 449, 230 Ky. 594.—Natural Gas Products Co. v. Thurman, 265 S.W. 475, 205 Ky. 100. 15 C.J. p. 1065 note 55.

Limitations on original jurisdiction

(1) Court of appeals exercises original jurisdiction only when inferior tribunal proceeded against is acting without jurisdiction or is erroneously exercising jurisdiction and where irreparable injury will follow without adequate remedy.—Frain v. Applegate, 40 S.W.2d 274, 239 Ky. 605.

(2) The court of appeals will not issue process to control action of circuit courts, except upon ground that circuit court is proceeding or about to proceed outside of and beyond its jurisdiction, or that, although circuit court is acting within its jurisdiction, great and irreparable injury will result to applicant, and there is no other remedy open to him.—Swartz v. Caudill, 130 S.W.2d 80, 279 Ky. 206.

(3) Only when no other adequate remedy exists to prevent a miscarriage of justice will the court of appeals assume jurisdiction in original proceeding and exercise supervisory control over inferior court by original writ.—Old Blue Ribbon Distillers v. Holbert, 125 S.W.2d 253, 276 Ky. 687.—City of Bowling Green v. Milliken, 77 S.W.2d 777, 257 Ky. 245.

(4) If the circuit court should undertake to alter or set aside its judgment after it has become final, based exclusively upon record that was before it when judgment was entered, it would be attempting to do something which had passed beyond its jurisdiction, and process would issue from court of appeals to prevent such action.—Swartz v. Caudill, supra.

Only inferior courts, not administrative bodies, are included in the term "inferior jurisdictions;" the court can issue writs relating only to the actions of judicial or quasi-judicial officers.—Old Blue Ribbon Distillers v. Caldwell, 116 S.W.2d 653, 273 Ky. 378.—Payne v. Kentucky R. Commission, 287 S.W. 560, 216 Ky. 188.—Maynard v. Workmen's Compensation Board, 276 S.W. 812, 210 Ky. 708.—15 C.J. p. 1064 note 54 [b] (5), p. 1065 note 55 [a], [b].

Petition held to seek "special control"

Petition seeking writ of mandamus to prevent workmen's compensation board from reviewing an award, is a petition for special control, not within the jurisdiction of the court of appeals.—Maynard v. Workmen's Compensation Board, supra.

82. Ky.—Laurel County v. Hubbard, 92 S.W.2d 359, 263 Ky. 381.—Ficke v. Board of Trustees of Erlanger Consol. Graded School Dist., 90 S.W.2d 66, 262 Ky. 312.—Sim v. Bishop, 197 S.W. 625, 177 Ky. 279. 15 C.J. p. 1066 note 68.

Where defendant did not assert title in itself, but defended on ground that plaintiffs did not have title at date of alleged injuries to land, the case was not within the appellate jurisdiction of the court of appeals as "involving title to land."—Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Harmon, 129 S.W.2d 994, 279 Ky. 9.

The circuit court has such appellate jurisdiction over inferior courts as is vested in it by statute.⁹³ Review of proceedings of inferior courts generally is considered in § 264 supra.

In a proper case, the circuit courts have jurisdiction, which in some circumstances is exclusive, to issue writs of prohibition against courts inferior to them to restrain the inferior courts from acting beyond their jurisdiction or erroneously within their jurisdiction.⁹⁴

§ 377. Louisiana

Appeals from a judgment on a reconventional or other incidental demand are to the court having appellate jurisdiction of the main demand; but if there is no right of appeal on the main demand, the appeal is to the court having jurisdiction as to the reconventional or incidental demand. Statutory provision is made for the transfer of cases from the supreme court, when without jurisdiction, to the courts of appeal, and vice versa.

Under the Constitution of 1921 article 7 § 1, in all cases where there is an appeal from a judgment on a reconventional or other incidental demand, the appeal must go to the court having jurisdiction of the main demand.⁹⁵ If there is no

Transfer of causes. Under provisions of General Statutes 1932 § 1427, Acts 1912 No. 19 § 1, which have been held constitutional,⁹⁷ if the supreme court finds that a cause, properly within the appellate jurisdiction of the courts of appeal, has been erroneously appealed to the supreme court, instead of dismissing the appeal, it will generally transfer the cause to the proper court of appeal,⁹⁸ especially where there is no doubt of the appellate jurisdiction of the court of appeal,⁹⁹ as where the amount or value in dispute is below the amount required for the jurisdiction of the supreme court, and is within the jurisdictional amount of the court of appeal,¹ or where, although the amount is apparently within the supreme court's jurisdiction, it was manifestly inflated for that purpose.² This

Good faith of appeal

An appeal to the supreme court, of which such court has not jurisdiction by reason of the amount involved, will not be dismissed, but will be transferred to the court of appeal, where the attorney for appellant files an affidavit, on appellee's motion to dismiss for willfulness, stating that the appeal was brought in good faith and not for the purpose of delay, and there is no reason to believe that the attorney would willfully impose unnecessary cost on his client by bringing an appeal to the wrong court.—*City of Shreveport v. Unwarranted allegation

Where the allegation made by appellants for purposes of appellate jurisdiction, that the amount involved exceeds two thousand dollars is a mere conclusion, and unwarrant-provision, however, is not compulsory, and the supreme court, in its discretion, instead of transferring the cause, may dismiss the appeal.³ On the other hand, if a cause, which is within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, is erroneously appealed to the court of appeal, the latter court should not dismiss the appeal, but should transfer the cause to the supreme court,⁴ as where the amount in dispute exceeds the court of appeal's jurisdiction and is within the jurisdiction of the supreme court,⁵ although the jurisdiction of the court of appeal was not questioned,⁶ or although one ed by the facts and circumstances, the appeal will be transferred to the proper appellate court.—Foster v. Peet, 92 So. 311, 151 La. 718.

Where appeal is dismissed

Where appellant permitted judgment of court of appeal, dismissing appeal for want of jurisdiction to become final, supreme court, on appeal from district court, could not transfer case to court of appeal, but the appeal will be dismissed.—*Peucheu v. The constitution expressly provides for the cases in which the supreme court has appellate, original, and supervisory jurisdiction; and for the certifying of cases from courts of appeal to the supreme court.

Under the express provisions of the Constitution of 1921 article 7 § 10, and similar provisions in prior constitutions, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in civil suits,¹⁰ where the amount

in dispute exceeds a given sum, as explained infra § 381, except that it has no appellate jurisdiction, irrespective of the amount involved, in suits for damages for physical injuries to, or for the death of, a person,¹¹ or for other damages sustained by such person or his heirs or legal representatives, arising out of the same circumstances;¹² nor does its appellate jurisdiction extend to any suit for compensation under any state or federal Workmen's Compensation Law,¹³ or employer's liability act.¹⁴ The supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction in cases in which such jurisdiction is exclusively vested in the courts of appeal,¹⁵ or in district courts.¹⁶

The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction, under the provisions of article 7 § 10, of all suits for divorce or separation from bed and board, and all matters arising therein;¹⁷ of suits involving alimony;¹⁸ of suits for the nullity of marriage, or for interdiction; or of suits involving the tutorship of minors, or curatorship of interdicts, or the legitimacy¹⁹ and custody of children, and matters transferred, see 133 So. 446, 172 La. 204.

10. La.—Aubert v. Burns, 77 So. 782, 142 La. 895.

15 C.J. p 1066 notes 78, 79.

Consent of parties is not sufficient to confer appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court.—W. K. Henderson Iron Works & Supply Co. v. Highbush, 75 So. 729, 141 La. 803.

As to registration of voters

(1) In a suit involving the registration of voters, the supreme court's appellate jurisdiction is limited to cases in which the contest is as to educational and property qualifications and the grandfather clause.—Aubert v. Guyot, 77 So. 785, 142 La. 901—Aubert v. Rhody, 77 So. 784, 142 La. 900—Aubert v. Burns, 77 So. 782, 142 La. 895.

(2) Where the issue in mandamus proceedings by a voter to compel the reinstatement by the registrar of voters of his name on the registration roll was merely one of fact as to whether his change or removal of residence was beyond the precinct in which he was registered, the supreme court would have no jurisdiction of an appeal from the decision of the district court for the parish of Orleans.—State ex rel. Kahn v. Bell, 86 So. 657, 157 La. 72.

Suit against surety on sheriff's official bond to compel surety to pay judgment in excess of two thousand dollars against sheriff for damages for death of prisoner in sheriff's custody was a suit for recovery under a bond and arose "ex contractu" and not "ex delicto," and hence judgment in suit on bond was appealable to supreme court, particularly where all issues in suit against sheriff were disposed of and sheriff was no longer a party.—Leche ex rel. Moore v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., La. App., 188 So. 197.

11. La.—Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. De Jean, 184 So. 331, 183 La. 529, transferred, see Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Dejean, 167 So. 864, affirmed Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Suit against insurer

The supreme court is without jurisdiction of appeal in suit for injuries against liability insurer, as against contention that suit was for indemnity on a contract of insurance and was not founded on a tort by insurance carrier.—Reeves v. Globe Indemnity Co. of New York, 182 So. 724, 182 La. 905—Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Bowdon, 159 So. 394, 181 La. 295.

13. La.—Clementine v. Ritchie, 99 So. 213, 155 La. 263.

14. Suit for compensation

The supreme court has no jurisdiction of suits for compensation under any Employers' Liability Act, where the appeal was granted after the adoption of the constitution irrespective of the amount involved, and the proper court of appeal has jurisdiction.—Walker v. Superior Brass & Copper Foundry Co., 94 So. 141, 152 La. 630.

15. La.—Bunol v. Bunol, 122 So. 121, 163 La. 391.

Appellate jurisdiction of courts of appeal see infra § 379.

16. La.—Oberly v. Calcasieu Parish School Board, 77 So. 600, 142 La. 788.

In suits involving civil or political rights, such as the reinstatement of a child excluded from a school, appellate jurisdiction is conferred on the district courts, and not on the supreme court.—Oberly v. Calcasieu Parish School Board, supra. Appellate jurisdiction of district courts see infra § 380.

18. La.—State v. Edrington, 78 So. 751, 143 La. 504.

This provision is general law which must yield to art 7 § 54, providing that appeals from juvenile court shall be allowed on matters of law only.—State v. Edrington, supra.

19. La.—Succession of Mingo, 78 So. 565, 143 La. 298.

Suit involving legitimacy of children, within such constitutional provision giving supreme court appel-of adoption and emancipation. Its appellate jurisdiction also extends, irrespective of the amount involved, to cases involving homestead exemptions,²⁰ notwithstanding other issues are also involved in which the value or amount in contest does not exceed two thousand dollars.²¹

The supreme court has jurisdiction to interpret its own decrees, and its interpretation is final.²² In all civil and probate cases where the supreme court is given appellate jurisdiction, the appeal shall be both on the law and the facts, but under article 7 § 54, it has jurisdiction of appeals from a juvenile court on matters of law only.²³

The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, under article 7 § 10, also extends to criminal cases on questions of law alone, whenever the penalty of death, or imprisonment at hard labor may be imposed;²⁴ or where a fine exceeding three hundred dollars,²⁵ or imprisonment exceeding six months,²⁶ is actually imposed. A proceeding to forfeit an appearance bond, in a criminal case, is a criminal proceeding, and the nature of the offense charged against accused is determinative of the right to appeal to the supreme court from the judgment of forfeiture.²⁷ Two separate judgments of conviction, in neither of which the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction, cannot be combined to invest it with jurisdiction.²⁸

Under article 6 § 5 of the constitution, the supreme court is also given appellate jurisdiction of suits against the railroad commission to test the validity of regulations which it has adopted.²⁹ late jurisdiction refers to a suit in which legitimacy is matter in contest.—Smith v. Shehee, 143 So. 338, 175 La. 394, answers conformed to, App., 143 So. 339, and amended 144 So. 750.

Correction of death record

Mandamus proceeding to compel board of health to correct record of death of petitioner's mother, erroneously describing her as colored, although petitioner alleges that error affects validity of his marriage and legitimacy of his children, is not within supreme court's jurisdiction, as a suit involving legitimacy, or otherwise.—*State ex rel. Case involves homestead exemption, within supreme court's jurisdiction when one party claims benefit thereof.—Murff v. Ratcliff, 131 So. 194, 171 La. 419.

"Homestead exemption"

(1) "Homestead exemption" within constitutional provision giving supreme court appellate jurisdiction in all cases involving homestead exemption is the exemption granted by constitution to every head of a family or person having some one dependent on him or her for support.—Succession of Harper, 161 So. 18, 152 La. 55.

(2) It does not include the statutory one thousand dollar privilege granted to widows and minor children in necessitous circumstances.—Succession of Harper, supra.

Garnishment proceeding

Supreme court has jurisdiction of proceeding to garnish insurance money, claimed by insured under laws exempting homestead and household articles from seizure.—Thompson-Ritchie & Co. v. Graves, 120 So. 634, 167 La. 1024, 63 A.L.R. 1283.

Actions not involving homestead exemptions

(1) Action by judgment creditor to recover judgment against debtor's mortgagee, although depending on whether debtor's homestead was exempt from judgment when mortgage was foreclosed.—Murff v. Ratcliff, 131 So. 194, 171 La. 419.

(2) An action to enjoin a constable from selling corn, hay, and fodder under a writ of sequestration, such property being alleged to be necessary for the maintenance of plaintiff, his family, and stock on his homestead, and exempt from sale by process under the homestead and exemption laws.—Schute v. Hopkins, 51 So. 1033, 125 La. 911.

21. La.—Green v. Kettler, 80 So. 594, 144 La. 374—Green v. Traylor, 77 So. 127, 142 La. 492—Gaar, for Use and Benefit of Glover v. King, App., 171 So. 115.

Amount in dispute as affecting jurisdiction generally see infra § 381.

22. La.—Barker v. Houssiere-Latrelle Oil Co., 112 So. 415, 163 La. 555.

Appeal not involving interpretation

Where issues presented by appeal, the supreme court being otherwise without jurisdiction, do not involve interpretation by court of its judgment in former case of which instant case is branch, the court is without jurisdiction within rule that, when appeal is branch of first case in which supreme court rendered judgment, it has jurisdiction in matter of interpreting its own judgment —Succession of Williams, 102 So. 411, 157 La. 309.

Liability for costs under a final decree on the merits by the supreme court is within the exclusive appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Bergeron v. Babin, 125 So. 318, 12 La.App. 89.

Offense of carrying weapon concealed, is punishable only by fine or imprisonment, and supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction as relates to the offense charged by reason of the nature or grade of the offense, and hence none by such reason as relates to the forfeiture of the bond.—State v. Cotton, supra.

28. La.—State v. Sanders, 106 So. 455, 159 La. 956.

15 C.J. p 1071 note 27.

Original jurisdiction. The supreme court, under article 7 § 10, has such original jurisdiction as may be necessary to enable it to determine questions of fact affecting its own appellate jurisdiction in any case pending before it,³⁰ and to that end may make such orders and decrees as it may deem proper in the premises; or it may remand the case, for the purpose of determining the same question;³¹ but it cannot exercise original jurisdiction to pass on the merits of a party's claim or the validity of an adjudication.³² The supreme court also has exclusive original jurisdiction in all matters touching professional misconduct of members of the bar, with power to suspend or disbar under such rules as may be adopted by the court,³³ and in suits for removal of judges of courts of record from office, as elsewhere provided in the constitution. The supreme court does not render advisory opinions at the request of other departments of the government.³⁴

Supervisory jurisdiction. The supreme court, under article 7 § 10, also has control of, and general supervision over, all inferior courts,³⁵ even in cases in which another court has appellate jurisdiction.³⁶ This is a plenary and discretionary power, the exercise of which depends on each individual action,³⁷

Supreme court cannot exercise original jurisdiction

(1) To entertain a suit for an injunction restraining the execution of its judgments.—Roussel v. Railways Realty Co., 62 So. 608, 133 La. 153.

(2) To pass on the merits of the rule, on which the trial court has not yet passed, where the ground of an application for prohibition to the trial court against further proceeding in a rule, was that the effect of a suspensive appeal was to suspend execution of a judgment.—Yazoo, etc., R. 15 C.J. p 1069 note 14.

Exercised only in special or emergency cases

Supervisory jurisdiction over inferior courts, was not designed to afford a right to appeal to all litigants dissatisfied with judgments of trial judges, and such jurisdiction will only be entertained in special or emergency cases and to prevent a great and impending injury.—Dugas & Le Blanc v. Port Barre Timber & Tie Co., 80 So. 203, 144 La. 71.

Recusation of judge

(1) Where plaintiff filed motion to recuse judge ad hoc, which was tried and denied by special judge, question of recusation of special judge was within exclusive supervisory jurisdiction of supreme court and could not be considered by court of appeal.—Central Lumber Co. v. Jones, La.App., 175 So. 849.

(2) Where in a criminal case, accused alleges that the judge is so prejudiced as to be incapable of giving him a fair trial, and the judge declines to recuse himself, his action will be reviewed by the supreme court in the exercise of its supervisory power.—State v. Banta, 47 So. 538, 122 La. 235, followed in State v. Dunlap, 47 So. 540, 122 La. 241, State v. Danos, 47 So. 539, 122 La. 240.

To have testimony taken down in writing, in an appealable case, a litigant may invoke the supreme court's general supervision and control over other courts.—Williamson v. Enterprise Brick Co., 182 So. 556, 190 La. 415, setting aside 178 So. 197.

Whether enjoined act may cause irreparable injury

Determination of judge whether act prohibited by injunction is or is not such as may cause irreparable injury to plaintiff, so that judge may not or may dissolve injunction on bond, is subject to review by appellate court, in the exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction.—Keegan v. Board of Com'rs of Port of New Orleans, 98 So. 50, 154 La. 639—New Orleans Live Stock Exch. v. Crescent City Stock Yards & Slaughter House Co., 86 So. 659, 148 La. 77—City of Lake Charles v. Lake Charles Ry., Light & Waterworks Co., 80 So. 260, 144 La. 217.

36. La.—Paul v. Tabony, 102 So. 503, 157 La. 400.

Order allowing appeal to court of appeal does not defeat right to invoke supervisory jurisdiction of supreme court.—Allen v. Allen, 115 So. 648, 165 La. 437.

Taking devolutive appeal from denial of preliminary injunction does not prevent appellant's invoking supreme court's supervisory jurisdiction.—Welsh v. Board of Levee Com'rs of Orleans Levee Dist., 123 So. 705, 168 La. 1037.

37. La.—Walmsley v. O'Hara, 161 So. 587, 182 La. 213—Item Co. v. Nu-Grape Bottling Co., 107 So. 471, 160 La. 631—Westerfield v. New Orleans Port, 72 So. 905, 140 La. 146.

15 C.J. p 1069 note 14 [a].

Prevention of abuses or illegal acts, regardless of the amount involved is the concern of the supreme court in the exercise of its supervisory powers.—Keffe v. La Salle Realty Co., 112 So. 799, 163 La. 824, 53 A.L.R. 82.

Substance rather than form will be looked to La.—Thomas v. Doughty, 111 So. 681, 163 La. 213.

Supervisory jurisdiction may be exercised

(1) To instruct the district court, in the absence of apparent jurisdiction over a cause in any appellate court, to reinstate a case dismissed on the ground that the court is without jurisdiction, if it is manifest that the court has jurisdiction.—Reynolds v. Carroll, 38 So. 470, 114 La. 610.

(2) To review, in an unappealable case, the ruling on the sufficiency of the evidence offered to relieve the prosecution from the prescriptions of Rev.St. § 986, limiting certain prosecutions to one year next after the offense is made known to a public officer.—State v. Richard, 89 So. 697, 149 La. 568.

(3) To review order of district judge discharging prisoner under writ of habeas corpus in extradition proceedings.—State ex rel. Covington v. Hughes, 102 So. 824, 157 La. 652.

and generally it will be exercised only where the inferior judge exceeds the bounds of his jurisdiction, or is guilty of a usurpation or of an abuse of his discretion.³⁸ Such supervisory jurisdiction may be invoked only where the litigant has exhausted his remedies in the court below,³⁹ and only where there is not another adequate remedy by appeal to the supreme court or to some other court,⁴⁰ but it does not exercise such supervisory jurisdiction when the relief sought is directly in aid of the appellate jurisdiction of another court.⁴¹ This supervisory jurisdiction does not extend to supervision over officers of courts.⁴²

Issuance of remedial writs. Under the provisions of the Constitution article 7 § 2, the supreme court and each of the justices thereof has power to issue the writ of habeas corpus,⁴³ at the instance of any person in actual custody,⁴⁴ in any case where it has appellate jurisdiction.⁴⁵ It, or any justice thereof, also has power, under such provisions, in aid of its original, appellate, or supervisory jurisdiction, to issue writs of certiorari,⁴⁶ prohibition,⁴⁷ mandamus,⁴⁸ quo warranto, and other needful remedial writs, orders, or process.⁴⁹

(4) To stay execution of order fixing custody of minor child.—Tate v. Tate, 113 So. 370, 163 La. 1047.

Supervisory jurisdiction will not be exercised

(1) In unappealable case, to review facts bearing on guilt or innocence of accused.—State v. Foster, 101 So. 255, 156 La. 891—State v. Hollingsworth, 68 So. 834, 137 La. 478.

Demand on trial judge

In suit to set aside order of railroad commission, wherein injunction obtained by commission was set aside on a bond, and it made no demand on trial judge to vacate order of dissolution, or any attempt to suspend execution of order by suspensive appeal, its application to supreme court for supervisory writs of certiorari and prohibition will be denied.—*Brooks-Sanlon Co. v. Exclusive jurisdiction

The supreme court alone has the right to issue such writs to the courts of appeal.—Vidrine v. Dupre, 67 So. 893, 136 La. 820.

Interveners

In a proceeding by one appointed district judge by the governor, for prohibition or other writ against one appointed by the supreme court to fill such vacancy, the clerk of such judicial district and the district attorney as interveners had no standing to question the validity of the

Supervisory jurisdiction, on an application for any of such writs, is discretionary,⁵⁰ and should be exercised only in cases of emergency,⁵¹ and where the inferior judge exceeds the bounds of his jurisdiction, or is guilty of usurpation, or an abuse of his discretion,⁵² and there is not an adequate remedy by appeal.⁵³

Procedure. In exercising supervisory jurisdiction, the supreme court requires only that the errors complained of be patent on the face of the record.⁵⁴ In a proceeding for a remedial writ, the supreme court cannot pass on the merits of the case,⁵⁵ or on errors as to matters within the trial judge's discretion,⁵⁶ these being reviewable under appellate jurisdiction. Application for writs of certiorari, mandamus, and prohibition will not be denied for want of written notice of the application to respondent,⁵⁷ and an inadvertent error in such application as to the name of a party is of no consequence where the identity of such party is not questioned.⁵⁸

Cases brought up from courts of appeal; certification of question. Under the provisions of Constitution 1921, article 7 § 11, it is competent for the supreme court to require, by certiorari;⁵⁹ or otherwise, any case to be certified from the courts of appeal to it for its review and determination, with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried directly by appeal to the supreme court, provided application therefor is made within thirty days after a rehearing shall have been refused by the court of appeal.⁶⁰ This power cannot be ex-governor's appointment, such matter not being in contest.—In re Perez, 83 So. 657, 146 La. 373.

Prematurity of application

A remedial writ will not be lightly dismissed on a plea of prematurity, as the question of the prematurity of the application for the writ is considered at the time the rule nisi issues directing respondent to show cause why the writ should not be issued.—McClelland v. Gasquet, 47 So. 540, 122 La. 241.

Suit dismissed

Injunction suit brought by candidate for nomination against secretary of state to compel recognition of himself as party nominee on death, prior to primary election, of other candidate for nomination, which suit was taken to supreme court on secretary's application for original writs, should be dismissed, following election of third person as party nominee, where plaintiff had moved for dismissal in district court.—Porter v. Conway, 159 So. 725, 181 La. 487.

Legal question passed on before

The supervisory jurisdiction of the supreme court cannot be exercised to prevent a criminal court from trying a case legally pending before it over which it has jurisdiction, simply for the reason that the legal question therein involved has once before been passed on by the supreme court.—State v. Letellier, 90 So. 218, 149 La. 847.

Where proceedings have been conducted regularly and the questions decided are not of general importance, the supreme court will not exercise its supervisory jurisdiction on an application for such writs.—Seals v. Funches, 85 So. 604, 147 La. 600.

53. La.—State ex rel. Martinez v. Hattier, 187 So. 551, 192 La. 209.

Where remedy by appeal is available and adequate, supreme court will not exercise its supervisory powers by certiorari, prohibition, mandamus, or other remedial writ.—State v. Haddad, 160 So. 802, 181 La. 1036.—Brooks-Scanlon Co. v. Railroad Commission of Louisiana, 79 So. 871, 143 La. 1090.—Bloomfield v. Thompson, 64 So. 853, 134 La. 923.

Questions not decided on application

Questions brought up on an application to the supreme court for a remedial writ that can be as well decided on appeal, are generally left to an appeal for decision if no prejudicial delay is to result and there is no immediate necessity for the review of the cause presented on the application.—McClelland v. Gasquet, 47 So. 540, 122 La. 241.

54. La.—State v. Mullen, 107 So. 698, 160 La. 925.

It is sufficient that reservations of bills of exception are noted in the minutes of the trial court, although no formal bills are presented.—State v. Mullen, 107 So. 698, 160 La. 925.

Defenses to action on note to which reference was made by trial judge and respondents in their return, but which did not explain rights urged thereby, were required to be presented by answer or some other form of defense.—Brock v. First State Bank & Trust Co., 175 So. 569, 187 La. 766.

55. La.—Brooks-Scanlon Co. v. Railroad Commission of Louisiana, 79 So. 871, 143 La. 1090.

In suit to set aside order of railroad commission, wherein an injunction, obtained by commission, was set aside, and it applied for writs of certiorari and prohibition, validity of order can be passed on only by virtue of supreme court's jurisdiction on appeal in regular course.—Brooks-Scanlon Co. v. Railroad Commission of Louisiana, 79 So. 871, 143 La. 1090.

56. La.—Newman v. Reems, 158 So. 13, 180 La. 904.—Mundy v. Phillips, 76 So. 602, 142 La. 180.

Proof of notice

Sup.Ct. Rules, rule 16, 136 La. xii 67 South. xi, requiring proof by affidavit of petitioner, or, in case of his absence from the parish, of his attorney, that a notice of intention to apply to the supreme court for a writ of certiorari or review has been filed, refers to writs of review or certiorari to the courts of appeal, and not to the district courts, and under rule 15, 136 La. xii 67 South. xi, applying to applications for remedial writs to be directed to the district courts, it is immaterial whether proof of the notice be made by affidavit of applicant or by that of his counsel.—State ex rel. Under former constitutions, application must have been made within thirty days after the decision of the court of appeal had been rendered and entered, or after the re-tended by the legislature;⁶¹ and is generally discretionary;⁶² but may be exercised only where there is a deviation from the jurisprudence of the state in cases not appealable,⁶³ and only where a question of law is involved,⁶⁴ and the case presents exceptional features.⁶⁵ Cases finally decided by the court of appeal cannot be by it transmitted to the supreme court at the request of either party to the action.⁶⁶

Under article 7 § 25, a court of appeal has power to certify to the supreme court any question or proposition of law arising in any cause pending before it concerning which, for its proper decision, it desires the instruction of that court;⁶⁷ and thereupon the supreme court may either give its instruction on the question or proposition certified to it, which shall be binding on the courts of appeal in such case, or it may require the whole record to be sent up for its consideration, and thereupon decide the whole matter in controversy in the same manner as if it had been on appeal directly to the supreme court.⁶⁸

Where case is brought to the supreme court from the court of appeal merely because the judges of the latter court cannot agree on a judgment, the matter not being certified up by the court of appeal for the purpose of determining any question of law, the supreme court has no jurisdiction to render final judgment, but will send the case back, with an order to the court of appeal to select a district judge to sit in the case, as provided by Const. art 7 § 25.—*State v. § 379. — Courts of Appeal in General

The constitution expressly provides for the cases in which courts of appeal have appellate, original, and supervisory jurisdiction.

A court of appeal is a court of inferior jurisdiction,⁶⁹ and has no power to ignore or alter the provisions of a statute under the guise of giving it construction.⁷⁰

Under the express provisions of Constitution article 7 § 29, the courts of appeal, except as otherwise provided in the constitution, have appellate jurisdiction only,⁷¹ which jurisdiction extends to all cases, civil and probate, of which the civil district court for the parish of Orleans, or the district courts throughout the state, have exclusive original jurisdiction,⁷² or concurrent jurisdiction exceeding one hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, and of which the supreme court is not given jurisdiction,⁷³ as over suits for damages for physical injuries to or for the death of a person or for other damages sustained by such person or his fer jurisdiction, except as otherwise provided in the constitution, on "Courts of Appeal," in which art 7 § 1 declares that the judicial power shall be, in part, vested.—Succession of Huxen, 88 So. 687, 149 La. 61—15 C.J. p 1071 note 41.

Shehee*, 143 So. 338, 175 La. 394, answers conformed to, App., 143 So. 339, amended 144 So. 750.

Right to distribute circulars

The court of appeal and not supreme court had appellate jurisdiction of ease involving right of gubernatorial candidate to have circulars distributed in behalf of his candidacy, where constitutionality of ordinance prohibiting distribution of circulars without permit from mayor was not at issue.—Noe v. Maestri, 190 So. 588, 193 La. 382.

heirs or legal representatives arising out of the same circumstances,⁷⁴ regardless of the amount involved, as explained infra § 381, except as otherwise provided in the constitution, and all appeals shall be both on the law and the facts. It has no appellate jurisdiction over matters which are within the exclusive appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court.⁷⁵ A court of appeal must take notice of its want of jurisdiction although not questioned

by the parties.⁷⁶

Original jurisdiction. A court of appeal has no original jurisdiction to determine facts affecting its appellate jurisdiction,⁷⁷ or to issue an injunction.⁷⁸

Issuance of writs. Under article 7 § 2, a court of appeal has power, in aid of its appellate jurisdiction only, to issue writs of mandamus,⁷⁹ prohibition,⁸⁰ and has power, in aid of appellate jurisdiction,

Court of appeal, not supreme court, has appellate jurisdiction over

(1) Action for pain and suffering by persons killed by train, and for loss of companionship.—Adams v. New Orleans, T. & M. Ry. Co., 115 So. 128, 164 La. 1011.

(2) Action brought by widow in behalf of herself and as tutrix of her minor child against tort-feasor and his insurance carrier for the alleged negligent killing of her husband.—Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Bowdon, 159 So. 394, 181 La. 295.

(3) Action against an alleged tort-feasor and his insurance carrier by employer's compensation insurance carrier for employee's death allegedly caused by tort-feasor's negligence, as being an action "ex delicto" and not "ex contractu," notwithstanding employer's insurance carrier sued as statutory subrogee and conventional assignee of claims of widow and minor child of deceased.—Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Bowdon, supra.

(4) Action for tarring and feathering, including injuries caused by use of water, soap, and towels in removing tar and feathers.—Newsom v. Starns, 142 So. 704, conforming to 142 So. 138, 174 La. 955, annulling, App., 136 So. 743.

Demand for damages for mental torture caused by tarring and feathering is within appellate jurisdiction of court of appeal.—Newsom v. Starns, supra.

"Ex contractu" obligations

As respects jurisdiction of court of appeal, obligations arising from a sheriff's bond, as relates to the sureties, are obligations "ex contractu" and not "ex delicto," even when the bond is given to cover damages resulting from torts or omissions of duty of the principal therein.—Leche ex rel. Moore v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., La.App., 188 So. 197.

75. La.—Central Lumber Co. v. Jones, App., 175 So. 849—Succession of Harriss, 2 La.App. 155.

Alternative claim

Court of appeal has no jurisdiction of claim for homestead, but could consider alternative claims of extinguishment of judgment by novation or prescription.—McDaniel v. Smith, 127 So. 108, 13 La.App. 61.

Liability for costs

Where a party's liability for costs depends on the construction or interpretation of final judgment on the merits by the supreme court, the court of appeal has no jurisdiction over the question of liability for costs, since such matter is within the exclusive appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Bergeron v. Babin, 125 So. 318, 12 La.App. 89.

Criminal matters

Court of appeal has no jurisdiction over criminal matters.—Morehouse Lumber & Building Material Co. v. Jacob & Walker, 139 So. 713, 18 La. App. 536, affirmed 144 So. 190, and 147 So. 504, 177 La. 76.

Where there is no "contestatio litis" in lower court, case cannot be appealed because the court of appeal has no original jurisdiction.—Estate of Chapman, 1 La.App. 371.

78. La.—Siess v. Couvillion, 4 La. App. 277.

Constitutionality of statute

Gen.Sts.1932 § 2082, Act 1924 No. 29 § 5, in regard to an appeal from an order granting, continuing, refusing, or dissolving a restraining order, held not to give court of appeal original jurisdiction contrary to Const.1921 art 7 § 29.—Magendie v. Constable First City Court of New Orleans, 4 La.App. 718.

79. La.—Riccobono v. Kearney, 114 So. 707, 164 La. 844—Day v. Hel-

Appeal not yet taken

Court of appeal has power to issue mandamus in aid of appellate jurisdiction, although no appeal has as yet been taken, where court of appeal deems writs necessary to protect right which may be urged on appeal.—State ex rel. Levee v. Carruth, 149 So. 311, annulled Putnam & Norman v. Levee, 153 So. 685, 179 La. 180.

Mandamus not in aid of appeal cannot be issued by a court of appeal.—State ex rel. Anderson Post Hardwood Lumber Co. v. Bullock, La.App., 178 So. 638—State ex rel. Perron v. Fuselier, La.App., 173 So. 577—State ex rel. Griffin v. Morgan, 130 So. 868, 19 La.App. 709—State ex rel. Truxillo v. Gilbert, 128 So. 204, 14 La.App. 229—Wall v. Petition should be addressed to court of appeal, for a mandamus to compel a judge to grant appeal from order refusing injunction against execution of judgment for less than two thousand dollars, in view of Const. art 7 § 2, although supreme court, under § 10, has control and general supervision of all inferior courts.—Paul v. Tabony, 102 So. 503, 157 La. 400.

tion, to issue certiorari,⁸¹ and other needful writs, orders, and process;⁸² but this does not include the protection of a right which may be urged on appeal to the court of appeal.⁸³ Application for such writs in cases appealable to the court of appeal should be made to it and not to the supreme court.⁸⁴ In a proceeding for such writ, a court of appeal has no jurisdiction of the merits of the controversy, but may grant such orders only as are necessary in aid of its appellate jurisdiction.⁸⁵

A court of appeal, and each of the judges thereof, also has the power to issue writs of habeas corpus at the instance of any person in actual custody within their respective circuits.⁸⁶

Supervisory powers. The courts of appeal have no general supervisory jurisdiction over the district court and other inferior courts;⁸⁷ but have only a special or limited supervisory jurisdiction over such courts in aid of or to enforce their own appellate jurisdiction.⁸⁸ To this end, courts of appeal may, in all cases appealable to them, issue remedial orders directing district judges to perform such official functions, or to permit a litigant to take such steps, as may be necessary to enable him to perfect his appeal.⁸⁹

Practice. Under article 7 § 27, all cases on appeal to the court of appeals must be tried on the original record, pleadings, and evidence;⁹⁰ and

Where defendants in injunction action failed to show in mandamus, certiorari, and prohibition proceeding to compel trial court to grant a suspensive appeal, that plaintiff in injunction suit had been given notice of application for a suspensive appeal and there was no record from which court of appeal could reach conclusion that trial court abused its discretion in refusing to grant appeal, trial court would not be compelled by court of appeal to grant the appeal.—U. 90. Only on appeals from district courts

This provision applies only to appeals from district courts, and does not preclude jurisdiction of an ap-

the rules of practice regulating appeals to, and proceedings in, the supreme court regulate as far as applicable appeals and proceedings in the court of appeal.⁹¹

§ 380. — District Courts

The constitution regulates the appellate jurisdiction of the district courts.

Under article 7 § 36, the district courts have jurisdiction of appeals from justices of the peace from orders requiring peace bonds,⁹² and of all civil matters regardless of the amount in dispute,⁹³ except cases where immovable property, either separately or in conjunction with movable property, is claimed as a homestead. A district court has only a limited supervisory jurisdiction in aid of its appellate jurisdiction over inferior courts.⁹⁴ The review of the proceedings of the inferior Louisiana courts has already been considered supra § 265.

§ 381. — Amount in Controversy

As provided by the constitution, appellate jurisdiction is in the supreme court in civil suits, with certain exceptions, only where the amount in dispute or the fund to be distributed exceeds two thousand dollars exclusive of interest; and is in the courts of appeal where such amount or fund exceeds one hundred dollars and does not exceed two thousand dollars, exclusive of interest.

Under Constitution article 7 § 10, appellate jurisdiction in civil suits, except suits for damages for physical injuries to, or for the death of, a person, or for other damages sustained by such person or his heirs or legal representatives, arising out of the same circumstances, is in the supreme court, only where the amount in dispute,⁹⁵ the value of the peal from a parish court.—State v. Judges Cir. Ct. of App., 32 La. Ann. 774.

In suit for reduction of assessment alleged to be excessive, the amount in contest is the amount of taxes levied on the alleged excess, and where that amount is less than two thousand dollars, and no question of the constitutionality or legality of the tax is presented, the supreme court has no jurisdiction of the appeal under Const. art 85.—Getty v. Richards, 84 So. 589, 147 La. 204.

Money demand coupled with demand for realty

Where a money demand for three hundred and thirty dollars is coupled with a demand for possession of thing or property in dispute,⁹⁶ or the fund to be distributed,⁹⁷ irrespective of the amount claimed,⁹⁸ exceeds two thousand dollars exclusive of interest,⁹⁹ and, moreover, jurisdiction cannot be con-reality, which exceeds in value the lower jurisdiction of the court, the supreme court has jurisdiction of an appeal.—Ward v. Lynn, 99 So. 359, 149 La. 1043.

No money or property involved

The supreme court has no jurisdiction of an appeal by relators seeking to compel by mandamus a city board of health to change certain designations of their ancestors and other blood relatives in its records of vital statistics from "colored" to "white," since no amount of money or property is involved.—State ex rel. Alinet v. Board of Health of City of New Orleans, 99 So. 559, 155 La. 758.

15 C.J. p 1066 note 80.

"Amount in dispute"

(1) The words "amount in dispute" in the constitutional provision that amount in dispute must exceed two thousand dollars, exclusive of interest, to vest supreme court with jurisdiction, includes value of thing in contest, where a thing instead of an amount is in dispute.—Baker v. Duson, 188 So. 40, 192 La. 391, transferred, see 189 So. 510—A. Baldwin & Co. v. McCain, 106 So. 459, 159 La. 966—Noel Estate v. Louisiana Oil Refining Corporation, App., 170 So. 372, transferred, see 175 So. 744, 188 La. 45.

(2) It is the value of what plaintiff claims and defendant disputes; and the value of what is involved in a collateral question which may have to be determined does not govern question of jurisdiction.—Richardson v. Charles Kirsch & Co., 187 So. 1, 191 La. 991, transferred, see 179 So. 631, transferred, see App., 189 So. 146, rehearing denied 189 So. 621.

"Amount in contest"

In suit to annul sale of bank scrip because of buyer's fraud and to have value thereof inventoried as asset of seller's succession, alleged value of scrip, not face value, was the "amount in contest" respecting supreme court's jurisdiction notwithstanding allegation that defendant buyer, using scrip fraudulently obtained, purchased lot whose value exceeded jurisdictional amount.—Carroll v. David, 154 So. 913, 179 La. 713, transferred, see App., 158 So. 250.

Value of estate

Supreme court has appellate jurisdiction of suit to invalidate will, where value of estate exceeds two thousand dollars, regardless of value of property bequeathed.—Succession of Wilson, 145 So. 13, 175 La. 1078.

Value of privilege, recognition and enforcement of which is demanded, determines jurisdiction of supreme court, but suit value cannot exceed amount of debt it secures.—A. Baldwin & Co. v. McCain, 106 So. 459, 159 La. 966.

Third person appeal

Where value of interest claimed by third person, not a party to the suit in which a judgment is rendered, is shown to exceed amount required to confer jurisdiction on supreme court, the appeal will not be dismissed, nor will an appeal be dismissed in such case because of a doubt as to appellant's ability to establish his claim as a matter of law.—Raines v. Dunson, 82 So. 690, 145 La. 525.

Approving or amending account

Jurisdiction of appeal from judgment approving or amending an account or a tableau of distribution of receiver, liquidator, or administrator is determined entirely by amount of fund to be distributed.—General Motors Truck Co. of Louisiana v. Caddo Transfer & Warehouse Co., App., 172 So. 178, transferred, see 179 So. 843, 189 La. 529.

In cases of succession and insolvency, the test of the supreme court's appellate jurisdiction is not the actual amount distributed in a provisional account, or amount of assets handled, but the total amount of fund to be distributed.—Succession of Wengert, 152 So. 747, 178 La. 1027—*Knighon v. Custody or disposal of fund not involved

As under Act 1921 No. 118 §§ 7, 8, members of supervising boards of road districts are mere agents, serving without pay, and not charged with the custody or disposal of a fund, the two thousand dollars necessary to give the supreme court jurisdiction on appeal is not involved on an appeal from a decree holding void an ordinance of defendant police jury discharging plaintiffs from such board of supervisors, and enjoining defendant from interfering with plaintiffs in the discharge of their duties as such board members.—Fellows v. Police Jury of Tangipahoa, 107 So. 514, 160 La. 749.

ferred by agreement of the litigants.¹ A provision limiting the supreme court's jurisdiction to cases where a fine exceeds three hundred dollars or imprisonment not exceeding six months does not apply to an appeal from a juvenile court.² The supreme court, however, has jurisdiction, regardless of the amount or value in dispute, to construe the provisions of its own judgment or decree.³

Under Constitution article 7 §§ 10, 29, courts of appeal have appellate jurisdiction only where the matter in dispute, or the funds to be distributed, exceed one hundred dollars, exclusive of interest,⁴ and do not exceed two thousand dollars, exclusive of interest;⁵ and, as announced supra § 377, if transferred, see 179 So. 843, 189 La. 529.

Principal of claim only, exclusive of accrued interest, must be considered in a revocatory action, in determining the jurisdiction of the supreme court on appeal, relative to jurisdictional amount.—Weinfurter v. Cresap, 99 So. 528, 155 La. 632.

Interest as amount in dispute

Where demand is for interest alone, total amount of interest sought to be recovered is "amount in dispute" in determining which appellate court has jurisdiction.—Brock v. People's Sav. Bank & Trust Co., App., 148 So. 460.

Damages equal to interest as "principal"

Where a judgment in a suit to dissolve an agreement for the sale of land awards damages in a sum equal to the interest on the agreed price to the date of the judgment, such sum constitutes "principal" and not "interest" within the provision limiting the supreme court's appellate jurisdiction to two thousand dollars exclusive of interest.—Soniat v. Cumulating demands

Plaintiffs having separate and distinct causes of action, none of which is sufficient in amount to give the supreme court appellate jurisdiction, cannot give such jurisdiction by cumulating their demands in a single suit.—Hotard v. an appeal within the jurisdictional amount of a court of appeal is erroneously brought in the supreme court, it will be transferred to a court of appeal.

In a suit for damages, appellate jurisdiction is in the supreme court, and not in a court of appeal, if the amount of damages involved exceeds two thousand dollars,⁶ but in a court of appeal if the amount involved is less than that amount;⁷ except that the jurisdiction is in a court of appeal, regardless of the amount involved, if the suit is for damages for physical injuries to, or for the death of, a person,⁸ or for other damages sustained by such person or his heirs or legal representatives arising out of the same circumstances.⁹

The court having appellate jurisdiction of the main demand, has appellate jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment on a reconventional or incidental demand, regardless of the amount involved.¹⁰ On the other hand, if the amount of the main

Fund held as evidence

When a criminal proceeding in which money held as evidence terminates, and a controversy arises over a right to such money, a "civil action" arises, and an appeal lies in such action to the court of appeals where the amount involved is within the jurisdiction of that court.—Byrnes v. Richardson, 116 So. 496, 165 La. 1025, answers to certified questions conformed to 8 La.App. 633.

Merits of case

Where amount in dispute in suit on indemnity bond was in excess of amount of which court of appeal had jurisdiction, such court was without jurisdiction to determine correctness of ruling that insurer had incurred statutory penalty by refusing to pay part of insured's demand, since such determination required consideration of merits of entire case.—Shreveport Laundries v. St. Paul-Mercury Indemnity Co. of St. Paul, La.App., 169 So. 353.

Bandelin, 6 La.App. 564—Spearman v. Toye Bros. Auto & Taxicab Co., 4 La.App. 476.

Failure to summon medical assistance

The court of appeal had appellate jurisdiction of action against bus company for breach of contract of carriage in failing to summon medical assistance in aid of passenger while passenger was suffering from an apoplectic stroke, irrespective of amount demanded.—Searcy v. Interurban Transp. Co., App., 179 So. 93, reversing 171 So. 468 and reversed on other grounds 179 So. 75, 189 La. 183.

demand is insufficient the supreme court is without jurisdiction, notwithstanding the claim in reconvention exceeds the jurisdictional amount.¹¹

Determination of jurisdictional amount. Appellate jurisdiction, whether in the supreme court or in a court of appeal, is determined by the amount remaining in contest when the case has been submitted for decision in the court of original jurisdiction,¹² or, as otherwise expressed by the amount in dispute at the time the judgment appealed from was rendered.¹³

As a general rule, the amount of the main claim or demand, as placed in dispute by the pleadings controls in determining the jurisdictional amount,¹⁴ and where no pecuniary amount is in dispute, the value of the thing or object in controversy determines appellate jurisdiction,¹⁵ and the particular amount or value to be considered is largely con-

Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co., 112 So. 415, 163 La. 555—Monjure v. Cousins, 106 So. 735, 160 La. 208.

What demand is basis for determining to which court the appeal shall be, whether appeal be taken from the judgment on the principal and the reconventional demand or from either, and whether by plaintiff or defendant.—Robinson Mercantile Co. v. Freeman, La.App., 172 So. 797.

Suit in nature of third opposition

As regards appellate jurisdiction of court of appeal in a suit in the nature of a third opposition wherein the third opponent contended that an automobile levied on in an in rem action against another party belonged to the third opponent, a demand for one hundred dollars to cover counsel fee for the third opponent was merely incidental to the question of the ownership of the automobile.—Ethridge-Atkins Corporation v. Johnson, La.App., 183 So. 37. Reconventional or incidental demand as affecting appellate jurisdiction generally see supra § 377.

Amount for which judgment could be rendered controls jurisdiction.—Johnson v. National Casualty Co., 4 La.App. 574.

Second action increasing amount claimed

Where, after dismissal of a suit for a sum below the supreme court's appellate jurisdiction, plaintiff sued for a sum within such jurisdiction, but the judgment was below such jurisdiction, the supreme court would not assume jurisdiction.—Ham v. Louisiana, etc., R. Co., 68 So. 133, 136 La. 1083.

Amount of expenditure as test

La.—Board of Health of State of Louisiana v. Town of De Quincy, 111 So. 789, 163 La. 369—State ex rel. Chandler v. City of Shreveport, 91 So. 850, 151 La. 491.

Amount of tax

In suit to cancel and annul assessments erroneously assessed in name of one not the owner, and to restrain a city from acting under such assessments, amount of tax claimed to be due determines jurisdiction of supreme court.—Nyika Land Co. v. City of New Orleans, 102 So. 477, 157 La. 386.

Existence and extent of lien

Where matter in dispute was as to existence and extent of lien, extent of lien and amount claimed as attorney's fees, and not value of property, determined which court had appellate jurisdiction.—Wesson v. John Woodley, Inc., 139 So. 676, 19 La.App. 369.

Money demand

Where the money demand in a suit for slander of title exceeds two thousand dollars, the supreme court has jurisdiction on appeal, although the value of the possession of the property is not shown.—Interstate Land Co. v. Fellman, 64 So. 404, 134 La. 538.

15. La.—Ethridge-Atkins Corporation v. Johnson, App., 183 So. 37—Perryman v. Trimble, App., 170 So. 253, transferred, see 179 So. 577, 189 La. 398—Hourquette v. City of Gretna, 137 So. 344, 18 La.App. 336.

Value of right

Where issue is right of possession of property, value of such right detrolled by the nature of the action or proceeding.¹⁶ This, however, has reference to actual controversies and not to fictitious, unfounded, and inflated claims and demands obviously made to create jurisdiction.¹⁷ Where the matter in contest is the possession of an office, appellate jurisdiction, whether in the supreme court or in a court of appeal is to be determined by the amount of the emoluments of the office.¹⁸ termines question of jurisdiction of appellate court.—Babst v. Hartz, 1 La.App. 498.

Where ownership of small fund is in dispute and that question depends on the existence or nonexistence of a right worth many thousands of dollars, and the appeal clearly presents both questions, the pecuniary value of the right constitutes the real amount in dispute for jurisdictional purposes.—Perryman v. Trimble, La. App., 170 So. 253, transferred, see 179 So. 577, 189 La. 398.

Uncertain values not considered

On appeal in suit to set aside sheriff's deed, value of mineral lease would not be considered in fixation of value of property in determination of jurisdiction of court of appeals, since mineral rights are regarded as fugitive rights which have uncertain existence and value.—Thibodeaux v. Bergeron, App., 166 So. 398, affirmed 171 So. 34, 185 La. 794.

16. La.—Falgout v. Johnson, 186 So. 349, 191 La. 823—General Motors Truck Co. of Louisiana v. Enderle, 139 So. 84, 19 La.App. 417.

Against principal and surety

Principal and sureties have common interest, and, when codefendants, amount in dispute is total amount of demand against them.—Louisiana State Rice Milling Co. v. Herasby, 2 La.App. 584.

Enforcement of Men

Where litigant seeks to enforce lien, as securing a claim for money, the amount in dispute is determined for purposes of appellate jurisdiction of supreme court and of courts of appeal by amount of claim, and not by value of property against which it is asserted.—Day v. Helena Lumber Co., 76 So. 820, 142 La. 409.

In action of partition, value of whole property, and net value of share or shares of litigants, is test of jurisdiction of court of appeal.—Mitcham v. Mitcham, La.App., 160 So. 145, transferred, see Sup., 178 So.

132—Gentilly Development Co. v. Carbajal, 123 So. 325, 168 La. 786, followed in 121 So. 214, 10 La.App. 125.

In action in simulation, the value of the property or transaction involved controls.—Aubrey v. Guillaumin, 50 So. 241, 144 La. 177—Lowe v. Garriga, La.App., 162 So. 441, cause remanded 166 So. 131, 184 La. 436, conformed to, App., 169 So. 109—First Nat. Bank v. Jones, La.App., 161 So. 54, transferred, see 172 So. 155, 186 La. 269.

In concursus proceeding, the jurisdictional amount involved is the fund to be distributed.—Kelly, Weber & Co. v. F. D. Harvey & Co., 151 So. 201, 178 La. 266—McDonald v. Harris Gas & Oil Co., 2 La.App. 241.

In contest between judgment creditor and third person

Where judgment creditor seizes property by garnishment process or otherwise and third person sets up ownership of property or rights against it superior to those of seizing creditor, amount involved is value of property seized and not amount of judgment.—Bacher v. Krauss, 154 So. 733, 179 La. 675, transferred, see App., 159 So. 766.

In contest between judgment creditor and judgment debtor, the amount in contest is the amount of the judgment or debt and not the value of the property.—Gaillardanne v. Locascio, 162 So. 69, 182 La. 539—Bacher v. Krauss, 154 So. 733, 179 La. 675, transferred, see App., 159 So. 766—Louisiana Western Lumber Co. v. Stanford, 152 So. 755, 178 La. 1052—Succession of Williams, 102 So. 411, 157 La. 309.

In possessory action, the value of the possession must exceed two thousand dollars to vest the supreme court with jurisdiction.—Stafford v. Murray, 93 So. 195, 152 La. 389—Immanuel Presbyterian Church v. Riedy, 27 So. 888, 52 La. Ann. 1353.

In revocatory action the amount of the claim or debt sought to be collected controls the forum of appeal.—Weinfurter v. Cresap, 99 So. 528, 155 La. 682—Gast v. Gast, La. App., 181 So. 204—Lowe v. Garriga, La.App., 162 So. 441, cause remanded 166 So. 131, 184 La. 436, conformed to, App., 169 So. 109.

In suit to rescind land contract, the amount in dispute, as regards the jurisdiction, is the purchase price or value of the property, and not the amount of the deposit.—Richardson v. Charles Kirsch & Co., La.App., 179 So. 631, transferred, see 187 So. 1, 191 La. 991, transferred, see 189 So. 146, rehearing denied 189 So. 621—*Bussey v. Petitory action

(1) In petitory action, title itself is in dispute, and amount involved is not merely value of right of occupancy.—Bywater v. Enderle, 139 So. 84, 19 La.App. 417.

(2) In such an action to have title to property recognized, coupled with demand for rent, an appeal from judgment for sum less than minimum jurisdiction of supreme court is not dismissible.—Pino v. Dufour, 140 So. 31, 174 La. 227.

Where executory process had been sued out by mortgagee against mortgagor seizing mortgaged property, amount of claim and not value of property against which mortgage was asserted determines appellate jurisdiction.—Gaillardanne v. Locascio, 162 So. 69, 182 La. 539.

Allegation of one litigant as to value of right involved in suit or amount in dispute is not controlling on question of appellate jurisdiction, especially when made for obvious purpose of establishing jurisdiction.—Fontenot v. Ludeau, 182 So. 125, 190 La. 133.

Although the jurisdictional amount should be alleged,¹⁹ in determining the question of jurisdiction, the appellate court is not bound to accept allegations as to the amount in controversy but will look into the record to ascertain the real amount in dispute,²⁰ and may consider proof by affidavits.²¹

Reduction of amount. A remittitur, admission, or withdrawal, reducing the amount claimed, before judgment in the trial court, to below the particular appellate court's jurisdictional amount, deprives that court of appellate jurisdiction,²² but not where such

Under statute creating new boards "Matter in dispute" on applications of members of fire and police department boards, appointed under statute abolishing boards existing under city charter and creating new boards with new members, for writs of certiorari and prohibition ordering members of old boards to desist from execution of judgment restraining members of new boards from taking office, would not be measured by value of offices of members of new boards, as regards whether supreme court had jurisdiction.—Walmsley v. Uncertainty of demand

Where demand for judgment commanding highway commission to put in adequate culverts was too uncertain to warrant relief, it was too uncertain to show cost of culverts would exceed jurisdiction of court of appeal.—Murrif v. Louisiana Highway Commission, 146 So. 767, denying rehearing 146 So. 328.

Asking for less than amount in issue

An appellant's brief does not have the effect of amending his pleadings, and where the amount in issue is over two thousand dollars, the supreme court has jurisdiction of the appeal, although appellant's brief asks judgment for less than that amount.—Ducros v. St. Bernard Cypress Co., 114 So. 654, 164 La. 787.

Amount acknowledged to be due

On question of appellate jurisdiction, amount which defendant in answer judicially acknowledges to be due is not in dispute.—Steege Printing & Publishing Co. v. Auto Lec Stores, 134 So. 746, 172 La. 565, transferred, see 138 So. 899, 18 La.App. 477.

Burden of proof

On appeal of civil case of which district court had exclusive original jurisdiction, appellant has burden of affirmatively proving amount in dispute was under two thousand dollars to establish court of appeals jurisdiction.—Ducre v. Milner, 141 So. 617, annulling 140 So. 158, rehearing denied 142 So. 618, set aside 144 So. 610, 175 La. 897, conformed to, App., 146 So. 734, rehearing denied 146 So. 735.

Petition and answer

In determining jurisdiction of supreme court, amount demanded is determined from petition, while amount in dispute is determined from petition and answer.—Villemeur v. Woodward, 132 So. 361, 171 La. 831, transferred, see 130 So. 366, 14 La.App. 597, and transferred, see 134 So. 111, 16 La.App. 535.

Supreme court may review evidence in a suit for damages, in order to determine if the amount claimed as damages has been inflated, for the purpose of conferring appellate jurisdiction.—Trenchard v. Central Laundry Co., 98 So. 558, 154 La. 1003.

Affidavit annexed to appeal from order appointing receiver that amount involved was more than two thousand dollars has been held sufficient to give supreme court jurisdiction.—A. Weinfeld, Inc., v. Ferd. S. Kaufman, Inc., 143 So. 277, 175 La. 321.

Place of filing

Affidavit of value in proof of amount in contest to determine appellate jurisdiction should be filed in appellate court, and filing in district court affidavit of value for proving amount in contest, is not filing in appellate court, entitling affidavit to consideration in determining jurisdiction.—Ducre v. Milner, La.App., 142 So. 618, denying rehearing 141 So. 617, annulling 140 So. 158, set aside, Sup., 144 So. 610, conformed to, App., 146 So. 734.

Time of filing

Affidavits as to value of property involved in suits may be filed in supreme court by appellants after filing of motions to dismiss appeals thereto for lack of pecuniary jurisdiction.—Fontenot v. Ludeau, 182 So. 125, 190 La. 133.

§ 382. — Cases Involving Constitutional Questions

The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in a case in which an ordinance or statute has been declared unconstitutional.

Under Constitution article 7 § 10, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases where in an ordinance of a parish, municipal corporation, board, or subdivision of the state²⁴ or a law of the state,²⁵ has been declared unconstitutional, by the lower court,²⁶ in which cases the appeal on the law and the facts shall be directly from the court in which the case originated to the supreme court, except in cases in which appeal to the court of appeal is required by a special provision of the constitution.²⁷ Under the provision of article 7 § 10, however, the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, in such cases, is limited to passing on the constitutionality of the ordinance or statute declared to be unconstitutional.²⁸

§ 383. — Cases Involving Tax, Toll, Impost, Fine, or Penalty

The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction of cases in which is contested the constitutionality or legality of any tax, toll, impost, fine, forfeiture, or penalty.

Under Constitution article 7 § 10, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases where in is contested the constitutionality or legality of any tax,²⁹ or the constitutionality or legality of Amount admitted due in answer must be deducted from amount claimed in petition in determining amount in controversy for jurisdictional purposes.—Nelson v. Continental Asphalt & Petroleum Co., 103 So. 583, 157 La. 491.

Confession of judgment

Supreme court is without jurisdiction of appeal, in action to recover of an adjoining proprietor one half the value of a party wall, where defendants, by confessing judgment in favor of plaintiff for smaller amount, and praying that she have judgment against them for that sum, thereby reduces amount in dispute below minimum appellate jurisdiction of supreme court.—Fitzgerald v. Katzenstein, 105 So. 226, 159 La. 64.

Estoppel to challenge validity

Where mortgagor sought benefit of Moratorium Law, mortgagee having acquiesced in proceeding by answering rule to show cause and invoking statute without attacking validity thereof cannot challenge validity of law in reviewing court.—Newman v. Reems, 158 So. 13, 180 La. 904.

Jurisdiction of court of appeal

This provision impliedly gives court of appeal jurisdiction of cases where trial court upholds constitutionality of law.—Pinder v. Board of Sup'rs of Election of Calcasieu Parish, La.App., 146 So. 715.

Merely raising constitutional question does not vest the supreme court with appellate jurisdiction.—Clementine v. Ritchie, 99 So. 213, 155 La. 263—State v. Price, 124 La. 670, 50 So. 647.

Presumption

Where the judgment appealed from may have been based either on the ground that the case presented was not within the law relied on, or on the ground that such law is unconstitutional, it will not be presumed for the purpose of the jurisdiction on appeal, that the latter was the ground adopted.—State v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., 40 So. 630, 116 La. 189.

Liability for license

Where defendant is sued for a license as a retail liquor dealer, and defends on the ground that he was a wholesale merchant, the question on review is one of fact as to his liability, and an appeal will not lie to the supreme court on the ground of the unconstitutionality of the act under which the taxes are levied.—New Orleans v. Constitutionality or legality is contested

(1) Where applicability of taxing statute to entire class is in dispute.—State v. Moore, 140 So. 516, 19 La. App. 364, transferred, see 143 So. 707, 175 La. 607, followed in State v. Charles E. Wermuth Co., 140 So. 699, 19 La.App. 443, transferred, see 147 So. 692, 177 La. 83.

(2) When judicial interpretation of tax statute invoked is necessary to determine whether tax claimed is due, or when defendant pleads that there is no statute compelling payment of tax claimed.—State v. Whitehead Motor Co., 154 So. 912, 179 La. 710—State v. Cedar Grove Refining Co., 152 So. 531, 178 La. 810—State v. Wenar, 42 So. 726, 118 La. 141.

(3) Where, in a suit to annul and avoid an assessment of property for taxation and to enjoin collection of the tax, plaintiff contends that the property is not subject to assessment or taxation in any amount, and, therefore, the assessment is illegal and void.—Esto Real Estate Corporation v. Louisiana Tax Commission, 127 So. 12, 13 La.App. 81, transferred, see 129 So. 117, 170 La. 649.

Attack on assessment only will not suffice, so as to give the supreme court jurisdiction on appeal, as involving the validity of a tax.—Teabault v. New Orleans, 32 So. 983, 108 La. 686.

License tax

A case presenting a contest as to the constitutionality or legality of a license tax is within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court.—State v. Cedar Grove Refining Co., 152 So. 531, 178 La. 810—Downs v. Dunn, 111 So. 82, 162 La. 747—State ex rel. Brittain v. Hayes, 78 So. 143, 143 La. 39—State v. Direct appeal

(1) Defendant attacking by exception and answer constitutionality of statute imposing tax has right to appeal directly to supreme court on constitutional question in proceedings for recovery of tax.—Grosjean v. American Paint Works, La.App., 160 So. 449.

(2) Where amount of tax depends on the construction of revenue statute, the legality of tax is in contestation, and an appeal lies from court of first instance directly to supreme court.—State ex rel. Guillot v. Central Bank & Trust Co., 79 So. 857, 143 La. 1053.

Mayor and Board of Aldermen of City of Opelousas, App., 145 So. 780, transferred, see 149 So. 494, 177 La. 835.

As "tax"

(1) Where local assessment for street improvements is made or levied by compulsion of law, without regard to the assent or dissent of the abutting owners, it presents the case of a "tax," as used in the constitutional provision conferring jurisdiction on supreme court.—Town of Minden v. Stewart, 77 So. 118, 142 La. 467—15 C.J. p 1067 note 92 [c].

(2) A local assessment or forced contribution imposed under authority of a petition of a majority of property owners is not a "tax," within such provision.—City of Shreveport v. Land, 86 So. 499, 147 La. 1075—Grasser Paving & Contracting Co. v. Richardson, 81 So. 429, 144 La. 933—Ayers Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Loewengardt, 33 So. 553, 109 La. 439.

Denial that assessment is properly apportioned raises the question of the legality of the assessment and creates an issue of which the supreme court has jurisdiction, without regard to the amount in dispute.—Moody v. Spotorno, 36 So. 836, 112 La. 1008.

Court of appeal has no jurisdiction in cases involving constitutionality of municipal local improvement assessments.—City of Monroe v. Cooper, 120 So. 551, 9 La.App. 291.

31. La.—New Orleans v. Williams, 64 So. 229, 134 La. 421. 15 C.J. p 1068 note 95.

Appeal from city criminal court

Supreme court could have jurisdiction of appeal from judgment of city criminal court, convicting defendant of violation of ordinance of sewerage and water board of city of New Orleans, and fining her twenty dollars, only on hypothesis that appeal involved legality of fine imposed by municipal corporation.—State v. Servat, 78 So. 437, 113 La. 175.

Decision must be necessary

The supreme court will not take jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment of a justice's court, taken on the ground that the constitutionality of an ordinance imposing a fine was in controversy, unless the pleadings raised the issue, and the facts called for a decision thereon.—Moss v. Newhouse, 27 So. 536, 52 La. Ann. 945.

15 C.J. p 1068 note 97.

In prosecution in mayor's court under city ordinance, if question of constitutionality or legality of ordinance had been tendered and decided therein, either town or defendant would have had right of appeal direct to supreme court on question of validity of ordinance, and defendant would have had right of appeal to district court on other questions.—Town of St. Martinville v. Dugas, 103 So. 761, 158 La. 262.

Violation of liquor ordinance

The supreme court has jurisdiction of appeal from conviction and sentence for violating parish ordinance prohibiting sale of intoxicating liquor, when the constitutionality or legality of the ordinance is in contest, even though the court below has declared the ordinance constitutional and legal, as such ordinance is a penal ordinance.—State v. Wactor, 179 So. 865, 189 La. 535.

Ordinance directing impounding of animals found running at large and authorizing public sales imposes "penalty," giving supreme court appellate jurisdiction.—Boykin v. Police Jury of Richland Parish, 126 So. 511, 169 La. 1014.

Supreme court and not criminal district court has jurisdiction of an appeal from New Orleans recorder's court, when constitutionality or legality of penalty imposed by ordinance is in question.—City of New Orleans v. New Orleans Butchers' or subdivision of the state.³⁴ If the question of constitutionality or legality is properly contested, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in such cases regardless of the amount in dispute,³⁵ and regardless of the decision of the lower court;³⁶ but it has no appellate jurisdiction if neither the constitutionality of the ordinance or statute involved nor the legality of the tax, toll, fine, or penalty is disputed in the lower court, and the jurisdictional amount is absent.³⁷ If the constitutionality of an ordinance is first invoked on appeal to a district court, the supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction thereof.³⁸

The supreme court's appellate jurisdiction in such cases extends only to the question of the constitutionality or legality of the ordinance or statute involved,³⁹ and not as to whether it applies to a particular case,⁴⁰ nor to questions as to the regularity or legality of the trial or proceedings.⁴¹ Other questions must be disposed of by the court of appeal, as explained supra § 379, or by another court, as authorized by the constitution.⁴²

§ 384. Maine

The supreme judicial court of Maine is a court of general common-law and appellate jurisdiction, exercising general superintendence over all inferior courts; it is obliged to give advisory opinions on important questions of law and on solemn occasions when requested by the governor, council, senate or house of representatives. The supreme court of probate exercises certain appellate jurisdiction over probate courts.

The supreme judicial court has general common-law jurisdiction in all cases, unless its powers are restricted by constitution or statute;⁴³ it has general superintendence of all courts of inferior jurisdiction, for the prevention and correction of errors and abuses, where the laws do not expressly provide a remedy,⁴⁴ and it may issue all writs and processes, not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court, necessary for the furtherance of justice or the execution of the laws.⁴⁵

Writ of prohibition

Me.—Norton v. Emery, 81 A. 671, 108 Me. 472—Harriman v. Waldo County Comrs., 53 Me. 83.

When sitting as a law court it is not a constitutional court, but one created by statute and its jurisdiction is limited thereby;⁴⁶ and it has been held that, while sitting in banc as such a court, it does not have original jurisdiction and so cannot grant leave to amend,⁴⁷ nor hear a motion to set aside a verdict as against the weight of evidence where there has been no ruling thereon by the court below.⁴⁸ The court has only such equity powers as are conferred by statute;⁴⁹ but under the statutes the court possesses full equity jurisdiction, according to the usage and practice of courts of equity, in all cases where there is not a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law.⁵⁰

Advisory opinions. The justices of this court are, by virtue of a constitutional provision, obliged to give their opinion on important questions of law, and on solemn occasions, when required by the governor, council, senate, or house of representatives;⁵¹ but such advisory opinions are proper only with respect to matters of instant concern, and not as to matters of past or future concern.⁵²

The supreme court of probate exercises, with certain statutory exceptions, appellate jurisdiction over the probate court;⁵³ and questions of law when properly presented by bills of exception,⁵⁴ or by an agreed statement of facts,⁵⁵ may be taken from the supreme court of probate to the law court.

Formerly the supreme judicial court was also the supreme court of probate, the latter court being held by one member of the court at nisi prius term;⁵⁶ but under the present statute the superior court sits in that capacity.⁵⁷

§ 385. Maryland

Particular appellate courts in the state of Maryland are considered infra §§ 386, 387.

§ 386. — Court of Appeals

The court of appeals in Maryland has appellate jurisdiction only, with power to issue such writs as may be necessary to the exercise of such jurisdiction.

The court of appeals has appellate jurisdiction only,⁵⁸ and it is beyond the power of the legislature to confer original jurisdiction upon it, and accordingly, this court is without jurisdiction to issue original writs of certiorari, habeas corpus, or mandamus;⁵⁹ but such writs may be issued where it is necessary to a proper exercise of the court's appellate jurisdiction.⁶⁰ Except where otherwise provided by statute,⁶¹ the court of appeals is the proper court to review a decision of the orphans' court.⁶²

Questions involving jurisdiction

(1) The court of appeals may review a decision of the orphans' court

§ 387. — Other Courts

The circuit court exercises certain appellate jurisdiction.

The circuit courts exercise appellate jurisdiction in certain cases,⁶³ and their judgment in the exercise of this jurisdiction is final, unless a statute expressly authorizes an appeal to the court of appeals, or unless the jurisdiction of the circuit court is involved.⁶⁴ Review of the proceedings of inferior Maryland courts generally is considered in § 267.

§ 388. Massachusetts

The appellate courts in Massachusetts are considered infra §§ 389, 390.

§ 389. — Supreme Judicial Court

The supreme judicial court exercises appellate jurisdiction and general supervisory control over inferior courts, as well as certain original jurisdiction. Also it is obliged to give advisory opinions on important questions of law and on solemn occasions when requested by either branch of the legislature or the governor and council.

The supreme judicial court has appellate jurisdiction over the superior court,⁶⁵ over the supreme judicial court when it is sitting as a trial court for a county,⁶⁶ and, except as may be otherwise provided by statute, over probate courts.⁶⁷ Also it has general superintendence of all courts of inferior jurisdiction to correct and prevent errors and abuses therein where no other remedy is expressly provided;⁶⁸ and it may issue all writs and processes which may be necessary to the furtherance of justice and to the regular execution of the laws.⁶⁹ The supreme judicial court sitting for a county may exercise certain appellate jurisdiction over other courts;⁷⁰ but questions of law, such as arise by assignments of error,⁷¹ exceptions,⁷² or a report of the case on an agreed statement or case stated⁷³ are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the full court, which transcends its restricted power.—Newton v. Johnson, 195 A. 312, 173 M.J. 166.

(2) Where the petition in a probate proceeding improperly combines an allegation as to the omission of assets, over which subject the orphans' court has jurisdiction, with other independent matters over which the orphans' court has no jurisdiction, and the order of the court, following the petition, deals with and determines both subject matters, the appeal does not lie to the circuit court, when taken from both rulings, but to the court of appeals.—Stonesifer v. Shriver, 59 A. 139, 100 Md. 24.

Certification of issue of jurisdiction
Where the issue of a circuit court's jurisdiction is involved, as in the case on appeal from a justice of the peace whose jurisdiction of the subject matter is questioned, it is proper procedure to send that issue up to the court of appeals on a certificate.—Whittington v. Hall, 82 A. 163, 116 Md. 467.

65. Order of board of appeal on motor vehicle liability policies

Under a statute providing that the decision of the superior court on appeal from an order of the board of appeal on motor vehicle liability policies should be final, the supreme judicial court has jurisdiction in certiorari concerning such a decision by the superior court.—Merchants Mut. Casualty Co. v. Justices of Superior Court, 197 N.E. 166, 291 Mass. 164.

66. Mass.—Sherburne v. Howland, 132 N.E. 183, 239 Mass. 439.

A judgment of the court of common pleas, rendered on appeal from the decision of commissioners on an insolvent estate appointed by the judge of probate, was reversed for want of jurisdiction, as the appeal should have been taken to the supreme judicial court.—Waters v. Randall, 8 Metc., Mass., 132.

70. Mass.—Sherburne v. Howland, 132 N.E. 183, 239 Mass. 439.

Writ of error

A single justice of the supreme judicial court may hear the evidence relative to issues of fact upon a writ of error, and, if he chooses, may report the case to the full court.—Rothschild v. Knight, 57 N.E. 337, 176 Mass. 48, affirmed 22 S.Ct. 391, 184 U.S. 334, 46 L.Ed. 573.

71. Mass.—Joyce v. Thompson, 119 N.E. 777, 230 Mass. 254—Conto v. Silvia, 49 N.E. 86, 170 Mass. 152—Tufts v. Newton, 119 Mass. 476.

72. Mass.—Conto v. Silvia, 49 N.E. 86, 170 Mass. 152—Granger v. Bassett, 98 Mass. 462.

15 C.J. p 1075 note 59 [c].

Exceptions from district court

Under a former statute, exceptions and appeals could be taken directly from a district court to the supreme judicial court where a jury trial was had, but not otherwise.—Haas v. Harrington, 116 Mass. 135.

Correction of record

The proper practice to secure correction of the record, after the entry of the exceptions or the report, is by motion to discharge the exceptions or the report for the purpose of having the corrections made, or by an agreement that corrections made by the trial judge may be considered part of the record.—Burbank v. Farnham, 107 N.E. 351, 108 N.E. 492, 220 Mass. 514.

73. Mass.—Weil v. Boston El. R. Co., 104 N.E. 343, 216 Mass. 545—Massachusetts Nat. Bank v. Bullock, 120 Mass. 86.

When findings of fact by the lower court are necessary to present the question of law involved, the trial judge cannot omit to make such findings before presenting the case to the full court.—Atlantic Maritime Co. v. City of Gloucester, 117 N.E. 924, 228 Mass. 519.

rather than of the court when held by a single justice.

The supreme judicial court sitting for a county may exercise original jurisdiction,⁷⁴ including jurisdiction in equity in so far as it has been conferred by statute, expressly or by implication.⁷⁵

Advisory opinions. Under a constitutional provision each branch of the legislature, as well as the governor and council, has authority to require the opinions of the justices of the supreme judicial court upon important questions of law and upon solemn occasions.⁷⁶ Although such opinions presuppose judicial examination and consideration by the justices, they are advisory only,⁷⁷ and cannot overrule adjudicated cases,⁷⁸ and they are subject to reexamination when the questions involved are litigated.⁷⁹ Advisory opinions should not be given unless the question propounded comes clearly within the constitutional requirement.⁸⁰ Limitations on the obligation to give advisory opinions include requirements that the questions be such as must be determined by the body making the inquiry,⁸¹ that the questions relate to matters then pending before such body,⁸² and that the questions be doubtful ones which require solution.⁸³ Questions propounded should be explicit and specific,⁸⁴ as the practice of the justices is to confine their answers to particular questions of law submitted;⁸⁵ they are not required to answer purely abstract questions of law,⁸⁶ or discuss generally the constitutionality of a proposed statute in its entirety.⁸⁷ Questions of fact,⁸⁸ or questions of law

§ 390. — Other Courts

Certain appellate jurisdiction is exercised by the superior court and the appellate division of the municipal court of Boston.

The superior court of Massachusetts has jurisdiction of all civil actions and proceedings which are legally brought before it by appeal or removal, and appellate jurisdiction of crimes tried, etc., in specified courts.⁹⁰ The review of the proceedings of the inferior courts is considered in § 268 supra.

§ 391. Michigan

Decisions relating to the Michigan supreme and circuit courts as appellate courts are discussed in the sections immediately following.

§ 392. — Supreme Court

The supreme court of Michigan has general superintending control and appellate jurisdiction over inferior courts. It has no original jurisdiction except power to issue certain remedial writs.

The supreme court of Michigan has general superintending control over all inferior courts, and it has power to issue certain writs, including writs of error,⁹¹ mandamus,⁹² quo warranto,⁹³ and other original and remedial writs.⁹⁴ Except for its power to issue such original writs, the jurisdiction of the supreme court is appellate only,⁹⁵ and it has no original equity jurisdiction.⁹⁶ In the exercise of its powers as an appellate court, however, it may inaugurate and utilize any appropriate writ or procedure as in its judgment may be deemed fit.⁹⁷

The constitution has not empowered the supreme court to settle nonjudicial controversies.⁹⁸

To collect money demands unauthorized

A private corporation cannot, by entering into a peculiar form of contract, avoid an action at law for its breach, or give an appellate court original jurisdiction of mandamus for the collection thereunder of money demands against it; nor will its insolvency, or the fact that it cannot meet such demands until it has raised the necessary funds, confer such jurisdiction.—Burland v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Assoc., 11 N.W. 269, 47 Mich. 424.

Exclusive jurisdiction held in district court

An original application to the supreme court for mandamus directing the district court and the judge and clerk thereof to transfer all records and files in an action to the court of another county, the clerk having refused to transmit the same, will not be entertained, the district court having exclusive jurisdiction.—State v. Injunctions

(1) The supreme court does not sit for the purpose of granting injunctions, except it be on final hearing, when it is vested with jurisdiction on appeal; and, aside from the power exercised in such cases, it can interpose, if at all, only in case of a plain and gross abuse of discretion by the lower court.—Detroit, etc., Plank-Road Co. v. Frazer, 56 N.W. 1109, 98 Mich. 141.

(2) The supreme court can grant a temporary injunction, pending appeal, to prevent the removal of the subject matter beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or to otherwise prevent its decree from being rendered ineffective.—Patek v. Patek, 131 N.W. 1103, 166 Mich. 443.

98. Mich.—Hipp v. Charlevoix County, 29 N.W. 77, 62 Mich. 456.

§ 393. — Circuit Courts

The circuit courts of Michigan have appellate jurisdiction over all inferior courts and a supervisory control of the same.

The circuit courts have appellate jurisdiction over all inferior courts and tribunals,⁹⁹ and a supervisory control of the same.¹ They also have power to issue such writs as may be necessary to carry into effect their orders, judgments, or decrees, and give them general control over inferior courts and tribunals within their respective jurisdictions;² and under this power the circuit courts have been held to have jurisdiction to issue such writs as mandamus³ and certiorari.⁴

§ 394. Minnesota

Decisions relating to the Minnesota supreme court and as to appellate jurisdiction of district courts are discussed in the sections immediately following.

§ 395. — Supreme Court

The supreme court of Minnesota has original jurisdiction in certain cases and appellate jurisdiction in all cases, both in law and equity.

Under the Minnesota constitution the supreme court has original jurisdiction in such remedial cases as may be prescribed by law,⁵ and appellate jurisdiction in all cases, both in law and equity,⁶ but there can be no trial by jury in such court.⁷ Under a statute conferring jurisdiction, it has power to issue such writs and processes as may be necessary to the execution of the laws and the furtherance of justice,⁸ including writs of mandamus,⁹ certiorari,¹⁰ prohibition,¹¹ and quo warranto.¹² The court also has, by virtue of statu-

Appeal from probate court

(1) Where litigation instituted in probate court is taken by appeal or certification to circuit court, that court exercises appellate jurisdiction only and is restricted to issues presented by reasons assigned in support of appeal.—In re McLouth's Estate, 287 N.W. 477, 290 Mich. 311, certiorari granted U. S. v. Shaw, 60 S.Ct. 383.

(2) Under a statute providing that on appeal from the probate to the circuit court the latter shall proceed to trial according to the rules of law, and, if there be any question of fact it may be submitted to a jury does not contemplate a general trial or a general verdict, and the findings of the jury are to aid the court in determining questions that belong to its own equitable discretion.—Gott v. Culp, 7 N.W. 787, 45 Mich. 265.

(3) Upon an appeal from a probate court the circuit court is without authority to strike an amended claim from the certified record of the proceedings, but should remand the case for recertification. If the circuit court does strike such amended claim and dismisses the appeal, claimant is entitled to a reinstatement of the appeal. The claimant cannot submit to a nonsuit in the circuit court reserving a right to relitigate in the probate court.—In re Oberle's Estate, 270 N.W. 283, 278 Mich. 244.

1. Interference with discretion not permitted

Where probate judge, in requiring additional bond of executrix when present bond was shown to be insufficient, fixed sum in excess of that necessary reasonably to protect estate, but not so much so as to constitute abuse of discretion, circuit court had no jurisdiction under general supervisory control over inferior courts to interfere with exercise of discretion by probate judge.—In re Brant's Estate, 256 N.W. 855, 269 Mich. 201.

15 C.J. p 1077 note 4.

10. Necessity that public interest require issuance

(1) The supreme court will not entertain original jurisdiction in certiorari, except in cases where general public interest requires immediate determination.—State v. Schulz, 171 N.W. 263, 142 Minn. 112.

(2) Without some special emergency, supreme court will not issue writ of certiorari to review probate court's order denying application for extension of time to present claims in estate under administration, but will leave applicant to his remedy in district court, which may issue the writ in such cases.—State v. Probate Court of Hennepin County, 172 N.W. 210, 142 Minn. 499.

When writ may issue

§ 397. Mississippi

Decisions relating to the Mississippi supreme court, and to the appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts, are considered in §§ 398, 399 infra.

§ 398. — Supreme Court

Except for such quasi-original jurisdiction as is necessary to preserve the dignity and decorum of the court and to give full operation to its appellate powers, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction only. In a proper case it may give advisory opinions.

The supreme court of Mississippi has only appellate jurisdiction; it has no original jurisdiction,¹⁶ except such incidental jurisdiction of a quasi-original character as may be necessary to preserve its dignity and decorum and to give full and complete operation to its appellate powers.¹⁷ Accordingly the statutory authority to issue certain remedial writs can be invoked by the court only in aid of its appellate jurisdiction.¹⁸

Advisory opinions. Under a constitutional provision relating to the discharge of the duties of the office of governor upon the inability of the incumbent to act and providing that the judges of the supreme court shall give their opinion on certain doubtful questions arising under that section, the authority of the judges to answer questions is confined to those questions which relate to the discharge of the duties of the governor's office.¹⁹

§ 399. — Circuit Court

§ 400. Missouri

A statute which seeks to enlarge or restrict the jurisdiction of either the supreme court or the courts of appeals, in Missouri, in contravention of the constitution is invalid.

The jurisdiction of the supreme court of Missouri and of the courts of appeals is defined by the constitution of Missouri, and a statute which seeks to enlarge or restrict the jurisdiction of either in contravention of the constitution is invalid.²³

§ 401. — Supreme Court in General

The supreme court, except in cases otherwise directed by the constitution, has appellate jurisdiction only, which is limited to the classes of cases specified in the constitution. It has superintending control over all inferior courts, and power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, and other remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same. It also has superintending control over the courts of appeals by mandamus, prohibition, and certiorari.

Under the Constitution of Missouri, 1875, Article 6, § 2, the supreme court, except in cases otherwise directed by the constitution, has appellate jurisdiction only,²⁴ which is limited to the classes of cases specified in the constitution.²⁵ In accordance with Article VI § 12, the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction where the amount in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds a certain sum, see infra § 409; where the construction of the constitution of the United States, or of the state, is involved, see infra § 404; where the validity of a treaty,²⁶ or of a statute of the United States,²⁷ or of authority exercised under the United States²⁸ is

Determination of right to appeal

Where trial court found for defendant based upon the determination that it did not have jurisdiction over the cause, the determination by the supreme court of defendant's statutory right to appeal was held not to involve determination of jurisdiction of supreme court over the subject matter of the action requiring determination by that court of the case on its merits.—McClain v. Kansas City Bridge Co., 88 S.W.2d 1019, 338 Mo. 7, reversing, App., 83 S.W.2d 132.

Exercise of control

(1) Supreme court's power of general superintendence over inferior courts can be exercised only within its jurisdiction.—State ex rel. Allen v. Trimble, 10 S.W.2d 519, 321 Mo. 230.

(2) Its superintending control is exclusive as to causes within its appellate jurisdiction, and concurrent with courts of appeals in cases within latter courts' jurisdiction.—State ex rel. Duraflor Products Co. v. Percy, 29 S.W.2d 83, 325 Mo. 335.

Assumption of wrongful action of circuit court

Supreme court cannot assume wrongful action on part of circuit court or judge thereof.—State ex rel. and to Use of Public Service Commission v. Sevier, 106 S.W.2d 903, 341 Mo. 162.

15 C.J. p 1078 note 34.

Not limited by appellate jurisdiction

Supreme court's authority to issue mandamus is not limited by appellate jurisdiction.—State ex rel. and to use of Gorman v. Offutt, Mo., 9 S.W.2d 595.

Discretion of court

Issuance of alternative writ in mandamus proceedings before supreme court is discretionary.—State ex rel. Nolen v. Nelson, 275 S.W. 927, 310 Mo. 526.

Mandamus within jurisdiction of trial court

(1) It is only in cases of more than ordinary magnitude or importance that the supreme court will issue a writ of mandamus and will not refer the relator to the trial court.—State ex rel. Hopkins v. County Court of Cooper County, 64 Mo. 170—15 C.J. p 1078 note 34 [c].

(2) The supreme court will not entertain the writ where there are questions of fact to be tried.—State ex rel. Jamison v. Lesueur, 29 S.W. 278, 126 Mo. 413.

(3) Although the supreme court will not entertain jurisdiction of an original mandamus proceeding whose sole object, in the last analysis, is the contest of a local option election, or to order vel non the issuance of a dramshop license, yet where such point was interwoven with othto,³⁵ certiorari,³⁶ and other original remedial writs,³⁷ and to hear and determine the same.³⁸ However, the supreme court, under a rule of court, will usually refuse to issue any original remedial writ, with the exception of habeas corpus, over which a court of appeals has jurisdiction,³⁹ but where it does issue such a writ it will not quash it on the grounds that application could have been made to a court of appeals if respondent had notice of the application and failed to object.⁴⁰ Applicants for remedial writs must conform to the supreme court rules.⁴¹

Under Constitution, 1875, Article VIII § 9, and Revised Statutes, 1909, § 5951, the supreme court is entitled to determine an election contest for judge of the supreme court.⁴²

Superintending control over courts of appeals. Under the express provisions of Constitutional Amendment, 1884, Article VI § 8, supreme court has superintending control over courts of appeals⁴³ by mandamus,⁴⁴ and has superintending control er points presented, of which the courts had jurisdiction, it will proceed to determine it, so that there may be a complete disposition of the case.—State v. Carter, 165 S.W. 773, 257 Mo. 52.

Follows case to end

Where alternative writ of mandamus is once issued supreme court follows case to end.—State ex rel. General Motors Acceptance Corporation v. Brown, 48 S.W.2d 857, 330 Mo. 220—State ex rel. Nolen v. Nelson, 275 S.W. 927, 310 Mo. 526.

Imhoff, 238 S.W. 122, 291 Mo. 603.

15 C.J. p 1078 note 35.

Distribution of funds

Supreme court in quo warranto proceedings to prevent fire insurance companies from collecting increase in insurance rate denied by superintendent of insurance could not take charge of and distribute funds impounded in circuit court in review proceedings, representing such increase, as these funds were within circuit court's jurisdiction.—State ex inf. McKittrick v. American Colony Ins. Co., 80 S.W.2d 876, 336 Mo. 406.

15 C.J. p 1078 note 37.

Discretion of court

Granting or refusal of original writ of prohibition is discretionary with an appellate court.—State ex rel. City of St. Louis v. Sartorius, 102 S.W.2d 890, 340 Mo. 832.

Exclusive jurisdiction

The supreme court rather than the court of appeals has jurisdiction under the constitution of a writ of prohibition in cases where the supreme court would have exclusive appellate jurisdiction under the constitutional provisions.—State ex rel. Ghan v. Gideon, Mo.App., 119 S.W.2d 89.

38. Mo.—State ex inf. McKittrick v. Wymore, 119 S.W.2d 941, 119 A.L.R. 710.

15 C.J. p 1078 note 38.

Findings of fact by commissioner

A special commissioner's findings of fact are not binding on the supreme court in an original proceeding, but are persuasive.—In re Parkinson, Mo., 128 S.W.2d 1023.

39. Mo.—State ex rel. Douglas v. Tune, 200 S.W. 1062, 273 Mo. 355.

41. Mo.—State ex rel. Hurst Automatic Switch & Signal Co. v. Wurdemann, 250 S.W. 46.

Abstracts of record

(1) Supreme court rules requiring abstracts of record apply to original proceedings in supreme court as well as to cases coming to supreme court by appeal.—State ex rel. Dilliner v. Cummins, 92 S.W.2d 605, 338 Mo. 609.

(2) An alternative writ in original mandamus proceeding should be abstracted, but failure to abstract it does not require dismissal where respondent's pleading, which is properly abstracted, furnishes court all facts which an abstract of alternative writ would have given.—State ex rel. Dilliner v. Cummins, supra.

(3) So too a motion to quash preliminary writ and to dismiss petition for writ of prohibition on ground that abstract and brief do not comply with supreme court rules would be denied where question for decision was reasonably well presented in the brief, although abstract did not contain all that it should.—State ex rel. Hannigan v. Kirkwood, 114 S.W.2d 1026, 342 Mo. 242.

(4) Where the rule of court fixes the penalty at dismissal of proceedings for failure to serve a printed abstract of record, a respondent is not entitled to judgment for relator's failure.—State ex rel. Gentry v. Bray, 20 S.W.2d 56, 323 Mo. 562.

Waiver of delay

Relators, by obtaining leave to file reply brief after hearing, waived right to complain of delayed answering brief.—State ex rel. Bensberg v. Hartmann, 19 S.W.2d 637, 323 Mo. 171.

Requiring record to be sent up

Supreme court, in interest of uniformity of decisions, may, in exercise of supervising control, require record of cause decided by court of appeals to be sent up.—State ex rel. Union Biscuit Co. v. Becker, 293 S.W. 783, 316 Mo. 865, certiorari quashing Spina v. Union Biscuit Co., App., 273 S.W. 428.

Printed abstract of record

Under a rule of the supreme court of Missouri, relators, on certiorari to review a judgment of a court of appeals, are required to file and serve printed abstract of record.—State ex rel. Paine v. Trimble, Mo., 290 S.W. 132, dismissing certiorari Peacock Productions v. Paine, 289 S.W. 341, 221 Mo.App. 377.

47. Mo.—State ex rel. Byrne v. Ellison, 199 S.W. 403, quashing certiorari Byrne v. News Corp., 190 S.W. 933, 195 Mo.App. 265.

Decision in same case

A court of appeals is bound by what the supreme court has said in the same case which was transferred by the supreme court to the court of appeals.—Dolin v. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., App., 112 S.W.2d 582, transferred 98 S.W.2d 681, 339 Mo. 618.

Supreme court decision subsequent to trial

If an opinion of court of appeals conflicted with supreme court opinion, fact that supreme court decision was rendered subsequent to trial of the case in which court of appeals rendered its opinion would not entitle court of appeals opinion to stand.—State ex rel. Terminal R. Ass'n of St. Louis v. Hostetter, 119 S.W.2d 208, 342 Mo. 859, quashing certiorari Brown v. Terminal R. Ass'n of St. Louis, App., 85 S.W.2d 226.

Court of appeals exceeding jurisdiction

Court of appeals in reaching its conclusion exceeds its jurisdiction if announcing any rule or principle of law conflicting with controlling decision of supreme court.—State ex rel. American Car & Foundry Co. v. Daues, 282 S.W. 389, 313 Mo. 681, quashing certiorari Cobb v. American Car & Foundry Co., App., 270 S.W. 398.

Must conflict with last previous ruling

On certiorari seeking to have quashed judgment of court of appeals on ground that it conflicts with supreme court decisions, the question is not whether a conflict exists as to a particular decision, but as to whether one exists with reference to the last previous ruling of the supreme court.—State ex rel. Henry v. Allen, Mo., 263 S.W. 190, quashing certiorari State v. Henry, App., 256 S.W. 523.

Duty of supreme court to quash

Although the court of appeals is obliged to follow the last ruling of the supreme court, the supreme court is not required, under constitution, to quash opinion of court of appeals correctly declaring law, although in conflict with erroneous decision of supreme court.—State ex rel. Woodson v. Trimble, Mo., 287 S.W. 626, quashing certiorari Woodson v. Leogrunwald Vinegar Co., 272 S.W. 1084, 220 Mo.App. 831.

Assignment of errors

Assignment of errors has no place in original proceeding by certiorari to quash opinion and judgment of court of appeals as in conflict with supreme court opinion.—State ex rel. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Allen, 267 S.W. 379, 305 Mo. 607, quashing certiorari Howell v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., App., 253 S.W. 411.

Necessity for discussion in court of appeals

Where court of appeals' disposition necessarily involves holding in conflict with supreme court's decisions establishing rule, it is immaterial that rule was not discussed.—State ex rel. Gordon v. Trimble, 300 S.W. 475, 318 Mo. 341.

All conflicts determined

On certiorari, all conflicts between decision of court of appeals and decisions of supreme court should be determined whether suggested by relator or respondent, or discovered by the court.—State ex rel. Shawhan v. Ellison, 200 S.W. 1042, 273 Mo. 218, quashing certiorari Shawhan v. Shawhan Distillery Co., 197 S.W. 369, 195 Mo.App. 445.

Construction of statute

(1) Supreme court cannot interfere with construction of a statute by a court of appeals unless the supreme court has previously given a different construction to the statute.—State ex rel. Wors v. Hostetter, Mo., 124 S.W.2d 1073, quashing certiorari Wors v. Tarlton, App., 95 S.W.2d 1199—State ex rel. Clark v. Shain, Mo., 119 S.W.2d 971, quashing certiorari State ex rel. Clark v. National Surety Co., App., 82 S.W.2d 616, and In re Parker's Trust Estate, 67 S.W.2d 114, 228 Mo.App. 400—State ex rel. Superior Mineral Co. v. Sturgis, 203 S.W. 453, 276 Mo. 579—Majestic Mfg. Co. v. Reynolds, Mo., 186 S.W. 1072.

(2) Where the meaning of a statute is debatable, supreme court cannot, on certiorari, overturn construction of a court of appeals merely because it violates some general canon of construction recognized in supreme court's decisions, but where a statute plainly can have only one meaning under canons of construction established by the supreme court, and a court of appeals gives it another meaning, supreme court may interfere on certiorari because the necessary effect of such erroneous holding is to violate such established canons.—State ex rel.

Wors v. Hostetter, Mo., 124 S.W.2d 1073, quashing certiorari Wors v. Tarlton, App., 95 S.W.2d 1199.

(3) If the construction of a statute by a court of appeals turns on its application to specific facts, supreme court must have construed statute differently with reference to the same or similar facts before it may interfere on certiorari.—State ex rel. Wors v. Hostetter, supra.

(4) In determining whether a decision of court of appeals in a compensation case contravenes decisions of the supreme court, decisions from other states in compensation cases cannot be considered.—State ex rel. Wors v. Hostetter, supra.

court decision,⁵⁵ but it is not necessary that the conflicting decisions be absolutely identical if both require an application of the same rule.⁵⁶ That the decision conflicts with other decisions of courts of appeals is not grounds for quashing it on certiorari.⁵⁷

Where a court of appeals has exercised jurisdiction or powers not vested in it the supreme court can quash the opinion without reference to any question of conflict.⁵⁸

§ 402. — Courts of Appeals in General

The courts of appeals have jurisdiction of all appeals except those in which the constitution confers jurisdiction on the supreme court, and within the limits of their jurisdiction they are courts of last resort. Their functions are mainly those of appellate tribunals, but they have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, quo warranto, mandamus, certiorari, and other original and remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same, and they have a superintending control over all inferior courts of record in the counties within their respective territorial jurisdictions.

Constitution, 1875, article VI § 12 originally established the St. Louis Court of Appeals and the amendment of 1884 article VI § 2 established the Kansas City court of appeals; article VI § 3 of the amendment authorized the general assembly to create an additional court of appeals, and pursuant to this authority, the legislature in 1909 established the Springfield court of appeals.⁵⁹ The courts of appeals have general appellate jurisdiction, that is to say, they have jurisdiction of all appeals except those in which the jurisdiction is conferred by the constitution on the supreme court,⁶⁰ and, when

Matters not in opinion

Scope of review on certiorari to declare majority opinion of court of appeals void for want of jurisdiction because in conflict with ruling of supreme court, does not embrace consideration of record of case further than set forth in opinion.—State ex rel. Wahl v. Reynolds, 199 S.W. 978, 272 Mo. 588, quashing certiorari Flack v. Wahl, 193 S.W. 56, 197 Mo. App. 10.

Business Men's Assur. Co. v. Allen, 259 S.W. 77, 302 Mo. 525, quashing certiorari Melville v. Business Men's Acc. Assur. Co., App., 253 S.W. 68.

"Conflict of decision"

There is a "conflict of decision" between a decision of the court of civil appeals and of the supreme court so as to justify certiorari to review a decision of the court of appeals because of a "conflict of decision," where an opinion of the court of appeals rules differently from the supreme court's ruling as to the legal effect of the same or substantially similar facts or contravenes a general principle of law stated in decisions of the supreme court.—State ex rel. and to Use of Heuring v. Allen, 112 S.W.2d 843, 342 Mo. 81, quashing opinion and record Heuring v. Central States Life Ins. Co. of St. Louis, 87 S.W.2d 661, 230 Mo.App. 42.

Certification assumed if conflict exists

On certiorari to review decision of court of appeals, it will be assumed that such court, if its decision was out of harmony with decision of another court of appeals, would on its own motion have certified case to supreme court.—State ex rel. Harriman v. Reynolds, 200 S.W. 296, 273 Mo. 131, quashing certiorari Harriman v. Sayman, 193 S.W. 1001, 197 Mo.App. 208.

acting within their jurisdictional limits, as long as they promulgate no rule of law conflicting with former controlling decisions of the supreme court, they are courts of last resort and have the inherent right to determine issues involved whether their rulings be right or wrong.⁶¹ The several courts of appeals have exclusive jurisdiction of such appeals taken within the territorial limits of their respective districts.⁶² In cases which fall within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, the courts of appeals are without jurisdiction,⁶³ and no act of the parties either by agreement or estoppel can confer jurisdiction.⁶⁴ The court has in any case the power to determine whether an appeal brought before it does, or does not, relate to such matters, or involve such questions, as to exclude its jurisdiction.⁶⁵

Under Constitution, 1875, article VI § 12, courts of appeals have power to issue writs of habeas corpus,⁶⁶ quo warranto,⁶⁷ and mandamus,⁶⁸ and

Jurisdiction not affirmatively shown

An appeal which does not affirmatively appear as falling within class of which supreme court has jurisdiction lies as matter of course to court of appeals of the district in which the cause was tried.—City of Doniphan v. Cantley, 50 S.W.2d 658, 330 Mo. 639, transferred, see, App., 52 S.W.2d 417.

Injunction cases

Where none of the specific grounds for jurisdiction of the supreme court is present, courts of appeals have appellate jurisdiction in injunction cases, whether injunction be granted or denied.—Mitchell v. Dabney, 58 S.W.2d 731, 332 Mo. 410, transferred, see, App., 71 S.W.2d 165—*Local Union No. 66 of United Leather Workers' International Union v.
